A Confirmed Truant.

Patrick Finnerty, the thirteen-year old son of Michael Finnerty, was taken to Elizabeth this morning to be arraigned in the juvenile court. Patrick is charged by the school authorities of continual truency. He has been up before Judge DeMeza in the city court five times in as many weeks and according to his father is incorrigible. It is said that the boy has no visious habits, but has a determined aversion to school.

Judge Clarence E. Case, who presided in the juvenile court this morning in place of Judge Atwater, sentenced young Finnerty to Jamesburg.

Overturned Lamp Starts Fire.

An overturned lamp caused a slight fire at the home of George W. Gary, of Church street, at 8:15 last night. A table cloth and part of the carpet in the sitting room were set ablaze but soon extinguished. An alarm was sent in from box 15 but the firemen had nothing to do on their arrival. The damage is about $10.

Entertained Her Class.

Mrs. Henry S. Phillips, of 62 Duer street, a teacher of music gave a reception to her class of about fifteen young girls at her home Saturday afternoon. An informal program of music was rendered and refreshments were served.

DR. DUBOIS TALKS FIRST AID TO INJURED

Dr. F. E. DuBois addressed the "first aid to the injured" class at the Y. W. C. A., yesterday afternoon on the topic of "Common Emergencies," covering foreign bodies in the eye, ear, throat and nose; bites stings, poisons, from plants and animals, swallowing poisons, what to do when clothing takes fire, etc.

The doctor told in detail what to do in case of accident, explaining that the nature of the accident should be determined, the patient should be kept as quiet as possible and there should be emergency supplies on hand to meet first aid demands. He also explained all kinds of poisons, the antidotes for the same, giving a list of the best things to have on hand in the home medicine chest.

Dr. DuBois also gave interesting information as to the care of the ear, nose, eyes and throat. He explained the difference in burns, first and second degrees and blisters, telling which were the most serious. His talk describing what to do in case of electric shock, ivy, mosquito and mushroom poisons, snake bites and how to distinguish the most dangerous snakes and what to do in cases of hydrophobia.

Miss Josephine Hughes, superintendent of Muhlenberg Hospital, with a corps of nurses to be used for demonstration, will give a lecture at the Y. W. C. A., tomorrow evening and again on Tuesday evening of next week on "How to Care for the Sick Room."

10TH ANNIVERSARY OF K.G.E. CASTLE

The tenth anniversary of Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, was celebrated last night, in the castle rooms in the Babcock building, the affair being attended by between 500 and 600 members and friends of the castle. The program arranged by the committee was more or less of an informal character, the greater part of the evening being devoted to dancing, music for which was furnished by Allen Squiers, B. A. Paroubek and Whitney Frazee.

During the forepart of the evening professional talent entertained with musical selections and monologues, after which John B. Triebler, of Philadelphia, supreme master of records, made an excellent address, in which he dwelt upon the principles of the order, asserting how it has grown during the past few years until now it is one of the strongest and best in the country. Mr. Triebler is an entertaining speaker and his remarks were listened to with great interest.

Freedom Castle was instituted on February 27, 1901, by Grand Chief Arthur H. Hope, of Asbury Park, and the initiatory work was done by the team from the Asbury Park Castle one of the best in the State. The local castle membership is made up of hustlers led by Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan, who has taken an unusual interest in the growth of the organization. The present membership is 235. David Weiss is now noble chief.

During the past ten years the castle has lost seven members by death and twenty-five or thirty through removal or suspension. There has been paid out in that time $2,000 in sick benefits and the castle has paid into the State order death benefit fund about $4,000, of which amount about $2,200 has been returned to meet the claims for the seven deaths. The castle also has about $2,000 in invested funds. The castle's paraphernalia, considered the finest in the State, is valued at about $1,200, the robes, which are very elaborate, costing about $700.

Last night's affair was in charge of a committee of which Casper Waglow was chairman. Others who assisted were H. B. Joseph, Joseph Randall and Arthur Groff.

Consoli in More Trouble.

John Consoli, the Somerset street merchant, who claims immunity from prosecution for selling on Sunday because of his membership in the Seventh-Day Baptist church, was arraigned before City Judge William G. DeMeza, this morning charged with permitting gambling in his store. He was held under $200 bonds for his appearance next Wednesday morning. He pleaded not guilty through his counsel, John Owens.

Pastor's Charm Lost.

Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, is mourning the loss of a watch charm, a masonic design, which was a gift from his wife. He lost it yesterday morning somewhere in the neighborhood of North and Park avenues.

A CALL TO ARMS

Volunteers Wanted for White Plague „Year and Day„ Campaign.

WILL YOU AID THIS CAUSE?

Dollar Army to Forage for the Plainfield Anti-Tuberculosis Society —The Plan Outlined.

The Plainfield Anti-Tuberculosis Society is in need of funds with which to defray the running expenses of its pavilion.

At the request of the society's president, William S. Tyler, The Daily Press has agreed to assist in raising some money. As a means of doing this, "The Year and a Day" plan will be called into service. Here it is:

This paper will represent the year. It will be the secretary of war and will direct the campaign for funds. Twelve generals, representing the twelve months will be the field officers. They will be in absolute command of their own forces and will have entire charge of the battle so far as their own divisions of the army are concerned.

Each of these generals will appoint four colonels, representing the four weeks of their general's month. On each of these will devolve the duty of appointing seven captains, representing the seven days of the week.

The secretary of war has contributed one dollar and it is up to the generals to forage for one dollars. To begin with each general will give one dollar which will be booty of war and will ask each colonel to contribute a like amount and moreover each colonel will see that each captain donates a similar amount. When the general sees to it that his four colonels and his seven captains have each performed this duty, his work is done.

It's a call to arms! Who will volunteer to act as generals? Will you be one of twelve to take up this work for a most deserving charity? If so, kindly telephone or write to the anti-white plague secretary of war, care of this paper. Do it now!

CONCERT WAS GIVEN FOR ITALIAN MISSION

A most enjoyable entertainment was given in Y. M. C. A. Hall last evening for the benefit of the Italian missions of which Rev. Theodore Boretty is pastor. The hall was packed to the doors and a splendid program of music was rendered. During the intermission home-made candy was sold among the audience, but there was not enough to go around, the supply being exhausted before those in the galleries had a chance to sample the sweets. The financial returne must have been large. The concert was given under the direction of a committee composed of F. A. Duttenhofer, F. T. Dickenson, Rev. Lewis Bond, J. H. Manning, J. C. Allen, W. J. Hamilton, Clifford A. Braider and Martin A. Kroff.

Several of the Italian young men connected with the mission played and sang and were the recipient of much applause. Those who had prepared encore pieces responded to the demands of the audience, but those who had not were compelled to acknowledge their thanks by repeated bows. An orchestra under the direction of Mr. Korff opened the program with march and overture, followed by bass solos by Donald McKay. F. Taranta, P. Olixo, E. Venga and E. Phillips, rendered mandolin selections and songs. Roy Titsworth, a youthful baritone, sang sweetly "My Love is Like the Rose" and for an encore gave "Adam's Lesson." Mr. Titsworth is the possessor of a highly cultured voice not yet matured which will eventually bring favorable notice among baritones if properly cared for. He was especially pleasing in his rendition of "I Love You," an encore given in the second part of the program. Mr. Braider was an inimitable accompanist.

A. A. Farland won the hearts of his audience with real music from a banjo. It would seem as though this eminent banjoist excelled himself in the selections of last evening and was forced to bow his acknowledgements, although he did not respond to the evident wish of the audience for an encore. Mr. McKay sang again in the second part and received another encore. The work of the orchestra under Mr. Korff's direction was pleasing.

The Dutch Arms Reformed Club, of Netherwood, will hold an important meeting tomorrow night at 8 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Noel, of Netherwood and Midway avenues.

IN CAFE CHANTANT

Parisian Restaurant Reproduced With all its Fine Effects.

FOR ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH.

A Well Balanced Program is Presented as the Crowd Enjoys Good Things at the Tables.

It would have been an impossibility to have squeezed many more people in the ball room of Truell Hall last evening when the first number of the program in the Cafe Chantant began. Society was largely represented and the financial returns must have gladdened the hearts of the committee of St. Stephen's church.

The entertainment was given for the benefit of the growing parish of St. Stephen's and it is said the net returns will easily reach $250. When Rev. Morgan Ashley, former rector of the church, arose to sing he was given an ovation. He sang with his usual grace and effectiveness and was repeatedly encored.

The entire program was one to incite admiration. The dancing of Miss Lillian Roberts; the "Looking Backward" drill by the Misses Helen Woolley, Jessie Stewart, Millwood Lutz and Helen Pitt, was a spectacle to be remembered. Mrs. Robert L. Hecht sang a group of three songs very acceptably while Mrs. Violet Truell Johnson and Ernest Schultz played delightfully two violin duets. E. E. Ironmonger pleased the large audience in his monologue "Behind the Curtain," and an operatic sketch entitled "The Gypsy Maid," was heartily applauded.

Andrew A. Smith, humorist and Miss Winifred Marshall in a pair of songs from "Miss Hook from Holland," completed a splendid program. The encores were generously responded to and the Van Eps Brothers had a hard time satisfying the lover of banjo music. The first number on the program, "Czardas," a piano solo by Miss Gertrude Grout, brought the player round after round of applause. Miss Grout is a graduate of Oberlin Conservatory and her good work was emphasized in the accompaniments so splendidly played for the other performers.

A committee of women members of St. Stephen's had the affair in charge with Mrs. L. J. Geary as chairman. Mrs. H. K. Tetsuka had charge of the waitresses. Those who assisted were Mrs. J. W. Carlisle, kitchen; Mrs. Sidney S. Schuyler, candy; Miss Marion Hall, flowers; and Miss McCabe, of Boston, assistant to Mrs. Schuyler.

HARRY THAIN WEDS MISS JANIE PACEY

Miss Janie Pacey, of Truro, N. S., and Harry Thain, of this city, formerly of London, England, were quietly married last night at the parsonage of Grace M. E. church. The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock by Rev. O. J. Shoop with only the necessary witnesses in attendance. Following a wedding trip of a week or ten days, the young couple will make their home in a new house recently built and furnished by the groom on Everitt place.

While the bride has been a resident of the city only a short time she has many local friends. She is a sister to Mrs. Christopher Stahl, of Maple avenue, and Mrs. Milton Miller, of Everitt place. Mr. Thain is a brother to Mrs. Charles Stahl, of Somerset street. He is a mason by trade and is employed by a local contractor.

Mr. and Mrs. Thain will give a reception shortly after they return home.

Knights of Columbus Growing.

Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, conferred the first degree on a class of twenty last night. There is now a class of forty-five upon which will be conferred the second degree on March 28 and the third degree on April 23. On Friday evening the Columbus Club met and elected Arthur A. Cannon faitcful navigator. Monday night ten candidates from the club received the fourth degree at Jersey City together with 175 other candidates from various parts of the State.

Missionary Meeting.

The Women's Foreign Misionary Society of the Monroe Avenue church held a meeting at the home of Mrs. Robert L. Lee, of West Sixth street, yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Corbeth, the district secretary, made an interesting address on the work in the district, and several solos were rendered by Mrs. E. D. Young. Refreshments were served in conclusion.

LENT HAS BEGUN

Roman Catholics and Episcopalians Observe Ash-Wednesday Today.

ATTEND PRESCRIBED SERVICES.

Meaning of the Forty Days Fasting and Prayer—Regulations Issued by Bishop O'Conner, of Newark Diocese.

Tonight in Grace Episcopal church Right Rev. Ethelbert Talbot, Bishop of Central Pennsylvania, will preach the sermon. Bishop Talbot is recognized as one of the most eloquent and forceful speakers among the prelate in the American House of Bishops, and it is likely that the edifice will be filled to hear the eminent theologian.

Ash-Wednesday, the first day of Lent, is so named from the solemn ceremony which for many years was performed upon it. It was an old custom in the Church on Palm Sunday to bless and distribute palm or other branches which were then carried in procession in memory of the entrance of the Lord in triumph into Jerusalem the fifth day before He was crucified. These palms or branches were taken home and kept safely until the beginning of next Lent when they were brought to the church and burnt. The ashes were formerly cast upon the heads of penitents only, but in later times they were thrown upon the people generally in the form of a cross as they knelt at their devotions in the churches, while the priests repeated the words: "Remember, man, that thou art dust and to dust thou shalt return."

The day was added to Lent about the time of Gregory II, A. D. 715-732 in order to make the then 36 days of Lent become 40 days. Thus the ceremony which gave Ash-Wednesday its name is not so very ancient. In the English church this ceremony was discontinued at the Reformation and the Comminnation office took its place. Its observance is practically confined to the Episcopal and Roman Catholic churches.

Other services will be held this evening in the Church of the Holy Cross, St. Stephen's and the Church of the Heavenly Rest.

TAILOR SHOP BLAZE CAUSES SMALL LOSS

A wooden box filled with paper and woollen cuttings in the tailoring shop of Howard Cobbs, at 146 East Fifth street, caught fire in some way shortly after 11 o'clock last night. When the flames were first discovered by a passing citizen one end of the place was ablaze. A telephone alarm was sent to fire headquarters and shortly after John Nelson, who occupies an apartment above the shop, was aroused by the smoke and ran in his bare feet all the way to Third street and Watchung avenue to pull box 21. If he had only known it, he could have saved two-thirds of the distance by going to box 23 at Sixth and Watchung.

The firemen found on their arrival that the blaze had worked its way into a partition and along the wooden ceiling. It was fairly easy to get at after the exact location had been determined and was soon put out. Two tanks of the chemical engine did the trick.

The building has two stores on the ground floor and two apartments above. Nelson's family occupies one and a family named McKinley has the other. There are four children in the latter's and all were asleep when the alarms were first given. Two of the youngsters were carried out by the firemen and the parents looked after the others. They were in no immediate danger, but might have got into trouble by trying to get out alone.

The building is owned by Ernest D. Barrett, of New York, and suffered a damage of $200. Cobb's loss is $100, mostly on fixtures and working materials. The clothing belonging to customers was out of harm's way. The loss in both cases is covered by insurance.

Entertained Bible Class.

The missionary study class on India at the Y. W. C. A. entertained the Bible class at the association, Monday evening. Those who presented the program were Miss Clara Howard, Miss Helen Boyd, Miss Sarah Boyd, Miss Harriet Mattison, Miss Isabel Scarborough and Miss Frescolm. The mision study class will study China during the next period.

Sesame to Meet.

The Sesame Club met this morning at the residence of Mrs. W. H. P. Veysey, 812 Park avenue.

AUBREY WEIGHTMAN IS MARRIED AGAIN

Aubrey H. Weightman and Miss Lucy Haddock Carstairs, both of Philadelphia, were quietly married yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. James Carstairs, 1018 Spruce street, Philadelphia. Rev. John Archibald McCallum, a Presbyterian minister of Philadelphia, read the ceremony, which was followed by a small breakfast for the immediate family of the bride and groom.

Mr. Weightman is well-known here, having lived for sometime in this city. Several years ago he married Miss Fanny Cox, daughter of Mrs. Rowland Cox, of West Seventh street. She died a couple of years ago, while spending the summer with her husband in Rhode Island. The wedding was one of the most brilliant of the year, being attended by well-known society folk from Philadelphia, New York and other distant points. Frequently during their married life the couple visited the Cox home here, and after Mrs. Weightman's death, Mr. Weightman made his home here for some time. His first wife died about three years ago.

Mr. Weightman is a grandson of the late William Weightman, of Philadelphia, and is a member of the Rittenhouse, Merion Cricket and Philadelphia Country Clubs and of the Colonial Society of Pennsylvania. He is very wealthy in his own right and also inherited a vast sum from the Weightman millions. Mr. and Mrs. Weightman will reside at 1915 Walnut street, Philadelphia, after an extended journey.

HER HUSBAND BLIND, SHE'S BREAD WINNER

Industry or Ambition is the synonym for Alexander, or, at least it was when he of the Great name was conquering things and countries and wanted more. And speaking of Alexander—there is an old one in Plainfield, who while lacking in almost anything that made the other fellow great still retains some qualities which go to make up greatness. The only difference is that this Alexander is a Mrs. and she is colored. But ambition! Nothing of the kind ever threw itself into the spotlight with greater self abnegation than the subject under discussion.

"Why yes. I have been teaching some of my older acquaintances how to read and write for some time and I take great pleasure in it." declared Mrs. Alexander. "You see, there are a number of colored folks mostly grown ups, who cannot read nor write and when it comes to figuring they are lost. My husband, who was a preacher, is blind and as I have a big family I thought I would put to use the knowledge I have by helping to educate others of my race. And, truth to tell, I have succeeded in gathering quite a number of pupils all of whom are eager to learn the rudiments of an education which was denied them in their childhood.

"I charge them 10 cents an evening each and I have about twenty-five who come more or less regularly and I tell you it is worth while. At first I found it rather difficult to bring those whom I wanted to reach to realize the necessity for some sort of an education, especially in these times of high cost of living. I know what it costs me to feed the five mouths in my home and I know, too, that some of the people did not know how much they were paying for their grub and clothing. All they knew was that at the end of the month they had nothing left and perhaps were in debt. So I tried to bring these things home to them by the simple expedient of teaching the three R's and I believe I am doing work that others cannot do.

"The income is not great considering the outlay of trouble, but I feel recompensed with seeing material progress made by my pupils."

Mrs. Alexander is a resident of Plainfield avenue and is certainly "making good among her clientele." Her husband is totally blind, but in all the adversity encountered in the bringing up of a large family and the handicap of a husband who cannot help out, she is a courageous figure which many may copy without fear of censure or condemnation.

Held a Box Sociable.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Temple Baptist church held a box social last night at the home of Charles Griffin, 408 East Fifth street. The women brought boxes of lunch which were bought by the men and then all sat down to a repast. The sale of the boxes netted $16 for the benefit of the society.

Miss Otillia Dental and Miss Helen Vogel, of Trenton, are guests of Mrs. Irving C. Cubberley, of 47 Pearl street, North Plainfield.

WATER PROBE COST

Woolston Estimates That Over $10,000 Has Already Been Expended.

HIS FIGURES INTERESTING.

Asserts That Taxpayers are Threatened With Loss of Vast Sum by Contemplated Condemnation Proceedings.

Lemuel B. Woolston, who has taken a deep interest in the water supply controversy, has compiled figures which will prove startling to many taxpayers who have but casually observed the progress of the agitation for a municipally owned plant. Some well informed ones declare that condemnation proceedings, as contemplated, will cost the city possibly $50,000. That will be the expense, it is asserted, before the municipality pays one dollar for the plant should it decide to purchase through the courts. Already, according to Mr. Woolston's figures over $10,000 has been expended.

Mr. Woolston's interesting letter follows:

Editor, The Daily Press:

The following seems to be a statement, at least approximately correct, of the account between the Common Council and the taxpayers of Plainfield in the matter of "investigating" the water question.

The taxpayers:

To committees, experts and others Dr.

To amount appropriated and expended by committee of twenty-five citizens who flourished during the years 1906-7-8, $2,500.

Cash appropriated and paid to James H. Fuertes, $5,000.

Cash appropriated for printing, $300

Incidentals (estimated), $600.

Five special elections (estimated), $2,000.

Total, $10,400.

Be ides these items already paid out the taxpayers are threatened with a loss estimated at from $20,000 to $50,000 in a futile effort to condemn the property and franchises of the water company.

There is another item that cannot as yet be estimated in dollars and cents, namely, the value of the proposition made by the water company to the city to supply the city with water for thirty years at moderate rates and to give to Plainfield a preference to the water supply at Netherwood, as far as it is physically and legally possible to do so, which was lost by the hasty action of a special committee of the Common Council, acting against the judgment and advice of many of our wisest citizens and largest taxpayers.

L. B. WOOLSTON.

STOLE MONEY FROM SECRETARY'S DESK.

Fourteen dollars in money was stolen from the desk of Miss Tapping, secretary of the Young Women's Christian Association, some time between midnight on Monday and yesterday morning at 5 o'clock. There is considerable mystery surrounding the robbery owing to the fact that the key to the desk in which the money was locked was in a secret place known only to a few of the employes of the association.

The police department have taken the investigation up and it is hoped that they will be able to find out who stole the money and recover it. Most of the money taken was in small bills and change, and it is believed that the thief knew of the location of the key as well as the fact that there was a sum of money in the desk. Nothing else in the secretary's room was disturbed.

It was said that on the day before or on Saturday night, someone had entered the cellar of the association building and stolen part of the coal stored there, but this robbery was not confirmed.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL.

Health is Worth Saving, and Some Plainfield People Know How to Save It.

Many Plainfield people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Sick kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health, but there is no need to suffer nor to remain in danger when most all diseases and aches and pains due to weak kidneys can be quickly relieved by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. Here is the statement of a Plainfield citizen who has reclaimed good health by the use of this remedy:

Mrs. Margaret Reville, 732 West Third street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "For a long time I was troubled by lame and weak back and I never found anything that would help me until I got Doan's Kidney Pills from Randolph's Drug Store. My back was so painful and sore that I dreaded to stoop and whenever I caught cold or exerted myself, I suffered more severely. I tried several kidney remedies but it was left for Doan's Kidney Pills, which I obtained from Randolph's Drug Store to cure me. They are certainly a most effective preparation for kidney trouble."

LAWMAKERS PRAISE SENATOR JOHN KEAN

Before Senator Kean completes his term of office and lays aside the toga Friday night, he will receive from the Republican members of the New Jersey Legislature a series of resolutions designed to heal the smart of any wounds which may attend his severance from the dignities of official position.

There was shipped to Senator Kean from the State house at Trenton Monday night a beautifully engrossed series of resolutions, handsomely framed, and bearing the autograph signature of every Republican member of the House and Senate. It is set forth that the resolutions were adopted in approval of "the ability and faithfulness of Hon. John Kean, while serving as Senator in Congress."

Here are the resolutions:

"Whereas, during the past twelve year the State of New Jersey has fortunately had as one of its representatives in the United States Senate the Honorable John Kean, who has served the State and nation with an ability and faithfulness concurring with the highest traditions of statesmanship;

"And, whereas, Senator Kean has always appreciated the responsibility to the people by using his powers constructively to the end that the prosperity of the country shall be maintained and not impaired; for, while legislation cannot create, it may destroy enterprise, including the welfare of both employer and employe, a fact accurately recognized by Senator Kean during his entire legislative career;

"Therefore, be it resolved, That we heartily congratulate Senator Kean on the active, cautious and affirmative part which he has taken respecting the national legislation of recent years, and also because the industries of New Jersey have been expanding and prospering to the great benefit of the people of the State; and that by neither word nor act has he ever done anything to retard that growth;

"And be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be engrossed and forwarded to Senator Kean with our personal good wishes for his continued health and happiness, and that we may have the advantage of his advice and experience for many years to come."

The resolutions were drafted by President Ackerman, Senator Nichols and Assemblyman McCran, minority leader of the House.

EACH INHABITANT BANKED $185.65

The annual report of Banking and Insurance Commissioner Vivian M. Lewis shows that for each inhabitant of the State there were $185.65 on deposit in the various nafincial institutions of New Jersey at the close of last year. Notwithstanding this indication of prosperity the gains in resources and deposits of domestic banking institutions are much below the average of recent years, and exhibit a marked falling off as compared with the results in 1909, during which year the resources increased nearly 12 per cent. and the deposits 13 per cent.

During the year 1910 the total resources increased only 3 per cent. and the deposits slightly above 2½ per cent. Mr. Lewis attributes this falling off in a large measure to curtailing of business operations and a decrease in the number of new enterprises. Although the rate of progress of former years have not been maintained, the institutions coming under the supervision of the banking department have shown a healthy growth fully commensurate with the business activities of the year.

Combining the figures compiled for the national banks in New Jersey by the comptroller of the currency with those of the State Banking Department, it is shown that the resources of the financial insitutions at the close of the year reached the enormous total of $613,108,690. Deposits amounted to $458,363,695, and capital to $40,576,950. Deposits of the State institution, comprising 25 savings banks, 85 trust companies and 19 State banks, amounted to $289,955,399, and those of the national banks to $168,408,296. The resources of the State institution aggregated $358,454,994, and those of the national banks $254,653,696.

The number of depositors in the savings banks and trust companies, as shown by the report was 706,864, an increase of 43,068 for the year. Depositors in savings banks aggregated 302,964, an increase of 8,858, and those in trust companies, 392,900, an increase of 35,210. The average amount of each account in the savings banks was $547.32, an increase of $7.51 over the preceding year. The number of accounts opened or reopened in the savings banks was 50,453, a decrease of 54, and the number of accounts closed, 41,407, an increase of 720.

BASEBALL.

"I see," said Clarke Griffith—at least Clarke is credited with saying it—"that the scientists have traced the game back to ancient Egypt."

"That right?" queried big Larry McLean. "I thought it started in 1842 in New York.'

"Nope," said Griff. "It merely came to life. The inscriptions on the pyramids of Sesostris prove baseball was played 4,500 years ago, and that the championship of the Egyptian for 2673 B. C. was settled by a five-game series between Memphis and Cairo.'

"Ah, come on, Clarke; what d'you think I am? Memphis is in the Southern League and Cairo's in the Kitty. They ain't even in the same circuit and never was."

And Clarke Griffith fell into the handiest chair with a moan that caused a scurrying among the bell hops for restoratives.

Clarence "Lefty" Russell, who is said to have cost Connie Mack $12,000, signed his 1911 contract yesterday and that leaves only Jack Coombs to use the pen and ink to complete the Athletics' roster. Manager Mack announced that the regulars would depart from North Philadelphia Station Wednesday evening at 7:15, bound for Hot Springs, Ark., and the Yanigans would start for Savannah, Ga., Saturday afternoon at 1:15. According to Russell, he never was a holdout. He had been in Baltimore all winter and his contract had been sent to Hagerstown, Md., his home, and he did not receive it until recently.

He declared he hoped the fans would appreciate the fact that he is a recruit with plenty to learn and he did not expect to receive a star's wage until he had made good. Manager Mack said he had heard from Jack Coombs, who would be in Philadelphia Wednesday morning and would sign his contract then.

Pitcher Sam Frock, who is well known in Eastern League circles, settled his differences with the Boston National League Club yesterday, and penned his signature at the bottom of a contract. During the recent National League meeting in New York there was a rumor about that waivers had been asked on Frock, but little credence was put on this, it being the belief that it was only a ruse by Boston to get Frock to sign at the amount first named by Tenney. The salary which Tenney placed in the first contract sent to Frock was far below what the local man thought he should command, and he lost but little time returning the official papers.

With the signing of Earl Moore, pitcher, to a contract for three years, yesterday, Manager Dooin has all his players, young and old, in line and ready to start South this afternoon. The players who leave from Philadelphia will ride on a special coach leaving North Philadelphia station at 4:15 o'clock and arriving at Birmingham, Ala., tomorrow evening. Moore went to the Phillies' office yesterday afternoon and after a conference with President Fogel, lasting an hour, it was announced that he had signed for three years.

Manager Jimmy Collins, of the Grays, dropped into Providence yesterday to make arrangements for putting up his players. According to the leader of the Grays, who will hold down third base this season, three catchers, Fitzgerald, Paterson and Rondeau, will be carried. Twirlers Lavender and Sline and Jack Phelan have not yet signed contracts, but each has written that his contract is satisfactory. The Grays have arranged for but three exhibition games.

Manager Hal Chase and a bunch of New York Yankees left yesterday for Hot Springs for a two weeks' session before going to Athens, Ga., for the regular training season. Chase says that if his team can get an even break in the first third of the season it will win the pennant.

Twenty-seven members of the Chicago American League Baseball Club last night left Chicago in a special train for Mineral Wells, Tex., to begin training for the 1911 season. After a few days of practice the squad will be divided into two teams, and each will play twenty-two exhibition games before returning to open the esason in Detroit on April 14.

GOLF.

Difference of opinion with regard to the rules are ever cropping up, and it is noticeable how often they occur in stroke competitions. Following is a sample of the problems which the St. Andrews rules committee is continually struggling with:

A stroke competition was held which extended over two consecutive days, thirty-six holes each day. New holes were made before play commenced on the first day and were not altered for the second day. There was a separate draw for each day. Two competitors, before starting in the competition on the second day approached on to the eighteenth green and holed out. Should they have been disqualified under stroke rule 4 (2)?

Answer.—No. Stroke rule 4 (2) refers primarily to stroke competitions which begin and end "on the day of the competition;" that this is the meaning of the rule is shown by the use of the definite article "the." When a competition is continued on two or more days competitors who practise on the second or following days cannot be deemed to have infringed stroke rule 4 (2), which refers to play before starting—i. e., before the player starts in the competition.

A and B were playing in a stroke competition on a course which has a local rule to the following effect: "If a ball lie on a putting green other than the one played to it must be lifted and dropped so that it shall not lie further than three club lengths from the margin of the green and not nearer the hole than before. No penalty. The green is defined by the railing which surrounds it. When playing to the relief greens the twenty-yard limit shall apply." A, in approaching, when within twenty yards of the pin, struck it, and B claimed that he had incurred a penalty of two strokes. A thought the local rule quoted exempted him from any penalty. Is A's view correct?

Answer.—The local rule only affects the particular purpose for which it was drawn up—viz., the lifting of a ball from the green other than that being played to. The local rule cannot be held to affect the definition of a putting green (see definition 10) or the application of stroke rule 13 (1).

For years this has been the universal favorite among discriminating people. There is as much difference between it and the "no-name" kind as there is between linen and cambric cloth. Prove it for yourself by comparison.

MORE POLICEMEN NEEDED.

It is not to be wondered that nine burglaries could be committeed in a single section of the city in one night when it is considered how insufficient is the protection afforded. No blame can rightly be attached to the police department for this unfortunate, inexcusable condition of affairs. In justice to the chief, it must be admitted that for years he has asked for more men in order that the city may be properly and efficiently patrolled at night. If he is not given the support he deserves, he can not be expected to give satisfactory police protection.

When all his men are on duty, the police chief has but sixteen at his command to cover the entire city. Think of it—sixteen men to patrol some fifty-two miles of thoroughfares! In the one section alone the "beat" is nine miles. That means that a single patrolman is expected to protect life, limb and property along nine miles of streets. Of course, it is impossible to expect that much of one man.

But conditions are much worse in other districts that might be named. In the section where the burglaries were committed last night, it is very seldom that a policeman sets his foot. If the taxpayers there see a "cop" once a week it is a rare occasion.

If we are to demand efficient service from the police chief we should provide him with what is needed in order that such service may be rendered.

There will be a business meeting of the W. C. T. U. at the rooms, 100 Madison avenue, tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

DRY CLEANING TALK

Number 2

WHAT IS DRY CLEANING?

Many people have erroneous ideas about what Dry Cleaning really is—believing that their clothes are actually cleaned dry—as if by magic method we pass our hands over the Garment and say "Presto!" It is clean.

Dry is a misnomer. "Chemical" cleaning would be a more intelligent name, but people might confuse "Chemical," thinking of acids, alkalies, etc., not used in Dry Cleaning.

The truth is we depend largely upon gasolene, naphtha, benzine—there's a difference—and other petroleum and coal tar products, for our cleansing bath instead of water as do the launderers.

The secret and successful operations in Dry Cleaning are learned only by hard experience and study, coupled with proper equipment. These are what enable us to do superior work.

We know our business thoroughly and are properly equipped in plant, collection and delivery.

PRUDENTIAL CO. TO DISTRIBUTE $2,500,000

That the stockholders are entitled in a distribution of a fund of $2,500,000, assigned to them as shareholders but withheld and labeled "contingency surplus," but that, on the other hand, the proposed division of a $20,000,000 surplus among deferred dividend policyholders is entirely valid as against the stockholders, was the decision yesterday at Newark, of Vice-Chancellor Howell in the Blanchard suit against the Prudential Insurance Company.

Relative to so much of the surplus as was assigned by the directorate at different periods to stockholders, but withheld as "contingency surplus," the vice-chancellor says in his written opinion:

"I do not see why the surplus cannot be divided among the stockholders to the extent of $2,500,000. A distribution of this amount would not, in my opinion, injuriously affect the company's actual assets or its credit as a sound financial institution, nor its current business."

Since the company's entire capital stock is only $2,000,000, the vice-chancellor's findings, if affirmed, will mean a dividend of 125 per cent. in addition to the usual annual dividend of ten per cent.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

The girls' basketball team will play the girls' team from the North Plainfield High on Friday afternoon at 3:40. The teams are evenly matched.

Two recitations were given in the school this morning at assembly by pupils in the public speaking course. Miss Edith Whitney recited "The Wonders of the Dawn" and Miss Hazel Wyatt rendered "The Agitator" by Wendell Phillips.

Elections were begun this morning for the staff of the Oracle, and will be continued tomorrow. So far the board of editors has been selected and consists of Miss Helen Wooley, Dixon Phillips, Felix Jangle and Burnet Doane. Frank Cullen has been elected business manager.

Dr. Norman H. Probasco lectured again this morning before the boys of the school. His topic embraced sexual hygiene and was listened to with much interest.

Carroll Takes Pledge.

Edward Carroll, of the West End, over-indulged in liquor yesterday afternoon and had to be taken care of by the police. This morning Judge DeMeza suspended sentence when Carroll promised to take the pledge for a year.

NO TEARY EYES.

When peeling onions peel from the bottom upwords and under the running cold water spigot. This will save the eyes from shedding tears and carry away all the odor that might arise or become attached to the fingers.

It is better than wearing a pair of cheap goggles and wearing rubber gloves on the hands to protect them from the strong odor.

If the peeling of potatoes, carrots or, in fact, any of the tubers, under running water there will be no fear of soiling the hands, but the work should be done over a strainer, so as to avert having any of the particles get into the drain pipe.

Candid Advice.

He was a great bore and was talking to a crowd about election. He said:

"Bunco is a god man; he is capable, honest, fearless and conscientious. He will make the very kind my life from drowning."

"Do you really want to see Bunco elected?" asked a solemn-faced old man.

"I do, indeed. I'd do anything to see him elected," said the bore.

"Then never let anybody know he saved your life," counseled the solemn-faced man.—Tit-Bits.

Its Real Value.

A representative of a western State at Washington, who does not value science except so far as it may be capable of utilitarian application, was lately looking at an invention by a mechanic, who explained its workings.

"Y-es," said the statesman, "but after all, what use will it ever be?"

"Why," said the expert, with a sly smile, "there's every probability, sir, that some day you'll be able to tax it."—Youth's Companion.

P. H. S. Gets a 'Licking.'

Hasbrouck Institute, of Jersey City, defeated the local High School basketball team yesterday afternoon at the Jersey City court by a score of 52 to 22. The local boys were outclassed, besides being given a rought deal, so it is said, by the referee. Hasbrouck lead in the rough work and maintained the lead, they obtained in the first half. Rickett, Clarke, Manley, Karr and Zerega played for Plainfield and Ricketts and Karr did splendid work for their team.

Shot at Postoffice Thieves.

Four men were detected in an attempt to rob the postoffice at Milltown early yesterday morning. They were fired on by Ellsworth Crenning and his nephew, William Crenning, Jr., who lives next door to the postoffice building, but escaped, although it is thought one of them was hit. The Crennings were awakened by a noise made by the horses in the barn, and discovered a light in the postoffice near the safe. Three men were seen standing near trees on either side and in front of the postoffice, and a fourth man was at work inside. The Crennings secured guns and fired six or seven times at the men. Then the men ran up Church street, one of them moving as if shot in the leg. Citizens, who were aroused by the report of the guns, joined in an effort to run down the thieves. The door of the postoffice had been forced open with a pickax and crowbar, and a blanket stolen from C. W. Kuhlthau was found near the safe. It is the third attempt to rob the office.

WESTFIELD COUNCIL PROBE NOW ON

That all orders for feed for the Westfield fire department were placed with Robert F. Hohenstein, member of Council, from the Second ward, of that city, and chairman of the fire committee, and that he divided the orders with Patrick Traynor, who was formerly a member of the Town Council, was one of the interesting facts brought out at an investigation of town affairs commenced Saturday night. The investigation is by a committee of Council. Hohenstein, it is alleged, is also getting $60 a month rent for premises occupied by the fire department during the erection of the new fire house. In the case of the feed, it is stated that when the money was paid to Hohenstein the warrant was indorsed by Traynor, and vice versa.

Councilman James G. Casey, of the Fourth ward, it is also said, sold the town a barrel of lime for $40. Former Councilman C. M. Affleck, of the First ward, it is charged, sold the town stationery, and even Rev. R. N. Middleditch, councilman from the Third ward, included through the discovery of a bill for a town flag which he sold the town at cost. Mr Middleditch attached the bill for the flag to his own bill. The committee will also look into the charges of the official newspaper for legal advertisements.

The committee was appointed by Mayor Dennis by direction of a resolution introduced by Rev. Mr. Middleditch. It consists of Rev. Mr. Middleditch, E. D. Floyd, R. P. DeCamp, H. W. Evans and A. A. Moser. The meeting of Saturday night was the first. Councilman Middleditch presided.

After telling of feed orders, Hohenstein told how he had bought a team in Newark for $625 and a single horse of the North Plainfield Fire Department for $250. When asked to explain the difference in time between when the horse from North Plainfield was put into the department stable and when it was paid for three months later by a warrant made out to the treasurer of the North Plainfield Fire Department and which bore his indorsement, he explained that the Council wanted the North Plainfield horse, but it was late in the year and there was no money to pay for it. In order to secure the horse for the department, he gave his personal note for the purchase price, to run three months. When the note became due a warrant was issued to the treasurer of North Plainfield. This the treasurer of the North Plainfield department indorsed to him, and he deposited to pay the note.

Another matter taken up was in relation to the temporary quarters now being occupied by the fire department while the new building is being erected. The witness is the owner of the building. When asked if he had received any rent for it, he replied that he had been paid $60 a month for the rent of the building through his agent, H. L. Abrams. When asked if he had presented a bill for the rent he replied that he had, and went on to explain that when the bill was presented to the Council the question was raised as to the legality of the bill and the transaction.

The members of the Council said that they were willing to pay him for the use of the building, but they did not want to do anything that would lay them individually liable for so doing. As the town attorney was not present at the meeting, the town clerk, Lloyd Thompson, who is also a lawyer, was called in to advise them. He informed the members of the Council that there was a way to pay Mr. Hohenstein without making themselves liable. Acting on the advice of Mr. Thompson, Councilman Middleditch tore up the bill for the rent of the building which he had presented, and the Council passed a resolution to pay the agent the amount without the presentation of a bill. Chairman Middleditch made no comment while the witness made this explanation.

TEACHERS' FUND HELD AS VALID.

The act establisheing the teachers' retirement fund was upheld by the Supreme Court yesterday as a constitutional and valid piece of legislation. The court declared that the provision that part of the salary of each teacher shall be deducted for the purpose of the fund is a part of the contract of employment and is not an exercise of the taxing powers of the State.

The decision, if sustained by the Court of Errors and Appeals, will firmly establish the fund as a permanent institution.

The conclusions were reached in the test cases instituted by Miss Myrtle Allen, a Passaic school teacher, to recover $54.16 as salary due her from the Board of Education, and from which two per cent. had been deducted for the retirement fund.

Going to California.

Mr. and Mrs. John McMurtry, of 22 Manning avenue, left today for Los Angeles, Cal., where they will reside in the future. There son, Raymond McMurtry, preceded them a month ago.

WALKING ACROSS CONTINENT.

Sergeant John Walsh Bears Letter From Mayor of New York to San Francisco's Executive.

New York.—Sergeant John Walsh, veteran cross continent pedestrian and man of many dangers, will foot to San Francisco from New York and return in an effort to break all transcontinental walking records.

Sergeant Walsh left the city hall on the afternoon of Jan. 5. He bore a note from Mayor Gaynor's secretary which he will present to the mayor of San Francisco. A missive from that executive will be borne back to New York.

This is the fourth transcontinental tramp the sergeant has made. The first one was undertaken in the early nineties, when, to demonstrate the fitness of the United States regulars for all kinds of traveling, he was sent from Fort Leavenworth, Kan., to Boston and thence to Mare Island, California, making the round trip in 110 days. His second transcontinental trip, in 1898, took him from coast to coast in ninety days.

His last trip was from Salt Lake City in 1909. He crossed the desert and the great divide in the dead of winter, enduring privation and suffering. He traveled part of the distance handicapped by a pistol wound. But he reached Portland, Me., on March 13, 1910, having traveled 3,600 miles in eighty-eight days.

Sergeant Walsh's present itinerary will take him through Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Cleveland, Toledo, Chicago, Clinton, Ia., Council Bluffs, Omaha, North Platte, Central City, Neb.; Cheyenne, Evanston, Ogden, Goldfield and Oakland.

SLEPT THIRTY-TWO YEARS.

Remarkable Experience of a Swedish Girl Who Has Apparently Recovered.

Stockholm.—After an unbroken sleep extending over thirty-two years Caroline Kronboeck has awakened to find the world changed considerably. This extraordinary case of somnolence has occurred at Oknoe, a village in Sweden, and is described by Dr. Frederstroem of the Stockholm hospital. Caroline Kronboeck fell asleep when she was fourteen, in the winter of 1877-8, and remained until recently in a comatose condition. Consciousness returned to her suddenly. She did not know where she was, didn't recognize her father or the room where she had lain thirty-two years. Presently she felt hungry and asked for a baked herring, her favorite dish when she was a young girl. She said she felt tired and somewhat dazed. Her memory came back by degrees—how she walked half a mile to school, the name of the teacher and those of her school friends and what the local parson looked like. She remembered having a toothache, but could not say whether she had suffered from headaches or whether she had hurt her head. As to her long period of suspended consciousness her mind is a complete blank. It took her a month to learn to walk again, and her eyes remain very sensitive to light, but her appetite was excellent from the time of her awakening, and she has since slept normally every night. Strange to say, she has forgotten nothing of what she learned at school and at once wanted to go on with her lessons. She showed good mental aptitude and has just been confirmed by her Lutheran pastor.

Ship's Timber In Mansion.

Greenwich, Conn.—Timbers of the famous English battleship Wellington have been used by I. N. Phelps Stokes in building his $200,000 mansion at Greenwich, Conn. In bringing the old beams all the way from England Mr. Stokes was not indulging his fancy for things historic, although the presence of these timbers will render the house of greater interest.

The timber, which is all teak, was used for rafters and supports. As teak is best for warships, it was just the wood to use in a house which Mr. Stokes hopes will stand for generations. All of the rafters of the great banquet hall were taken from the Wellington.

In England there are several firms which make a specialty of buying old vessels and breaking them up to get the thoroughly seasoned teak and oak timbers for use in building.

New Use For a Crypt.

Liverpool, England.—The Rev. C. H. Chard, rector of Spitalfields, has converted the crypt of his church into a store where poor people whose homes are broken up may deposit their furniture free of charge until they are in a position to set up house again. At present the crypt is full of furniture.

A Desperate Game

By JOHN K. LEYS,

Author of "The Lindsays," "The Lawyer's Secret," "The Black Terror," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, by John K. Leys.

It was tolerably clear, Guy thought, that Foscombe had gone to meet his chief clerk so as to have a private word or two with him in the street and coach him up in what he was to say. The only thing seemed to wait till they came in. He went back to Mr. Foscombe's room, but he could not rest. He went again to the clerks' room and asked the clerk he had spoken to before, "Did Mr. Foscombe say when he would be back?"

"No, sir. But he left a note for Mr. Fletcher."

Left a note for Mr. Fletcher! So he had not gone to meet the managing clerk and return with him to the office. He had simply bolted. Guy's anger rose to boiling point. At that moment he could have choked the treacherous friend to death with his own hands.

"Can I see the note Mr. Foscombe left for Mr. Fletcher?"

"I'm afraid not, sir," said the clerk, with a look of surprise. "But Mr. Fletcher can't be long now. He is a little late this morning. Here he is, sir!" he added as a step was heard outside. Next moment a short, pursy little man, carrying a black bag, came in hurriedly.

"Mr. Foscombe left this for you, sir," said the clerk, handing him an envelope as he spoke.

The little man laid down his bag and opened the envelope. Guy remained quite still while he read the note.

"I am very anxious to see Mr. Foscombe as soon as possible," said Guy the moment he had finished. "Does he tell you when he will return?"

Fletcher, who knew Guy well by sight as a friend of his employer's, said without any hesitation: "No, sir. He merely says that he is obliged to go out of town for a few days and will give me notice when he can come back. A very sudden call, it appears, sir."

"Very sudden," said Guy dryly. "Does he give you any hint as to where he may be going or as to what business takes him out of town?"

"Not a word, sir. There is his note if you'd like to see it," answered the clerk rather shortly, tossing it down before him. Guy ran his eye over it, then handed it back with a word of thanks and rushed into the street.

CHAPTER XVIII.

A WOLF IN SHEEP'S CLOTHING.

When Eva awoke on the morning of the day that had been fixed for her elopement a tumult of feelings thronged in her heart. Having dressed, she sat down with beating heart to write a farewell note to her mother. It was not an easy letter to write, and it cost some tears, but it was finished at last, and then she went down to breakfast, wondering how she was to get courage to face her mother.

Lady Roscommon, however, took but little notice of her, being engrossed with a letter she had just received from Terence, and the meal passed off quietly.

When it was over she went up to her room and there found Virginie busily engaged in packing.

"Is it necessary to do that so soon?" said Eva, turning pale as she spoke. The maid looked at her, but made no reply except to point to a telegram which was lying on a table close by.

"Why, you have opened it!" cried the girl in amazement at the woman's barefaced impudence.

"But it is good that I did open it, as you will see when you have read it. How could I send it in when you were at breakfast with her ladyship?"

"There was no need for you to open it," said Eva, trembling with indignation.

"But read it and see," was the answer.

Inwardly promising herself that she would get rid of the impertinent creature at the first opportunity, Eva unfolded the telegram, and the next moment her anger was forgotten. A cry of astonishment burst from her.

So very sorry missed train this morning and can't be with you as arranged. You had better take first train to Belfast and take the steamer there to Glasgow. A friend of mine named Foscombe will meet you at Greenock. I hope to meet you myself at Greenock, but if not he will see you safely to London.

GUY.

It never occurred to Eva to doubt the genuineness of this message. All she thought of was that she and her maid must be at the Belfast railway station at the earliest possible moment.

"Do you know when there is a train to Belfast?" she asked Virginie.

"At half past 10, mademoiselle, and I'm doing my best to get you ready in time for it. If you would gather your things together, mademoiselle, it would be a help."

Everything went smoothly. They left the hotel without attracting any attention. What little luggage they took with them they carried themselves.

An indescribable feeling of sadness filled Eva's mind as she drove with her maid from the railway station at Belfast to the wharf. She was leaving home and friends for a man of whom she knew but little, and he had failed to keep his appointment with her. Of course he was not to blame—she did not blame him at all—but why had he not telegraphed her to wait till next day, when he might have come for her himself? The next morning at Greenock the poor girl's eyes eagerly searched the thin line of waiting men, and her heart sank. Guy was not among them. She convulsively clutched her maid's arm and tried to speak, but could not. The ill natured French woman was the only human being near her, who was not a complete stranger. Her white face twitched pitifully. She felt as if she had been cruelly betrayed.

Yet a gleam of hope flashed across her mind when, just after their feet had touched the great stones of the quay, she heard a quick, bright step behind her. She wheeled round in an instant. But no. The man was a stranger. He lifted his hat and a smile broke over his face.

"You are Miss Fitzgerald, I believe?"

His manner was full of respect, but Eva started, and for a moment the thought flashed across her mind that she had been followed from Dublin. The man speedily reassured her.

"I have come on behalf of Mr. Guy Lorimer. I am sorry to say that he can't leave London just at present, and he asked me to meet you here and escort you. He is to meet us at Euston this evening."

The girl's cheeks flushed, and she angrily bit her lip. She had forgiven her lover for leaving her to cross the channel by herself, but this was really a little too much. Surely no business on earth was important enough to have prevented him from meeting her at Greenock, as he had promised.

For a moment she thought she would punish him by going back to Dublin. Just then, when she scarcely knew what to do or say, the suave, pleasant tones of the stranger's voice fell upon her ears.

"I haven't told you my name yet. It is Foscombe. I think I may say that I am one of Lorimer's most intimate friends, and yet I dare say he never mentioned my name to you."

"I don't think he ever did," said Eva, "but he told me in a telegram I had from him yesterday that you would meet me here if he did not. It was so very, very kind of you to come!"

"Oh, not at all. It was really a pleasure. Perhaps he has not told you that he asked me to be best man at the wedding."

"No. It was very careless of him not to mention it."

"Oh, no. He has scarcely had time to do so. He only asked me two days ago."

A bright look came into the girl's face. She raised her eyes and looked at the stranger with new interest. She liked his appearance. He was young and good looking, and his face wore a pleasant expression. Certainly he was a gentleman. Throughout the long journey south his thoughtfulness and tact never failed. He made Virginie travel in the same compartment, as he felt instinctively that she would prefer to have some one of her own sex beside her. He kept her well supplied with light reading and illustrated papers, and he took care not to talk to her too much. Sometimes he sat opposite to her, sometimes he changed into a smoking compartment. At Preston he ordered luncheon baskets, and they lunched together in the carriage. At Rugby the guard of the train put a telegram into his hand. Foscombe tore it open, and his face lengthened.

"Ah! I was afraid of that." Then he looked up at Eva, and his face wore an expression of sympathy.

"It is from Lorimer, or, rather, from his clerk," he said. "I am afraid he won't be able to meet us at Euston after all. The fact is, Lorimer is not very well"—

"He is ill! And you never told me!"

"I did not wish to alarm you, and I quite thought that he would have been well enough to meet us. Indeed he was anxious to go to Greenock last night, but I persuaded him to let me come in his place. And I had to promise that I would not tell you he was ill, for fear of alarming you. But it is only a passing indisposition. He will be all right tomorrow."

As he spoke the train began to move slowly forward on the last stage of its journey.

Eva shed a few tears, of which she felt ashamed. There was really nothing to cry about, she told herself. But she felt lonely, and this news of her lover's illness seemed a presage of disaster.

"I'll telf you what," said Foscombe, looking up eagerly. "Your best plan will be to come to my aunt for the night. I live with her, as my parents are dead. She will be very pleased to put you up, and I will send a wire to Lorimer tonight to tell him where you are."

"It is very, very kind of you to think of it, Mr. Foscombe," said Eva, with a look of gratitude, "but hadn't I better go to a hotel? Your aunt will not be expecting any one, and I have my maid with me. We should only be a trouble to her"—

"Not the least trouble in the world, I assure you," said Foscombe earnestly. "We have plenty of room, and I am sure my aunt will be delighted to have you."

There could be no doubt, Eva thought, that it would be much pleasanter, as well as more proper, for her to spend the night in a private house rather than a hotel.

She again thanked Mr. Foscombe warmly, and the matter was settled.

CHAPTER XIX.

A PAIR OF KNAVES.

It was raining when they arrived in London, and as she looked out of the cab window at the dreary scene Eva's heart was aching with loneliness. What a different arrival this was from what she had promised herself! She turned aside into her corner and cried.

Mr. Foscombe gazed out of the opposite window as if he were so much absorbed in his own thoughts to know that she was crying.

"We are almost there now," he said. And two minutes later the lumbering four wheeler lumbered itself to a standstill. Then Eva found herself shaking hands with a short, stout lady, black haired and with beady, black eyes, in a black silk dress.

"We thought you would perhaps feel too tired to come down to dinner tonight," said Mr. Foscombe, with a glance at his aunt. "We will send a tray up to your room." Eva was sure that she had his thoughtfulness to thank for this, and again she felt grateful to him. When she awoke next morning the first thought in her mind was, "How can I find out how Guy is today?"

The question was soon answered. When she went downstairs Mr. Foscombe was waiting to speak to her.

"I am just starting for the office," he said, "but I thought you would like to know how Guy is this morning, so I telegraphed to his clerk."

He laid a telegram before her, and her eyes devoured it:

Had a good night. Hopes to be up in a day or two.

So ran the message.

"How can I thank you!" cried the girl, clasping her hands. "You seem to think of everything. I shall tell Guy that my own brother could not have done more for me."

Foscombe left the house at once, but did not go to his office. He took a hansom and drove to a large house in a fashionable street leading off Piccadilly, a house which was let off in sets of residential chambers. He stopped the lift at the second floor, and a few steps along the corridor brought him to the door he wanted. In answer to his ring a smooth shaven man in a black coat opened the door.

"Is Sir Rufus up?" asked the lawyer curtly.

"Oh, no, sir," said the valet, with a smile. "He won't be awake for another two hours, I should say."

"I rather think he will be awake in about ten seconds."

The lawyer strode past the valet, and, raising his cane, he rapped smartly on a panel of one of the doors.

"It's I, Foscombe!" he shouted in answer to some growls from within.

A torrent of curses rolled out from behind the closed door, but the lawyer paid no attention to it.

"I'll wait half an hour," he said, "and if you don't choose to be ready to see me then I shan't see you again. Do you understand?"

There was no answer.

The lawyer marched across the passage, threw open the door of the sitting room and entered. One of the windows was open and a great waft of scent came from a bed of mignonette in the balcony. Mr. Foscombe threw himself into an easy chair, crossed his legs and waited.

The half hour had expired, five minutes—ten minutes—had followed the allotted thirty, and still there was no sign that the lawyer himself was not the only living creature in the chambers.

"How does he do it?" the lawyer asked himself as he looked round at the luxurious furniture and the deep piled Turkey carpet at his feet. "The man has been ruined to my knowledge these fifteen years, yet he lives in luxury all the same."

"Sir Rufus can see you now, sir," said the smooth shaven man, throwing open the door. Foscombe jumped up and followed him into a small room hung with pale pink silk like a lady's boudoir. There on a lounge chair in a light summer dressing gown Sir Rufus reposed.

A breakfast service of Sevres china on a snowy napkin stood on a small table at his elbow.

"How do?" said the baronet, extending two fingers, without troubling to rise. "Can I offer you any breakfast? There are plovers' eggs over there. Cup of coffee and cream? No?"

"I have breakfasted," said the lawyer sharply, "and I came to tell you that it is done. The lady is at my house."

"Good. You have managed splendidly. But indeed I never had any doubt that you would succeed. Rather a silly little thing, isn't she?"

"She believed all I told her anyhow," returned Foscombe, biting his lip. "But that is not the point. The question is what our next step is to be."

"There ought to be no difficulty about that," said Sir Rufus. "The girl has evidently compromised herself both in her lover's eyes and in those of the world. She ought to be thankful to any man who would marry her now."

"I think," said Foscombe slowly, "you will be making a grave mistake if you count upon any feeling of that kind in her mind. She does not consider herself to be compromised at all."

"Little fool!" muttered the baronet. "The thing must be pushed a little further then, that's all. You must manage to get her across the channel on some pretext or other and give her the slip"—

"No!"

The word rang out as if it had been fired from a gun.

"What the deuce do you mean?" drawled the older man.

"Only this—that I won't have the girl's self respect destroyed or even hurt. I hate myself for the misery I have caused her already."

He stopped, and his eyes wandered away from the gaze of the baronet's hard, blue eyes.

"The cur is balking. Can it be that he wants the girl for himself?" was the thought in Sir Rufus' mind. But he was far too careful to give expression to it.

"My dear Foscombe," he said, with a gentle smile. "If you think it over calmly I am sure you will see that we have gone too far to turn back from any motives of sentiment. When you came to me with the news that the girl was going to elope and get married at once we agreed that it would be preposterous to allow a fortune to slip through our fingers in that way. The marriage had to be stopped at all hazards. That was the really troublesome part of the business. Thanks to your wonderful address and ingenuity that difficulty, the real difficulty, has been overcome.

"The situation is now practically what it was before this young fellow Lorimer meddled with it. The girl's mother is absolutely in my power—you know that. In a moment; with a word, I could have her sent to prison, and I am not at all sure that I could not have her sent to the scaffold."

The lawyer started. "Do you mean"—

"Yes; it is my firm conviction that that poor devil who was shot in the park in some way learned her secret and that either she or her son shot him to keep his mouth closed. Of course that is only my own idea, but I am pretty sure I am right. The lady had sense enough to see that I meant business, and she agreed readily enough that I should marry her daughter. The girl has a fortune of nearly £100,000, which comes to her from her mother's uncle. I really can't afford to lose her. And you know we agreed that you were to have the old debt and interest paid up, with £10,000 added for your services in the matter. I am naturally surprised that you should be making objections now."

"It matters very little whether I make objections or not," said the lawyer doggedly. "You may take my word for it that as long as Lorimer is alive Miss Fitzgerald will marry no one else."

"She must be led to believe that he is dead, then," said the baronet placidly as he resumed his breakfast. "That should not be a difficult thing to do for a man of your resources. You have told her that he is ill, I suppose?"

"Yes; I had a telegram this morning supposed to be from his clerk saying that he was rather better. Of course I arranged for that before leaving London."

"Good! You think of everything. Well, the rest should be easy. He gets unexpectedly worse and dies. You put a paragraph to that effect in some obscure country paper, and she won't have the slightest doubt of the truth of the story. She may even attend the funeral if you think that would afford her any satisfaction."

"That would be going too far," muttered the lawyer between his teeth.

"Oh, well," said the baronet airily, "just as you like. Of course the funeral would take place down in the country and be managed by his own relations. She won't naturally be shy of intruding herself, seeing that the marriage did not come off."

"Well, supposing this is done?"

"Well, after a bit she goes home, and the escapade is naturally hushed up. After a few weeks or months I return to the charge, and my touching constancy is rewarded as it deserves. And you shall have your forty thou., my dear Foscombe, as soon as I finger the coin. That's settled, isn't it?" And he stood up by way of telling his visitor that it was time for him to go.

The lawyer had nothing to answer. All that the baronet said was true. He had agreed to play this shameful part because it was the only way by which he could secure payment of that £30,000 which Sir Rufus had borrowed from his father. He wanted the money badly, and the £10,000 bonus formed an additional temptation.

But Foscombe, though he had done many shabby things in his life, had never done anything quite so bad as this, and he could not help despising himself. It was not an agreeable sensation, very much the reverse, and the worst of it was that he could not say a word in his own defense except this—that at the time he made the shameful bargain he had not seen Eva Fitzgerald.

"The Great Secret of Success in Life," said Disraeli, "is to be ready when your opportunity comes."

Many a man has been compelled to let business opportunities go by—opportunities which might have established him in a profitable business, merely from the lack of a little ready cash at the right time.

The man who saves his money NOW is the man who will be READY when OPPORTUNITY comes.

We WANT COMPETITION of the Right Sort, Not the Following Kind!

A Mrs. S— after selecting her outfit and learning the total cost from our plainly marked price tags, said she preferred to make comparisons elsewhere before ordering, to which we readily agreed, for it's a thing we always URGE!

On getting another store's prices (where they were marked in private signs) she found ours were far less, and SAID so. The salesman promptly dropped to our figures—AND GOT THE ORDER.

Here, where there's but ONE PLAINLY MARKED PRICE ON EVERY ITEM, such an "accommodating" and sudden price drop would be impossible—here, when you read the price tag, you KNOW it's already at lowest point, for ALL prices are made and REMAIN on the SAME UNIFORMLY SMALL PROFIT BASIS. We don't HAVE to run a "leader" here and there for an hour, or a day, to catch trade, as ALL lines are equally good values EVERY day in the year!

All we want is HONEST competition that meet OUR plainly marked prices WITH prices you can READ!

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

"The Man of the Hour," by George Broadhurst, which has been so much read about for the past three years, will be the offering at The Plainfield Theatre tonight. The Broadhurst play has a strong appeal for those fond of a theatrical discussion of curren subjects as contrasted to offerings of the olden times, or of mere society atmosphere and circumstances. No play of the present era has received the attention from press or public that this clever comedy has. Like New York, the Chicago press was unanimous in its encomiums. There was no dissent from the general verdict that "there is the best American play yet written."

The managers thus complimented, have left nothing undone in putting before the public in first class manner what is critically and popularly regarded as "the greatest play of the day."

DARING MECHANICIAN HAILS FROM NEBRASKA.

Eveyone acknowledges the nerve and daring of the automobile racing mechanician, but just at present the palm must be awarded to a Nebraskan, Orrin A. Curtis, born in Shelby and now employed as mechanician at a garage in David City, Neb.

In a six-cylinder fifty-horse-power Mitchell car, and with Miss Lillian P. McCracken as his "driver," Curtis threw in the high one evening last week and started on a journey that may end only with death.

"Until death doth part" read the Rev. Cleveland Kleihauer, of David City, as he stood on one foot in the tonneau of the swaying Mitchell car and pronounced Orrin A. and Lillian P. man and wife with another young couple, Earle Able and his wife, as witnesses. Frank Johns, chauffeur for this twentieth century bridal party, was looking back over his left shoulder every other second and letting the speeding car swerve so each time that the blushing bride and pretty Mrs. Able punctuated the wedding ceremony with little shrieks and exclamations.

The young people never will be able to tell exactly where they were married, because Frank Johns was hitting it up at something like fifty miles an hour. But it was somewhere on the high road between David City and Foley, and the Rev. Cleveland Kleihauer declared he never had made a better job on terra firma, despite the fact that the charming bride was hanging onto his left arm most of the time and the best man butted him twice in the right ear and the groom stumbled onto his corns with each lurch of the whizzing, zigzagging 50-H-P Mitchell Six.

BP. TALBOT'S TALK

Noted Prelate Makes the First Lenton Address at Grace Church.

MUST CONTROL MIND, HE SAYS

"Man's Happiness Demands the Right Attitude of Mind" He Says to Large Congregation.

A large congregation gathered in Grace Episcopal church last night to hear the first of a series of Lenten sermons which was preached by the Right Rev. Ethelbert Talbot, Bishop of Bethlehem. The prelate devoted himself to a discourse on the value of the mind in relation to all substantial facts of life, praticularly referring to the application of these facts in the present Lenten season.

Bishop Talbot said that the mind is a great invisible world, the inner life upon which every man depends. Facts in everyday life are always showing the necessity of the control of the mind. "There are certain human factors," he said, "which control the realm of action, law, environment and the power of the press. The tongue, too must also be restrained. But the realm of man's mind is one of liberty. Constraint may seem to him the apotheosis of unhappiness, but this is not so.

"Many departments of life illustrate the necessity of mind making. Man's happiness demands the right attitude of mind. Wealth cannot purchase happiness. Health many contribute, but not buy it. Many of the best men who have been most happy have been the most afflicted. Happiness is peace with God and with our fellowman. It consists of not what we have but what we are.

"Again our influence among our fellows demands happiness. A man's mind, unless it is pure, cannot actuate pure thoughts and it is this quality of thought that is required for the execution of the right influence among your fellows. Maeterlinck says possibly in exageration that, 'A child on the street will recoil at the spoken word from an impure mind' I tell you that as a man thinks, so he is.

"Lent is a season of correction and man can never control this or that evil, if his mind is not first trained in right habits and thoughts. The Gospel contributions towards mind control are, first light, then love and finally life. Of the first God's light cheers in sorrow and in death shows ever hope. In the darkest periods of this life the Light of God's love is a beacon showing the way to eternal happiness. The contribution of love shows how the high ideals of men hold the greatest influences over life. The charm of love in the home and all those attributes which make for pure content. So it is with love of Christ. He firmly established in your life will remove the wrong ideals and prevent the destruction consequent upon the admittance of evil thoughts. Don't make a mistake in believing that in your own strength you can fight successfully against the forces of evil.

"The power of physical life is a wonderful thing. The activity of a man's life is in reality at all times a panacea for the evils he must meet. When a man is busy he has little time for the work of the devil. Be brave, courageous and active. Let your lives be epitomes of all that is good and remember the words of Jesus, 'I came that ye might have life and have it more abundantly.'" The text was taken from Psalm 51-10.

Song and Harp Recital.

Under the auspices of the Epworth League of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, a song and harp recital will be given at the church, this evening by George P. Gillet, tenor and Mrs. George P. Gillet, harpiste-pianiste. A fine program of songs, humorous selections, harp selections and monologues has been arranged.

—Neuman Bros. have received a large shipment of the finest butter, including Rockdale Print, Rockdale Creamery and Elgin Creamery. The prices are reasonable for such quality.

PLAINFIELD ELKS ELECTED OFFICERS

Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., held its annual meting last night and elected the following officers; Exalted Ruler, Lewis A. Bellis; esteemed leading knight, Thomas Hanna; esteemed loyal kinght, William G. Smith; esteemed lecturing knight, A. A. Prudhon; secretary, William R. Townsend; treasurer, H. B. McDonald; tiler, E C.. Searing; trustee, S. P. T. Wilbur. Addresses were made by the new officers and by the retiring exalted ruler, Joseph Noonan. Refreshments were served in conclusion.

It was announced last night that the annual minisrel show would be held the week after Easter and may possibly be for two nights. Rehearsals will commence tonight under the direction of Harry Wetton.

HOW MAYOR STOPS DISORDER AT DANCES

Mayor G. W. V. Moy has issued orders to the effect that in the future at all public dances in the city, patrons will not be allowed to go in and out from the dance on a return check. If a persons desires to go out and return he must pay another admission fee. The reasons for this are that frequently at such affairs men leave to get drinks of liquor and returning are quite apt to cause a disturbance.

The Mayor in his order has given a warning in this matter and for violations permits for such dances will be refused.

BROKE ANKLE WHILE ROLLER SKATING.

Roller skating has its drawbacks, especially when one is not sure whether the road ahead is level. Charlie Johnson, eight years old, of New Market, found this out yesterday morning while skating to school. His feet went from under him and in falling the little fellow's right ankle came in contact with the curb with sufficient force to break one of the bones.

Two companions, Everett Giles and Fred Tinsman, who were with Johnson helped him into a little express wagon and carried him to his home where Doctor Whitmore set the broken bone. Charlie will be confined to his bed for some time and his heart is broken. He loves his school and has a record of perfect attendance and ranks high in his class.

Suggest Building Code Changes.

Chairman Duncan W. Taylor, of the councilmanic fire and building committee, and Chief T. O. Doane, met representatives of the gas department and of the Carpenters' Union in the Mayor's office last night relative to some changes desired in the new building code. It was originally intended to hold a meeting of the entire committee, but Mr. Taylor was the only one who could attend. The suggestions made by the representatives were noted and will be considered by the entire committee.

In a New York Hospital.

Word was received by Chief of Police Kiely this morning that Milton Arensberg, of 135 Netherwood avenue, had been taken to the Hudson street hospital in New York, suffering from an illness which attacked him while he was crossing over the Brooklyn bridge at an early hour . The nature of the sickness was not stated in the despatch, but the man's family was immediately notified of the occurance. Mr. Arensberg is in the insurance business in New York.

TO PAY HIS FINE IN INSTALLMENTS

John Gensky, of South Plainfield, who was brought before Justice Smith of that place, and committed to the county jail at New Brunswick on a charge of attempting to shoot five of his fellow-countrymen, was arraigned before Judge Lyon, at New Brunswick, yesterday and fined $50. The fine is to be paid in weekly installments of $1. Gensky has been placed in charge of a probation officer to whom he must report once a week and pay his fine.

A similar sentence was imposed upon John Dratea, who made an assault on a foreigner a few days ago at South Plainfield. The case of Clark Rogers against Butcher Vanderhoof for a $15 feed bill has been postponed for two weeks by Justice Smith.

ANXIOUS TO BUY GLOEKLER'S PROPERTY

The refusal of the Common Council to renew Christian Gloekler's saloon property has placed the property at Front and Somerset streets in the limelight as a possible bonanza for real estate speculation. Prospective buyers have figuratively been falling all over themselves in an effort to get an option on the place, but so far all offers have been refused. The owner has his own plans for the future of the place and will not consider any proposition.

"I never saw the like of it in all my life," said Mr. Gloekler to a Daily Press reporter today. "Without a bit of stretching I answered the telephone forty times yesterday to have offers made to buy me out. The Council refused the license at 10 o'clock Monday night and an hour later a man was pacing off the frontage of the building. Half a dozen others have been clambering the back fence to get the rear dimensions. If they keep up as they have started I'll have to barricade the place to keep them from tearing off the weather boards to sound the frame timbers.

In speaking of the refusal of a renewal of his license, Mr. Gloekler said he believed he had not been accorded fair treatment. He said he was given no chance to face his accusers or explain any of the alleged violations. If the appearance of the corner had anything to do with the refusal of his license, he said, he would gladly have conferred with the city officials relative to moving or replacing the present structure with an up-to-date building.

MORE LAND NEEDED FOR POSTOFFICE SITE.

Condemnation proceedings have been begun for about sixty feet front of the property on Watchung avenue, adjoining the property of A. L. Force, to be used for a Federal building. The tract in quetion belongs to the Hicksite Friends. Judge John Rellstab, of the United States District court, on March 20, at Trenton, will appoint commissioners under which condemnation proceedings will be conducted, provided there are no objections and a time will be fixed for the filing of the commissioners' report.

RESPOND TO CALL

Two Volunteers to be Generals in the War Against White Plague.

APPEAL MADE FOR TEN MORE.

Year and Day Campaign for Dollars —Fund Being Raised for the Anti-Tuberculosis Society.

Responding to the call to arms for the war against the great white plague, two are already enlisted as generals in the "The Year and The Day" campaign. Ten more generals are needed in order that the battle may be begun in deadly earnest. The sort of fighting that will be done is for the dollar and if a victory is won the Plainfield Anti-Tuberculosis Society's treasury will have approximately $400 at its disposal to assist in furthering its work.

A need for the sinews of war is the first fact which comes to light in starting a war. This need has been felt by the Anti-Tuebrculosis League in Plainfield for years and the need has been met by a few generous friends. Last year the need was felt more keenly than ever before and the community in general awoke to a greater sense of responsibility than ever before. Two thousand people assisted in one way or another to carry on the crusade.

The time has come now when if the war is to be successful hundreds must join the ranks. The League needs funds not only to carry on its little camp, where eight patients are constantly being brought back to health, but the war must be carried into the places where the enemy is strongest. Through broadcast use of circulars and their educational methods the league wishes to educate every soul in this community on the subject of how to prevent and take care of tuberculosis.

Other even greater responsibilities await the league, when funds shall be responsible. Up to this time the greatness of the problem has prevented the league from taking any step to assist advanced cases in their homes, and there are no institutions where these may be sent. For the safety of the city such cases should be boarded in the country, where contagion may be controlled.

Then join the army. Telephone to the secretary of war, care of The Daily Press, that you will be one of twelve generals. Each general must secure four colonels and each four colonels seven captains. Generals, colonels and captains will send one dollar to the treasurer of the league to help kill the enemy.

April 30th has been set aside this year as "Tuberculosis Day," and will be observed in 20,000 churches in the country in a manner similar to that of "Tuberculosis Sunday" in 1910, when over 40,000 sermons were preached on the prevention of consumption. The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis hopes to enlist all of the 33,000,000 church members in the country in this movement.

In one respect Tuberculosis Day will differ from Tuberculosis Sunday of 1910. Instead of requesting the churches to give to the tuberculosis cause a special Sunday service, the plan is, to ask this year that meetings, at which the subject of tuberculosis and its prevention can be discussed, be held on Sunday, April 30th, or on any other day near that date, either in the week preceding or the week following. What is desired is that the subject of tuberculosis be discussed in all of the 200,000 churches of the United States at as nearly the same time as possible. This does not demand that a stated service be given to this work, although that might be desirable, but that any minister, or other authority whom he may invite, may present the problem to his congregation before or after his regular service, or on any day within the week preceding or following April 30th.

The National Asociation is planning to gather statistics from thousands of ministers, showing how serious a problem tuberculosis is to every church. These figures will indicate among other things the number of deaths last year from tuberculosis in church congregations, and the extent to which clergymen are called upon to minister to sufferers from the disease. It is planned also to issue millions of circulars and pamphlets on the prevention of tuberculosis, both from the national office and from the headquarters of the 450 antj-tuberculosis associations who will co-operate in this movement.

COLLEGE OF MT. ST. MARY IN RUINS; FIRE LOSS $200,000--INMATES ESCAPE

Students in Night Clothes March From Burning Building--Three Sisters of Mercy and Several Pupils Carried From Their Sick Beds --Cause of Blaze Unknown--Structure to be Rebuilt.

Mount St. Mary College, one of the handsomest and largest structures of an educational character in the State, occupying a picturesque site on the Watchung mountains in North Plainfield, was destroyed by fire this morning. The loss is estimated at $200,000.

Sisters and Students Escape.

There were approximately 140 students and Sisters in the building at the time, including seventy-seven boarding students, and under fire-order drill all left the building without the slightest injury. The students, even to the youngest retained great presence of mind and under the direction of Mother Gabriel, assisted by the Sisters of Mercy, were marched out of the building to a barn on the campus, where they were cared for until they could be removed to St. Joseph's church.

Carried from Building.

Sister Ligouri, who has been critically ill for months and is now in a dying condition, was carried out of the burning structure by Chief of Police Kiely and taken to the rectory of St. Joseph's church. Her death is expected at any minute, so grave is her condition. Two other Sisters, who were also ill, were likewise carried from the structure as were several students.

The fire, which started in the frame tower on the top of the building, was first discovered by three Sisters, among them Sister Cecilia, who were aroused by the smell of smoke. Upon attempting to leave their room, they found the flames rapidly eating their way through the top floor of the structure and their passageway almost cut off.

Presence of Mind.

With great difficulty they escaped from their room and descending to the next floor sounded the electric fire alarm, which in a few minutes aroused every person in the building. Mother Gabriel was among the first to appear in the main hall and quickly summoning the Sisters to her aid directed the assembling of the students.

By the time the flames were rapidly spreading to the lower floors and the students just had time to pick up blankets, comfortables, sheets, etc., to wrap about themselves in their flight. The personal effects were a complete loss. The order in which the Sisters and students left the burning building was remarkable.

Firemen Summoned.

As soon as the fire alarm was sounded in the building, one of the Sisters directed by Mother Gabriel summoned the Plainfield and North Plainfield fire departments. Owing time elapsed before thefiremen artime elapsed before the firemen arrived with the apparatus. There was the Plainfield and North Plainfield steamers and a chemical engine from both departments.

Because of the inadequate supply of water, the firemen were handicapped in fighting the flames, which had completely enveloped the building and were rapidly consuming the interior. Water was drawn from a reservoir back of the college on the mountain, and from a spring in front of the building. The supply of water was quickly exhausted and the firemen were helpless. Chief T. O. Doane, of the city department, and Chief William McCullough, of the borough department, were both there and their men rendered valuable assistance in carrying what few valuables they could get hold of from the college.

Holy Vessel Saved.

Among the articles of greatest value saved were the holy vessels. They were carried out by Father Baldwin, chaplain at the college, who received a cut on the hand while performing rescue work.

As for the exact cause of the fire it will probably never be known. There was a report in circulation this morning that electric light wires running into the tower, where the blaze started, were responsible, but later Father Baldwin said that he did not think that there were any electric wires in that part of the structure. Chief Doane was at a loss to account for the cause.

The Loss $200,000.

The actual loss on the building proper will doubtless reach $150,000, but the personal loss of the Sisters, students and furnishings, which include many valuable paintings, statuary, etc., will probably make the total loss easily $200,000. Many of the things consumed by the fire it will be impossible to replace. They include curios and other articles brought from foreign lands and presented to the college.

Two large and valuable libraries, a new equipment in the laboratory for the classes in domestic economy, together with a finely equipped gymnasium in the basement, at least forty pianos scattered about the building in various music rooms, all were destroyed, the loss being total.

Image Unblemished

A somewhat remarkable fact is that a small statue of the Virgin Mary, which occupied a place in a niche in the wall over the main entrance, remains intact with scarcely a blemish on it, while everything else about it is ruined.

All that remains of the college are the stone walls. The structure is completely gutted and looks as though a cyclone had passed through it sweeping everything in its path. The exterior is of Indiana lime-stone while the interior construction was of concrete, iron and wooden beams. The iron work is a twisted mass showing that it was not heavy enough to withstand the test to which it was put.

Chief Doane says that shortly after he arrived he heard what sounded like an explosion in the west end of the building. This he thinks was caused by the falling of the walls and floors.

Priests Give Aid.

Soon after the fire was discovered Father W. H. Miller, of St. Joseph's church, as well as Fathers Hogan and Sciolla, of St. Mary's church, went to the scene of the conflagration and rendered such service as possible. Later in the morning Father B. M. Bogan also visited the scene and offered his aid.

Bishop McFaul Here.

Among the first to be notified of the disaster was Rt. Rev. James L. McFaul, of Trenton, bishop of the Trenton diocese, and he accompanied by his secretary, Rev. Father Powers, arrived in Plainfield about 11 o'clock. They were taken at once to the rectory of St. Joseph's church, where after a conference with Father Miller, they went to the college.

To Rebuild College.

Before leaving, Bishop McFaul told a reporter for The Daily Press that temporary accommodations would be secured at once and that the classes would be continued with as little delay as possible and that in the meantime, steps will be taken to rebuild the college at once.

Partially Insured.

The college was covered by insurance, there being more than $100,000 placed on the building by companies represented by State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen. Councilman Herbert Buxton, an adjuster in fire losses, is expected to arrive at the college this afternoon, when he will go over the loss carefully with Bishop McFaul and others who are connected with the management of the institution. Bishop McFaul expressed the opinion today that he thought the work of rebuilding could be started within a short time with a view to having the college ready for use by next fall.

Students Clothed.

Students who live at any distance were provided with clothing and other necessities this morning so that they might return home, while other students who live near Plainfield were sent to their homes. In the case of the little children, their parents were notified and they came after them. A local shoe dealer had a busy time of it this morning fitting out the students and faculty with footwear, while other stores were sought for various other articles of wearing apparel. Before noon all were thoroughly equipped so that they could leave the various homes to which they were taken as a temporary measure.

Crowds Visit Scene.

During the day hundreds of people were attracted to the college grounds and all stood in amazement as they view the remains of what was a most pretentious structure.

Rescue Work.

The police took a prominent part in the work of assisting the inmates of the college to escape. Chief Kiely with Roundsman Higgins, and patrolmen Saffron, McCarthy, Kelly and Dobson did heroic work. Their first care was for the sick. Two sisters of the order confined to their beds were carried out and placed in the patrol wagon afterwards several of the children were brought out wrapped in blankets and the load was driven by Chief Kiely himself to St. Gabriel's Home, on Manning avenue. Returning at once another load was taken and by this time the policemen had harnessed the horses belonging to the convent to the stage used in trips to the city. Many of the pupils were scantily clad and this morning shoes and other necessaries were brought to the scene through an early order to the stores in the city.

Students Fire-Fighters

Splendid work was done by a corps of young women students, under the direction of Sister Cecilia, they manned the convent fire hose and with admirable courage attacked the flames never halting in their work of preventing the spread of the blaze until forced back by the fearful heat. The tower and west end

It was found that he had sustained a fracture of two ribs. He is probably also injured internally.

While finishing up his day's work Tuesday afternoon, William Penn, a coremaker, employed in the Fair street plant of the John E. Thropp & Sons Co., Trenton, had a narrow escape from being killed. He was caught by a falling iron door and pinned fast, sustaining a long and deep laceration on the back of the head and bruises about one side of the face. He was taken to St. Francis's Hospital.

Through a somnambulistic tumble, Hiram Webb, forty-seven years old, of 202 Friends avenue, Camden, was injured about the arms and body early Tuesday morning. He was found on the sidewalk by Policeman Humes, who learned that the sleepwalker had arisen, dressed himself, walked downstairs, and as he was climbing out the window fell on the sidewalk. Webb is suffering also severely from the shock.

While gathering potatoes for market last autumn, Janvier Wolfe, of Clayton, carved his name and address on a large one. A young woman in Philadelphia discovered the tuber as it came from the grocer and a correspondence with Janvier was started, with a result that a meeting between the two young persons will take place Sunday next. Janvier refuses to divulge the young woman's name until he has seen her.

Boats will not in future be the only means of access to the Atlantic City clubhouse of the Higbee Fishing Club, a Philadelphia organization, as a result of a ruling by Vice-Chancellor Leaming that the Atlantic City Electric Company, which bought land on two sides of the club's property must provide an entrance. The company's railroad tracks bar entrance by land to the clubhouse. Vice-Chancellor Leaming held that the club, by more than twenty years' use established a means of entrance to its land.

We WANT COMPETITION

of the Right Sort, Not the Following Kind!

A Mrs. S—— after selecting her outfit and learning the total cost from our plainly marked price tags, said she preferred to make comparisons elsewhere before ordering, to which we readily agreed, for it's a thing we always URGE!

On getting another store's prices (where they were marked in private signs) she found ours were far less, and SAID so. The salesman promptly dropped to our figures—AND GOT THE ORDER.

Here, where there's but ONE PLAINLY MARKED PRICE ON EVERY ITEM, such an "accommodating" and sudden price drop would be impossible—here, when you read the price tag, you KNOW it's already at lowest point, for ALL prices are made and REMAIN on the SAME UNIFORMLY SMALL PROFIT BASIS. We don't HAVE to run a "leader" here and there for an hour, or a day, to catch trade, as ALL lines are equally good values EVERY day in the year!

All we want is HONEST competition that meet OUR plainly marked prices WITH prices you can READ!

BASEBALL.

Bill Ebner, the umpire, known as a second edition of "His Highness," Silk O'Loughlin, at least in his movements on the field, has had enough wild experiences to fill a book.

Ebner worked in both the South Atlantic and Connecticut State Leagues last year. About the middle of the season a harrowing tale came out of the South telling how Bill was railroaded out of the South Atlantic. Here's his version of that affair:

"I had grown tired of working in the South. The climate was against me. The players tried every way to bluff me, but they couldn't bluff your Uncle Bill. I tried to get away several times, but the president of the league begged me to stay.

"Finally I handled a game at Columbus, Ga. The game was a tight one. With a runner on first, and one out the batter grounded to the shortstop. He pegged to second and the second baseman threw to first. I waved the man out at second and motioned that the man on first was safe.

"The [illegible] in the field misunderstood my signal. They walked off the field, and the men on first continued around the bases and scored what proved to be the winning run. Well, you can only partly imagine the riot. There was a war. They were going to lynch me.

"A fellow named Fox followed me to the hotel, giving his opinion of me in burning terms. Later we took a train to go to one of the other cities on the circuit. I was in the smoker of the Pullman. He walked in and started to abuse me again. He was about six feet two and weighed about 200 pounds.

"After he talked himself hoarse, he bawled, 'I'd throw you off this train for a nickel.' I called the brakeman, had him ejected from the car, and immediately sent a wire to the president of the league, stating the case, and informing him that I was through with his league."

Walter Doane, of Coatesville, Pa., will leave today to join the Cleveland Americans on their Southern training trip. Cleveland purchased Doane from Roanoke, Va., in 1909, in which season he led the Virginia League pitchers. Last year an attack of malaria put him out of the game for a considerable time, but in the latter part of the season he was loaned out to Roanoke, and won twelve out of thirteen games he pitched. He is a right-hand thrower and left-hand batter, very fast and an excellent hitter, which has caused McGuire to send him to the outfield.

Manager Hal Chase, of the Yankees, inaugurated the first move in the big campaign of the Yankees for a 1911 American League pennant when he set out yesterday afternoon with the nucleus of his veterans for Hot Springs, Va. Shortstop Jack Knight, Outfielder Bert Daniels and Pitcher Ray Fisher, accompanied the manager from Gotham. Thirteen other well known athletes will either join Manager Chase on the route, or meet him in Hot Springs.

GOLF.

It is said that the women in the South are planning to form a women's Southern golf association, with the idea of holding its first championship tournament in May at Atlanta. The formation of such an organization would doubtless go a long way toward helping the cause of women's golf in that part of the country.

The New York Newspaper Golf Club is planning to go ahead next season along more progressive lines. Several handsome cups have already been offered with a view to stimulating interest in the competitive end. The club will also apply for membership in the Metropolitan Golf Association. A booklet containing the bylaws, as well as the names of officers and committees, has been issued by the club.

The Country Club of Lakewood made all its arrangements to hold its annual spring invitation tournament on April 27, 28 and 29, but word has been received that a change is likely. Jasper Lynch is captain again this year.

STATE SHADE TREE FEDERATION FORMED

The Shade Tree Federation of New Jersey has been selected as the title of a permanent organization effected Tuesday afternoon to further the care and preservation of shade trees throughout the State. The organization was accomplished at a meeting held in the office of State Forester Alfred Gaskill by the executive committee named by him in furtherance of a movement inaugurated last September. Charles G. Titsworth, of Summit, formerly president of the Newark Shade Tree Commission was elected president of the organization: William Chew, of Salem, vice-president, and William Solitaroff, of East Orange, secretary and treasurer. The other members of the executive committee are the State forester, ex-officio; James A. Berry, of Newark; Carl Bannwart, of Newark; Henry Crofut White, of this city; William Tallman, of Englewood; A. J. Rider, of Hammonton; Charles D. Ferry, of Summit; Professor John B. Smith, of New Brunswick; William D. Logue, of Princeton; E. W. Humphreys, of Woodstown, and George P. Rust, of Passaic.

Every shade tree commission in the State will be urged to join the Federation. To stimulate interest in the movement, the Federation will hold a public meeting at the State house, Friday, March 24. Two or three of the best qualified men obtainable will be invited to make addresses. Their talk will include suggestions as to what to do in the organization of shade tree commissions and how best to care for trees where there is no such organization. Treatment for the elm leaf beetle, the most dangerous pest of the present season, will be one of the particular topics of discussion.

President Titsworth has been authorized to appoint a committee on law and legislation which will take up the question of amending the law to meet the needs of several communities as they have been shown to exist. Jersey City, Paterson, Passaic and Trenton are among the more important municipalities requiring legislation to effectively carry on the work of caring for shade trees.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS.

Public Duty and Personal Favor.

Here is a streak of sunshine penetrating the surrounding mist:

Plainfield, N. J., Feb. 2.—Angered that he should be offered free tickets when he had granted a license to Frank A. Robins' Circus to give performances here, Mayor Moy, today told the advance agent that not only would be not accept what he called graft but that if he heard of passes being given to the local officials or police he would cancel the license.

It is not the incident itself that we desire to celebrate but that spirit which differentiates between the public service and a personal favor. There is not enough of that. The idea that personal consideration is a large and commodious part of the official position necessarily conflicts with public duty and this fact is the occasion of the personal consideration. A public agent has no right to be under obligations to a private enterprise, for if he is, the public is sure to be neglected.—Ohio State Journal.

MAGAZINE POSTAL RATE INCREASE TO GO OVER.

Magazine publishers, who have been encamped around the capitol at Washington during the last few weeks, yesterday folded their tents, secure in the knowledge that the Taft-Hitchcock-Penrose plan to force an increased postal rate on their publications is dead. To obviate any further filibuster in the Senate, agreement has been reached not to include the "rider" in the postoffice appropriation bill, to tax publishers four cents a pound on that portion of magazines which contains advertising. Publishers now have time to prepare for a further battle at the next session of Congress. President Taft, it is well known, will recommend such a provision in the next postoffice bill.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, and Rev. J. W. Musson, of the Temple Baptist church, will exchange pulpits Sunday morning, March 12.

The annual meeting of the Women's Home Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue church will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Rev. Dr. Thomas C. Hall, of Union Theological Seminary, will make the address.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

Henry Ellsworth, the noted lecturer and traveler, of whom the New York Herald recently said: "He knows Oberamergau better than any other American, having spent his last eleven summers there," will appear at the Plainfield theatre, Monday next, matinee and night, for the benefit of St. Mary's new convent. He will present his pictorial reproduction of "Oberamergau, Its People and Their Passion Play of 1910." Mr. Ellsworth has been accorded special privileges by the village authorities of Oberamergau and also by the Passion Play Committee for the accumulation of facts and photographs pertaining to his subject, and both are presented in his lectures in interesting and artistic form. During the past summer, Mr. Ellsworth spent five months at the pretty Bavarian mountain village and witnessed 24 of the 59 performances. His lecture of two hours is illustrated by more than 300 corectly colored photographic views of the village and the Passion Play. Many of these views were Mr. Ellsworth's own work, and in a number of them, the lecturer is to be seen himself.

The first act of "The Traveling Salesman," which comes to the Plainfield theatre on Thursday night next, represents the railroad depot of a small village in the middle west, with the usual furniture that goes with this structure in a rural district. The model which Mr. Forbes has taken for his comedy is said to really be from a village in the western part of Indiana, where Mr. Forbes journeyed during the writing of his play, and where he spent several days in the study of his subject. Not content with a mere replica of the little depot, the author opened negotiations with the railroad officials to buy the old benches with the high backs, which for years had done duty in the little waiting room, and where for years the boys and girls of the village had carved their names side by side.

HERE AND THERE.

Here is another story told by the Rev. Dr. Albertus T. Broek at the annual dinner of the Clinton Avenue Presbyterian church held last week. Dr. Broek excused the tale on the grounds that he wanted to draw a moral; anyhow, he got lots of applause.

"A young wife had just presented her happy husband with triplets, and a young woman friend who had just been married was surveying the phenomenon with awe.

"'And isn't it a strange coincidence,' remarked the mother, reminiscently, 'when John and I were married we were serenaded with the "Three Twins" song.'

"'Mercy!' cried the young bride. 'When Henry and I were married they serenaded us with the "Sextet" from "Luccia De Lammermore."'"

Dr. Broek added that he hoped the Men's Club of the Clinton Avenue Presbyterian church would be serenaded with something equally as encouraging.—Newark Star.

A VENETIAN BANGLE.

A girl who has just come back from Venice wore around her neck over a dark blouse a necklace of rope gold tied loosely at the bust line and finished with two long tassels.

Everyone who saw this chain spoke of its beauty, thinking it an heirloom. The girl confided to a friend finally that her chain was nothing but a rope of tiny gilt glass beads bought in Venice for about 40 cents. "I am sorry now," she said, "that I did not get more of them. I brought one for a friend, and we have both had the same experience. Everyone thinks it one of the old gold chains of Colonial days. Over there they were so plentiful that it cheapened the chain to my own mind."

The friend, who was up in beadwork, straightway copied this chain for herself. She strung twelve strands of coarse yellow silk with the tiniest gilt beads to be found in this country, twisted them into a tightly coiled rope and finished the end with a big gold bead from which hung tassels of the small ones.

The effect was not so good as in the Venetian chain, for the same delicate beads could not be found, but a showy and unusual ornament was achieved to brighten a dark blouse.

Mrs. J. D. Runyon's Will.

Boice, surviving heir. Miss Boice is made sole executor. The value of the property is not stated in the will. John H. VanWinkle, Sr., and John H. VanWinkle, Jr., were witnesses to the document, which was dated July 29, 1902.

Funeral of Mrs. Ann Alston

The funeral of Mrs. Ann Alston was held at 8 o'clock last night at the home of her niece, Mrs. Alexander Martin, 663 East Sixth street. Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, officiated. Mrs. Alston was a member of the Home department of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school, and had resided here about fifteen years. The burial was in Greenwood cemetery today.

Express Train Stalled.

Philadelphia express No. 611, which passes through this city at a mile a minute clip at 12:40, was stalled opposite the Netherwood station at noon today through a defect in the air system of the engine. Another locomotive was sent from Elizaebthport and the train proceeded after a delay of forty minutes. Traffic was maintained over the westbound freight tracks during the blockade.

All-Day Meeting.

The Woman's Christian Work Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church will hold an all-day sewing meeting tomorrow between the hours of 10:30 and 5, when a re-organization will be effected. Officers will be elected and in the afternoon devotional exercises will be held.

Mr. and Mrs. Irvon B. Seevers, of Belvidere avenue, gave a Dutch Supper at their home last night, in honor of the latter's birthday. Sixteen friends were in attendance. An informal social hour followed the supper, during which vocal and instrumental music was enjoyed.

THE LADIES OF PLAINFIELD ARE INVITED TO SEE A DEMONSTRATION OF

THE LADY CLAIRE
ADJUSTABLE · DRESS · FORM

To be Given March 3d, 4th and 5th

From 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. at

155 East Front Street

This exhibition is given in compliance with numerous requests following the private demonstration held the first three days of this week for the dressmakers and ladies' tailors of Plainfield.

All women know the value of a Dress Form that can be adjusted to any figure. Everyone accepting this invitation will see at once the remarkable adjustability of the Lady Claire Adjustable Dress Form to every style of figure, shape or size.

Conforms to Every Curve

Unlike the old-fashioned Dress Forms, each part may be regulated independently of the other—neck, chest, shoulders, hips and skirt being capable of separate adjustment. No single conformation interferes in the slightest with the other.

After measurements are taken, all the fitting, draping, trimming and hanging may be done on the Dress Form, and a perfect fitting garment the result. Never since the introduction of the sewing-machine has such a useful invention been offered to dressmakers and women who dressmake at home.

We invite everyone interested in the use of a Dress Form to call at the above address on the days mentioned, and see a demonstration of the Lady Claire Adjustable Dress Form.

One of New York's leading designers and style authorities will be in attendance. Your call will place you under no obligation, nor will you be importuned to give an order.

DRY CLEANING TALK

Number 2

WHAT IS DRY CLEANING?

Many people have erroneous ideas about what Dry Cleaning really is—believing that their clothes are actually cleaned dry—as if by magic method we pass our hands over the Garment and say "Presto!" It is clean.

Dry is a misnomer. "Chemical" cleaning would be a more intelligent name, but people might confuse "Chemical," thinking of acids, alkalies, etc., not used in Dry Cleaning.

The truth is we depend largely upon gasolene, naphtha, benzine—there's a difference—and other petroleum and coal tar products, for our cleansing bath instead of water as do the launderers.

The secret and successful operations in Dry Cleaning are learned only by hard experience and study, coupled with proper equipment. These are what enable us to do superior work.

We know our business thoroughly and are properly equipped in plant, collection and delivery.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The public schools have an excellent record for punctuality for the month of February. Four classes had but one case of tardiness and the kindergarden class had a perfect record for the month, and won the school penant, which was offered several months ago by Supervising Principal S. Dana Townsend, to the class having the best percentage in attendance for the month. The class winning, having the privilege of flying the penant during the following month or until some other class was able to win the flag from them. The little "kiddies" are the proud possessors of the coveted prize for the present month, although as can be seen by the record, they had to have a perfect score to win out. When one considers the fact that this perfect record was made in one of the worst of the winter monthss, deserve a great deal of praise for winning the honor. The offering of the penant has practically done away with the work of the truant officer. The school has taken a pride in keeping their individual room attendance up to the full enrollment. A number of the pupils have not been absent or tardy during the school year. The enrollment for the month being 283 pupils.

An arm from a towel rack, which was projecting from the kitchen wall came near costing Mrs. Augusta Miller, of Front street, the loss of an eye. Mrs. Miller, while working about the stove, struck her head on the rack, the projecting arm striking the upper part of the eyelid, painfully injuring the optic. Dr. Munger was called and dressed the injury and it is not believed that she will lose the sight of the eye.

Supervising Principal S. Dana Townsend was in Roselle Park yesterday, attending the all day session of the Union County Principals' Association.

ASSEMBLY'S WORK

Conference Held on Four of Governor Wilson's Important Measures.

TO AMEND GERAN BILL.

Public Utilities, Employers' Liability and Corrupt Practices Measures Also are Discussed.

Before the Assembly adjourned for the week late yesterday afternoon the Democratic majority held a conference to consider pending legislation that is favored by Governor Wilson, pamely, the Geran election, public utilities, employers' liability and corrupt practices bills. All of the measures were taken up, but some opposition has developed to the first named on the ground that it is too stringent and is not practicable. The Governor has admitted that the bill needs amending, and it probably will be changed in some important particulars before being brought up for final action.

Because the Governor has confined his conferences on legislation to the Democratic Senators some of the Assemblymen feel that they are not getting fair play, and at yesterday's meeting a committee consisting of Assemblymen Matthews, James, Backus, Ramsey and LeMonte was named to ask Dr. Wilson to attend a conference of the Assembly majority next Monday, when the Geran bill will be again considered. It is believed he will accept the invitation, but should he do so it will be establishing a precedent for a chief executive to go into a legislative conference in this way.

In order that more methodical work and greater haste may be assured the committee appointed this afternoon will also act during the remainder of the session as a steering committee. Little progress has as yet been made, the House being particularly slow in getting down to the more important work.

Assemblyman McCran, leader of the Republicans in the House, tried to have immediate action taken yesterday afternoon on the Nichols direct primary bills, which passed the Senate several weeks ago. Because of the proposed conference with the Governor the majority leader, Mr. Matthews, succeeded by means of a strict party vote in having them laid on the table. Mr. McCran called for a roll call on each measure in order that the Democratic members might be put on record.

Assemblyman Taylor, of Monmouth county, stated that he has sufficient votes pledged to insure the passage in the House of the Ocean Grove Borough bill, in behalf of which the State Committee chairman, Mr. Nugent, has been lobbying. While it is regarded as probable that the emasure will be reported and passed, it is thought that it will be beaten in the Senate by the Republicans. It is believed the refusal of Republicans in the past to enact such legislation induced Monmouth county to send Democrats to the Assembly this year.

A bill appropriating $25,000 for an armory in Mount Holly passed the Assembly and a bill was introduced to create the office of State Fire Marshal, to prevent forest fires, with an annual salary of $3,500. The McCran bill, making it a misdemeanor, with a further penalty, to maliciously print any indecent word in any publication, was passed unanimously.

After a long discussion Assemblyman Bunn's bill providing that eggs be sold by weight was referred back to committee for amendment, the measure failing to specify what kind of eggs were covered in the provision that the basis should be eight to the pound. By a vote of 33 to 14 the McGowan bill, intended for Newark, providing that boards of education receive pay at a salary of $2,500 a year for each Commissioner was defeated.

The Assembly unanimously adopted a resolution offered by Mr. Walsh, of Trenton, directing the supervisor of bills to return to the introducer all measures not complying with the rule which requires that in all cases of proposed amendments to existing laws the bills shall have all new provisions underscored and all old provisions to be stricken out put in brackets.

Mr. Walsh's bill amending the act providing for the State Commission on the Condition of the Blind so that it shall consist of five members, one of whom shall be a blind person, was passed.

Governor Wilson has signed the committee substitute for the bill authorizing the Board of Freeholders in first class cities to acquire lands located near the Court House and to erect buildings for county use. It is an Essex county measure.

MINISTER TO TALK ON BOY PROBLEM

Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews will deliver another series of talks to mothers of boys in Y. M. C. A. Hall on the Friday afternoons of March. The first lecture will be given tomorrow afternoon at 3:30. All mothers and teachers will be welcome.

The general subject of the lecture is "Obedience." The topic for tomorrow will be "Jimmie, James and Jim, or The Problem Stated from the View-point of the Boy." The synopsis follows:

1. The child, the heir of all ages. Are our children depraved? An eminent educator discovers that children have 917 faults. The body of the boy as the basis of conduct—philosophic versus physiological morality. The relation between muscles—the weaker the body the more its commands, the stronger it is the more it obeys. Weakness, however, is not always wickedness. The passing and the permanent in personality. Nor is apparent wickedness always weakness. "The life of the world is caged in the cerebrospinal nervous system of the veriest child."

2. How good environment corrects bad heredity when the mind is "wax to receive and marble to retain." The will of the child a trust to be administered. Parents must compel what children will later wish to compel themselves to do. "The way of the transgressor is hard" but there is no easy way to righteousness—this law is for the child as well as the man.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning March 5, 1911.

Topic.—Lessons from great lives.—III Moses.—Ex. iii, 1-14. (Consecration meeting.) Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The life of Moses is more easily outlined than that of any other of the ancient Jewish patriarchs. It is divided by years—and each division opens a new period in his life—into three equal parts. He died at the age of 120 years. The first forty years of his life were spent in Egypt, the second forty in Midian at the home of a relative called Jethro and the last forty years in the wilderness, leading the children of Israel in their wanderings, when God brought them to the west shore of the Jordan, whence they were to enter Canaan, but without Moses because of his disobedience and hastiness on a certain part of the journey in the wilderness. Then from Mount Nebo he was permitted to look over into the promised land. But there he died, and God buried him on the lonely mountain when he had seen the promised land, but was not destined to enter, though it must have been the chief desire of his heart. But one sin, one act of disobedience, disbarred him, as many are shut out from the heavenly Canaan.

A glimpse of Moses' life may not be unprofitable.

1. He spent forty years in Egypt. He was born when Hebrew males under two years of age were to be put to death to decrease the population of a foreign people in Egypt. Joseph and his work of saving the nation had been forgotten. Egypt feared an internal uprising of this ever increasing nation or with any outside enemy, which would mean Egypt's sure defeat; hence the edict to kill the male children. Moses escaped and was raised in the king's palace by the clever action of his mother. Here he received a fine education, which was undoubtedly God's purpose in saving him as he did, that he might possess the knowledge which was necessary for the great work which God had for him to do. When forty years old Moses was told his mission and began at once and alone by killing an Egyptian. The next day he fled from his task and went to the land of Median.

2. Moses in Midian. Here he lived with Jethro for forty years, became acquainted with God, who appeared to him. The purpose of God in sending him to Midian was to calm his disposition, and when God called him again he had become the meekest of meek and tried to give excuses. But God answered all his excuses, and at last the second period of his life was over, and he returned to Egypt to demand by the order of God that Israel under his leadership be allowed to leave the land. At last, God having sent ten plagues upon the Egyptians, the king granted his request, though he again repented, followed with his army, which died in the Red sea.

3. The third period of forty years was spent in the wilderness, leading the people here and there until all had died who started from Egypt, except Joshua, Caleb and Moses. They spent a long time at Mount Sinai when the people, hitherto only a mob, were formed into a state and a church. The tabernacle was made; public worship was inaugurated. God here gave Moses the Ten Commandments on tables of stone. Laws to govern the people were also made, and Moses became the greatest lawgiver in the world's history. Moses was one of the world's great men. With but one exception he was faithful to every command of God. From a quick tempered man he became the meekest by the lesson he learned in Midian. His life may well be studied as one of those that lift up the lives of others.

BIBLE READINGS.

Ex. ii, 1-10, 11-25; iii, 15-22; iv, 1-18; xiv, 10-18, 27-31; xv, 23-27; xvi, 1-8; xviii, 17-27; xx, 1-20; xxxiv, 1-12; Heb. xi, 24-31.

ENDEAVOR SNAPSHOTS.

Christian Endeavor is my favorite avenue for the expression of love for Christ through service.—John R. Clements.

The reason for the lapse of Christian Endeavor in many instances is because we are doing careless work. * * * Make the Christian Endeavor society the place for expression.—Mrs. Ida L. Dukes.

God has a high ideal for every Christian Endeavor life.—A. J. Shartle.

The vitality of Christian Endeavor and its fitness for any country have made a great impression on me as I have journeyed around the world.—William Shaw.

Hard on the Long Faces.

If any of those misguided pessimists who are going around with long faces croaking, "Oh, the conventions are not what they used to be;" "Christian Endeavor is losing its power;" "We don't find the enthusiasm of former days," had been with me on this convention round I think they would have sung a different time. Still, I am not sure. It is hard to teach a pessimist anything. Present day facts have little weight with him. "The former days" are always "better than these." His golden age is always in the past. Let him live in the past if he will. Christian Endeavor lives in the present and the future.—Francis E. Clark, D. D.

Feet So Sore Couldn't Walk Down Stairs—
TIZ Cured Her Quick

If you have sore feet, tired feet, sweaty feet, lame feet, tender feet, smelly feet, corns, callouses or bunions, read what happened to Mrs. Crockett, of Jeffersonville. TIZ DID IT. Mr. Crockett says: "After the second treatment she walked downstairs one foot at a time. She has not been able to walk downstairs before in past five years, except by stepping down on each step with one foot at a time. This is remarkable. Send five more boxes."

No matter what ails your feet or what under heaven you have used without getting relief, just use TIZ. It's different. It acts right off. It cures sore feet to stay cured. It's the only foot remedy ever made which acts on the principle of drawing out all the poisonous exudations which cause sore feet. Powders and other remedies merely clog up the pores. TIZ cleans them out and keeps them clean. You will feel better the first time it's used. Use it a week and you can forget you ever had sore feet. There is nothing on earth that can compare with it. TIZ is for sale at all druggists, 25c per box, or direct, if you wish, from Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Lincoln's Order

By F. A. MITCHEL

During the summer of 1862 while serving in the Army of the Potomac I was sent to Washington by my captain to purchase some supplies for his mess. Walking on Pennsylvania avenue, in uniform, I was stopped by an old lady, who said to me:

"I see that you are one of the noble boys who are fightin' for your country. I have a son down there across the Potomac. He was wounded in the fight the other day. I'm tryin' to get down there to take care of him. I tried this mornin' to cross Long bridge, but a man with a gun stopped me."

While I sympathized with the old lady, I was very much amused at her simplicity. I was but twenty years old and more full of Old Nick than common sense, so I concluded to chaff her a bit.

"If you wish that man with a gun to let you go down to see your boy you'll have to get a pass," I said to her.

"Who gives out passes?" she asked.

"The president."

"Where can I find him?" asked the old lady.

"At the White House. You follow this avenue along till you pass a jog in the street, turn to your right, then to your left, and you can't miss it. Tell him I sent you."

"What's your name?"

"Thedore Farnsworth, —th Pennsylvania."

Of course I gave her an assumed name.

"What kind of a lookin' man is the president?" she asked. "There's sich a crowd o' people pushin' their way in everywhere here that I'd like to know somepin about the man I'm lookin' for before I go to see him."

"Mr Lincoln is a little bit of a fellow."

"I though that was Senator Douglas."

"No; it's Mr. Lincoln. He's the smallest man in the United States."

"Oh, I got it the other way. I'm much obliged to you for givin' me all this information. I 'spect your mother's worritin' about you. If I knew her address I'd write her and tell her how kind you've been to me."

This gave me a twinge of conscience. I certainly didn't propose that she should write my mother what I had told her and didn't furnish her with the address. The old lady went toward the White House, and I went about my business.

The same afternoon while on the street I heard a voice behind me:

"General Farnsworth!"

I did not suspect that the voice called me, but it was so close to me that I turned. There was the old lady who had stopped me in the morning.

"General," she said. Being a high private, I wilted at being called "general." "I want to thank you over and over again for the favor you done me this mornin'."

"Did you see the president?" I asked.

"No; I didn't see Mr. Lincoln, but I saw some one that done all I wanted."

"How was that?"

"Well, I went to the White House, as you told me to do, but the man at the door said Mr. Lincoln was busy just then. But he must 'a' told me an untruth, for a couple o' men came down stairs just then, and I heard one of 'em say to the other, 'The president has just gone over to the war department.' So thinks I I'll just step over to the war department and see him there. I inquired the way, and as I went in I met a tall, thin man with a stovepipe hat and an umbrella comin' out. I said to him:

"'I heard the president is in here. I want to see him. Kin you tell me where to find him?'

"'What do you want to see him about?' asked the man, bendin' down to hear my answer.

"I told him that my son had been wounded down in Virginia and I had started across the bridge to go down and take care of him, but the man with the gun I was tellin' you about had stopped me. I said I wanted Mr. Lincoln to tell that man with the gun to let me go by.

"'Come with me,' he said.

"So I trots along, the tall man takin' one step to my three—he has the longest legs I ever seen—and he asked me all about my son and what regiment he was in and all about him. When we got to the White House he just walked right by the man at the door and took me with him upstairs, just as if he had as good a right there as the president himself. He opened a door and said somepin to a young man writin' at a desk, but I didn't hear what it was. Then he set me down in a room, and that's the last I seen of him. But pretty soon the young man he spoke to came in and give me this."

She handed me an envelope. I hurriedly took a paper from it and glanced at the signature. It was "A. Lincoln."

The paper was an order not only to pass the woman anywhere she liked in our lines, but to furnish her with transportation and any supplies of quartermaster or commissary or hospital stores she might need.

I was terribly ashamed of my boyish, thoughtless heartlessness.

"Madam," I said, "have you any money in your pocket?"

"Yes; I got $2."

"You'll need more."

I pulled a small roll of bills from my pocket—$20, all I had—and handed it to her, saying:

"You can pay this when you like to General Farnsworth."

And I got away from her before she could say another word.

CHAPTER XX.

AN UNWILLING CATSPAW.

Having reached his office, Mr. Foscombe struck the hand bell on his desk.

"Tell Pring to make out Isaac Pepperday's account," he said, and the clerk vanished. A few minutes later a tall, cadaverous looking man in a rusty black frock coat handed him a slip of blue paper, from which it appeared that Mr. Isaac Pepperday was indebted to the executors of the late Reuben Foscombe in the sum of £46 3s. 11d. With a nod Mr. Foscombe dismissed the clerk, and then, folding up the slip of blue paper, he placed it in his pocketbook.

"That ought to make the gentleman amenable to reason," he whispered to himself. Then he sent for a hansom and had himself driven to the Temple.

After climbing two pairs of stairs Mr. Foscombe found himself opposite a white painted door upon which, among three or four others, was the name of Mr. Ashton Brooke.

The door was swiftly opened by Mr. Brooke's clerk, a queer, thin, half starved looking man with iron gray hair standing straight up from his forehead so as to give him a look of being continually surprised. His eyes were red and weak; they blinked at the solicitor as if they were limelights. When he saw who the visitor was he seemed to shrink back a little.

"Mr Ashton Brooke is not in chambers, sir. He is on the continent at present. I don't expect him back for a fortnight, sir."

"I scarcely expected to find Mr. Brooke at home," said the solicitor, who had kept his eyes fixed steadily on the clerk's face, "It was you I came to see."

"Me, sir?" faltered Pepperday, falling back a step.

"Yes; only a little matter of business. Can I come in?"

"Certainly, sir. Will you walk this way?"

He ushered the solicitor into a large, handsomely furnished room, the tenant of which was just then in Switzerland.

"I have been going over my late father's accounts," said Mr. Foscombe, with a quiet, businesslike air, "and I found your name among the list of debtors. The money should have been collected two years ago, so I hope you will settle the amount without delay." As he spoke he handed the unhappy clerk the slip of blue paper.

Pepperday looked at the figures and groaned.

"Believe me, Mr. Foscombe, sir, I can no more pay off this than I could buy up the city of London."

"Oh, nonsense, Pepperday," said the lawyer brusquely.

"I am telling you the truth, sir. My post here is a very comfortable one for a man of my years, but I married, sir, rather late in life, and I find children a great expense. My poor wife is not very strong"—

"What on earth is all that to me?" said Foscombe in a voice which he made purposely hard. "People have no business to marry if they can't pay their debts. All I know is you will have to pay this"—he reached out his hand and gave the slip of blue paper a vicious fillip as he spoke—"or be turned into the street. I suppose you have some furniture?"

"Yes, sir—of course, sir. A little, sir. But surely you wouldn't touch that? You wouldn't break up my home?"

"I told you before that I am here to talk business, not sentiment," said the lawyer sharply.

"Sentiment!" echoed the clerk. And something seemed to give him fresh courage, for he drew himself up a little and took a step nearer to his persecutor.

"Do you know how I came to begin this?" he said, shaking the slip of blue paper in the lawyer's face. And without waiting for an answer he went on: "I was a junior clerk in your father's office, and I had charge of the petty cash. I was £1 short in my accounts"—

"You embezzled that amount, you mean?"

"Call it embezzlement if you like, sir. Your father didn't prosecute me. He knew a trick worth two of that. Nor he didn't deduct a sovereign from my wages. He lent me a sovereign to pay him with and charged me a shilling a month interest. When the shilling a month wasn't paid it was added to the sovereign. By degrees the debt amounted up till I owed your father more than £10, and then I saw it was hopeless for me ever to think of getting free. It's been like a millstone round my neck all these years. It's been growing all the time, though I've paid off pounds and pounds; and now, just when I thought that the balance of the old debt would be forgiven me and I had got my little home together, you come down on me like this!"

"I suppose this affair means ruin to you," Foscombe said, looking up suddenly.

"It does, sir; complete, total ruin."

"Well, a way has just struck me by which it may be averted. I think it possible that you may be able to render us a service, in return for which I would hand you a receipt in full."

"Oh, sir," cried the clerk, clasping his hands, while his eyes filled with tears, "I would do anything! I would work till I couldn't see to write another line. Only tell me what I can do for you."

The solicitor fell into a silence. Pepperday heaved a sigh.

"Mr. Lorimer is a great friend of your Mr. Ashton Brooke, and has been inquiring for him lately."

"Yes, sir, only a few days ago."

"It would be a very easy matter, I should say, for an intelligent person to slip into Mr. Ashton Brooke's bedroom and hold the door leading into the sitting room slightly ajar, so as to hear any conversation that was going on."

Pepperday gave a great start, and again the tears sprang to the watery eyes.

"Oh, sir," he cried, trembling all over, "I can't do anything like that, not to save my life, sir! Except that sovereign I told you of, I have always acted square, and Mr. Ashton Brooke has been a good master to me, sir"—

"Who is asking you to do anything to hurt Mr. Ashton Brooke?" cried the solicitor angrily. "He is nothing to me. My business is not with him at all. But I expect that very soon after he returns to town he will have a call from Mr. Guy Lorimer. Mr. Lorimer will most likely come to consult him about some affairs of his own, and I want to know exactly what he says to him and what course he decides upon. Don't you see that if you tell me the gist of the conversation you do no harm either to your master or yourself or to any one else? You only provide me with a little information, which may be useful or may not, and which I am willing to pay for very handsomely."

"God help me!" exclaimed the clerk, turning his head aside. "What must I do?"

"Do?" echoed the lawyer, giving him a slap on the shoulder. "Use your chance of getting free while you can. One would think that I had been asking you to commit murder. I am only asking you to repeat a conversation, a thing that is done every day. Will you do it or will you not?"

"I must, sir, if there's no other way."

"There's no other way to save your wife and children from beggary," said the lawyer, emphatically nodding his head, "and you may be thankful that you have such an easy way of escape offered to you. Once more, will you do it?"

"Yes, sir. There seems to be no help for it. I'll do it."

"Then see that you don't lose a word of what passes between your master and Mr. Lorimer. Write down immediately afterward as much of it as you can remember and come at once to see me. If you do the work satisfactorily I will give you a stamped receipt for all you owed to my father and a sovereign for yourself as well."

And having thus enlisted on his behalf the two great allies of fear and avarice Mr. Foscombe quitted the chambers.

CHAPTER XXI.

IN A HOSPITAL WARD.

The kindness and consideration with which Eva found herself treated on her first night in London were continued day after day. Two of the best rooms in the house were placed at her disposal, and her maid had a large room that served both as bedroom and sitting room. The mistress of the house never intruded on her guest.

The girl saw plainly enough that for all her comfort she was indebted to the kindness of her host. He did his best to cheer her and prevent the time from hanging too heavily on her hands. Every night after dinner he would follow her up to her sitting room and stand an hour chatting with her or persuade her to stay in the large drawing room downstairs and play or sing a little. And sometimes he would stay at home of a morning and persuade her to take a drive, and once or twice he came in the afternoon and induced her to go with him to a picture gallery.

Twice a day she had news of her lover by telegraph. Sometimes the telegrams were signed "Guy," sometimes they were from his clerk. But Eva could not understand how it was that her lover did not write. Even a line or two scrawled in pencil would have been a treasure to her. She had to be content with Mr. Foscombe's assurance that the doctor would not allow him the use even of a pencil.

Once Mr. Foscombe took her in a hansom to the Temple, and she waited outside in the cab while he ran upstairs and pretended to come down with messages from her absent lover.

She longed to go up and see him, and she could not understand why Mr. Foscombe seemed to think the idea quite inadmissible. But she knew that her position was a strange one, and she was anxious to keep within the limits of convention when she called.

On their way home from the Temple, when the horse was going at a swift pace along a wide street, they were startled by loud cries of terror and confusion. Something was happening behind them—a street accident most likely.

Instinctively the driver slackened speed, and both the man and the girl rose and attempted by peering out round the corner of the cab window to find out what had happened. But Foscombe was first. His additional height gave him an advantage, and, besides, he was on the right side of the cab. What he saw was this: Guy Lorimer, running straight for their hansom, was being knocked down by a two horse van.

The lawyer turned very pale. For the moment he could not speak. Was he killed? That was his first thought. And the second was, Had the girl at his side seen what he had seen?

A glance at her face reassured him on this point. Her expression was that of a sensitive and kind hearted girl who is grieved and shocked when she is brought near to suffering of any kind, but there was no trace of any special anxiety in her look.

"I am afraid there has been an accident," he said, trying to steady his voice as well as he could. "We had better drive on."

"Oh, you would not drive away till we hear who has been hurt, and whether he is much injured? Couldn't we be of some use?"

"My dear Miss Fitzgerald," said Foscombe, with a smile, "the police are on the spot, and there is a hospital close by. We would not be allowed to interfere even if we wished to do so, and there is nothing we could possibly do. But we might wait round the corner till we can learn some particulars."

"Yes, we might as well do that," said Eva. And Foscombe jumped out of the cab and, telling the cabman to wait, went back to see what he could glean of the affair.

There was a dense crowd in the middle of the street, but Foscombe pushed and elbowed his way till he reached the innermost ring. Yes, there could be no doubt of it—that white face lying on the asphalt was the face of Guy Lorimer.

"Is he dead?" he whispered in a shaking voice to the nearest policeman.

"We don't think he is dead," said the man, "but we have sent for a stretcher, and they will soon find out at the hospital what is wrong. Do you know the gentleman, sir?" he asked, noticing the expression of the lawyer's face.

Foscombe shook his head and pushed his way out of the crowd.

"A man has been knocked down, but he is not killed," he said to Eva, with affected cheerfulness. They are going to take him to the hospital. Shall I tell the cabman to drive on?"

"I suppose you may as well," said the girl, with a little sigh.

On the way home the lawyer's active brain was at work trying to find out how he might fit in this accident with the plot in which he was engaged. And in the end an idea suggested itself to him, bold and hazardous, but one that promised to dispel forever the doubts which, he could see, sometimes haunted the mind of the girl he was deceiving.

In the morning he went to the hospital and was told that Guy was still unconscious and that the doctors feared he might remain in an unconscious or semiconscious state for some time, but that it was quite possible that he might recover. Foscombe saw his opportunity and began operations at once. His first step was to send a telegram to Eva, purporting to come from Guy's clerk, to say that Mr. Lorimer seemed rather worse, and as it was impossible to be properly nursed in chambers he had decided to go to a hospital. He then sat down and wrote a short obituary notice suitable for a newspaper paragraph. This he took to a news agent in the Strand and arranged for its appearance in an obscure paper in the north of England.

When he reached home that evening Eva was waiting for him in the hall. Her eyes showed traces of tears, and she was palpitating with excitement.

"Oh, Mr. Foscombe," she cried, "Mr. Lorimer is worse and has been taken to a hospital! Don't you think I could go there and see him?"

"Now I am glad he has had the sense to do that!" exclaimed the lawyer, with an air of relief. "I have been preaching to him all this time that he would never get well cooped up in his little bedroom without proper nursing. He will be all right now, take my word for it."

"But the telegram says he is worse."

"Not seriously worse, I think," said Foscombe after looking at the telegram. "I think it means only that he was not feeling so well as yesterday. At any rate, the advantage of being in hospital under proper treatment will more than make up for that."

"Oh, you have given me comfort—great comfort, Mr. Foscombe! But you always do that!" cried Eva, her cheeks flushed and her eyes shining. The scoundrel turned away his head. For the moment it was rather more than he could bear.

Eva wondered why he turned away and did not answer her. Perhaps, she thought, he was one of those people who cannot bear to be praised.

She led the way upstairs. "Don't you think that as he is in the hospital I might try to see him tomorrow?" she asked when she had reached the landing.

"Certainly. I will go down tomorrow morning and find out the hour when you can be admitted."

"Oh, thank you—thank you a thousand times. You are so good to me. What in the world should I have done without you?"

Again the stab of his accusing conscience was sharper than a knife in his heart. He turned awkwardly round, muttered something that the girl could scarcely hear and ran upstairs to his own room.

Foscombe had fallen in love with her, and he now asked himself why he should allow the baronet to carry off the prize. Since Eva was to be deceived why should he not reap the reward himself? Why not marry her and secure her fortune and leave the baronet out altogether? He knew, indeed, that Sir Rufus had some strong power over the girl's mother, but that, he told himself, was not his affair. Let Lady Roscommon look out for herself.

Of course it would be an easy matter for Sir Rufus to ruin his chances of wedded happiness by telling Eva that Guy still lived and that he had only succeeded in deceiving her by practicing on her the basest and cruelest deception. But even this did not move him from his purpose. He had determined to make Eva his own at any cost—any cost to her happiness or his own interests.

Next morning he sent for a hansom and proposed to Eva that she should drive to the hospital with him and wait in the cab while he ascertained whether she could be allowed to see Guy. Of course she eagerly consented, and they drove off together.

On the way Eva mentioned that her maid Virginie had left her that morning. "She has been very impertinent lately," said Eva, "and I think she must have been really trying to get me to dismiss her."

"We must get you another maid," he said.

"Oh, please don't! I don't want to be bothered with a maid at present. She would only be an incumbrance."

"But you must have a companion of some kind."

"No," said Eva, "I would rather be alone." And her tone was so full of sadness that he thought it better to drop the subject.

When they reached the hospital Foscombe alighted and went in. He was gone some time, and when he came out Eva saw that his face was very grave. Her heart sank.

"Is he worse?" she breathed.

"Yes; I am sorry to say he is rather worse. I am afraid he delayed being taken to the hospital too long."

"Can I see him?"

"Yes; there would be no objection to that. But I am afraid it would be very painful to you. The fact is he is unconscious."

"Oh, I ought to have insisted on seeing him before!" She buried her face in her hands and her whole body shook with her sobs. "I must see him at once."

He helped her out of the cab and together they passed into the hospital. One of the nurses came up to them and Foscombe said something to her in a whisper. She turned and led them half way up the ward. Suddenly Eva caught sight of her lover. She darted forward and in a moment was kneeling by his side. His head was bandaged, his face was white as death, his eyes were open and they had a fixed, meaningless stare. One long look at the loved face and Eva's head sank into her hands.

"She must not make a scene," the nurse said to Foscombe. Low as the words were spoken Eva heard them.

"No, no!" she gasped. "I will be very quiet just in a moment."

She rose to her feet, took off her glove and laid her hand on his cheek. But he took no notice except that his eyes wandered till they fixed themselves on her face.

"Do you know me, Guy? It is I—Eva. Don't you know me? Do speak to me." An inarticulate murmur came from his lips. "He knows me!" cried the girl. "Guy, dear!" and she bent down and kissed him.

Foscombe questioned the nurse with his eyes and she shook her head. But Eva was right. When he came back to consciousness Guy believed that he had seen Eva in a dream, for it seemed impossible to him that she should have been kneeling at his side.

She waited a few minutes and Eva was obliged to own that Guy had given no other sign of consciousness.

"What is the bandage for?" she asked, and the nurse answered, "Ice."

There were many questions she wanted to ask, but the nurse was impatient that she should be gone, and Foscombe hurried her away. The only question to which she got an answer was, "Do the doctors think he will recover?"

"It is quite possible, they say," answered the nurse, "but no doubt it is a dangerous case." Eva's eyes were fixed on the nurse's face, and she did not see Foscombe give a slight frown and shake of the head which the nurse interpreted to mean that he did not think it was wise to give her any further information. She turned to attend to another patient, and Foscombe, taking Eva's hand, gently placed it on his arm and led her out of the ward.

That evening Eva received a telegram from Mr. Foscombe. It read:

Have inquired at the hospital. Sorry to say no improvement. Doctors fear for the worst. Shall be detained late tonight on business, but you shall hear from me in the morning.

The girl spent a night of miserable anxiety. In the morning a second telegram was put into her hands. She had scarcely strength to tear it open, and when she read it she sank on her knees with a moan, for the message was this:

Deeply grieved to say Guy much worse. Died at 4 o'clock this morning.

CAUGHT?

Have you been caught in the web of prejudice and habit like the fly in the spider's web? There are some people who are so foolish that they actually turn away from a store where they can get articles at a reasonable price, and hunt up places where they know they are paying, not for the goods, but for the sake of being seen in those places, and to have certain high-toned delivery wagons stand at their door. If you have been so foolish as to get into that habit, try to get out of it. Hunt up the place where you can get the best goods at the lowest prices. TALK OF A SUCCESSOR TO COL. NELSON DUNGAN.

There are already signs of a sharp contest over the selection of a commander of the Second Regiment to succeed Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan, whose appointment to the Circuit Court bench will, it is expected in Trenton, be followed by his resignation from the National Guard.

Lieutenant-Colonel George L. Forman, of Trenton, who is naturally in line for the place, would like to have the colonelcy for a year at least, but he is not likely to get it without a contest. Booms have already been launched by officers of the regiment in favor of Horace M. Reading, of Lambertville, the senior major, and Major William B. Martin, of Elizabeth.

of the building had become a roaring furnace and the flames were mounting skyward 150 feet when the first detail of the firemen arrived on the scene. Chief Doane and Captain Jennings saw at once that the main building was doomed and bent their efforts at saving the east wing. Here are located the engine room, kitchen and laundry. These parts were saved.

Priest Saves Vessels.

Father Baldwin, the priest in charge, labored hard to save some of the contents and when assistance arrived helped in directing the movements of the police in getting out what could be reached in the way of furniture. He saved the holy vessels of the chapel, but was severely cut in attempting to get out with other pieces of furniture.

The admirable discipline of the pupils was marvelously displayed when the fire alarm was sounded by Sister Cecilia. They gathered quickly in what clothing was nearest and following their usual fire drill without a tremor of fear followed their preceptress out of the building, taking refuge temporarily in the barn farthest removed from the blazing building.

A Neighbor's Kindness.

Mrs. J. A. Staats aided the work of the firemen and police by preparing a boiler full of hot coffee which was given out as required and appreciated more than is easily told. Mr. Staats carried the steaming coffee to the scene of the conflagration in his automobile and he did yeoman service with his car in bringing children to the refuge in North Plainfield. Howard Woolston likewise came in for praise from the sisters for his gallant work. Mr. Woolston was here, there and everywhere directing, pulling out furniture and otherwise encouraging the fight against flames.

Fire Apparatus.

The fire apparatus sent in answer to the alarm consisted of the chemical engine and steamer, but their usefulness as fire extinguishers was practically nil in view of the fact that there was no water to pump and that the roaring furnace would simply have absorbed the chemical like a hungry cat would a fish. However, they rendered valuable help in saving the other buildings adjacent to those burned.

Viewed from the city the blaze was a spectacular one. From the top of the tower there issued a pillar of flame reaching high into the heavens, illuminating the surrounding country for miles in many directions. A newspaper might have been read with ease at a distance of half a mile from the fire.

Sisters' Colleges.

Mount St. Mary's College was situated on the southern slope of the picturesque Watchung mountains, above the interscetion of Mountain avenue and Terrill road, in the township of North Plainfield. It represented an expenditure of $150,000 and was erected by the State order of the Sisters of Mercy, who in 1873 opened their first institution at Bordentown, later opening institutions at Princeton in 1878, Louisville in 1883, Camden 1885, South Amboy 1885, Burlington 1886, Cape May 1886, Phillipsburg 1887, Red Bank 1888, Raritan 1889, Perth Amboy 1890, Woodbridge 1890, Keyport 1890, Bound Brook 1894, Sayreville 1895, St. Joseph's, North Plainfield 1897, Lakewood 1898, East Trenton 1899, the Cathedral School, Trenton 1906, and Star of the Sea Academy, Atlantic City 1908.

Mt. St. Mary's

The beautiful college building destroyed this morning was designed by architect William A. Boring, of New York. The corner stone was laid on Sunday, May 26, by the Rt. Rev. Bishop McFaul, assisted by Mgr. J. H. Fox, who, after the laying of the stone delivered an address upon "The Influence of Christian Womenhood," which those who were present will remember for many days to come. The ceremonies were conducted during a heavy downpour of rain but thousands of people stood patiently by. The dedication ceremonies were held on Sunday, October 18, 1980, when Bishop McFaul again presided and church dignitaries, men prominent in State affairs and societies from all the surrounding towns witnessed the ceremonies. The college was first opened for classes on October 1, 1908.

Building Described.

The institution was an impressive looking structure of brick and limestone, with a facade of 200 feet. It commanded a superb view of the famous "Picture Lands" of New Jersey. Accomodations were provided for 200 pupils and nearly the same number of sister as instructors. The building was three stories in height and contained ninety-eight rooms. The length was 200 feet and depth eighty-two. A single story addition was afterwar erected on the east end, where were situated the kitchen, heating plant, supply rooms and laundry. In the main buliding, there were eleven music rooms, two physical and chemical laboratories, four dormitories, sixty private rooms and one of the best equipped gymnasiums in the country. The Sisters of Mercy were assisted in their huge undertaking by David T. Kenney, of North Plainfield, who donated the forty acres of land on which the building stood, half a mile up the slope from Mountain avenue. The Bordentown institution was abandoned on the completion of Mount St. Mary's and all students were transferred here.

SALARY OF POLICE CLERK TO BE $1,000.

Elizabeth, March 2.—The City Council last night passed on second reading the ordinance appropriating $20,000 for a bond issue to be used to defray the expenses of acquiring the new library site at South Broad street and Rahway avenue. This decision was reached after a lengthy conference.

The ordinance which failed of passage at the last meting and which fixed the salary of Police Court Clerk James F. Brown was passed last night on first and second reading. It provided a salary of $600 per annum. To this was added an amendment making the salary $1,000 yearly, and the ordinance was supported unanimously. At the last meeting the $600 salary proposition, as well as a $1,200 proposition, were defeated, as was an amendment fixing the salary at $900 per year. The law provides that the maximum salary be $1,200. In Camden, Hoboken and Trenton, the other cities affected by the law, the maximum sum is paid.

In answer to a question Comptroller Sauer explained that work on the public dock shed had not been begun because difficulty was found in disposing of the bonds advantageously. It was only through an older agreement that the $2[illegible]000 river bonds were disposed of so readily, he said.

Dr. Frank P. Warncke was appointed city physician in the downtown wards and Dr. Thomas F. Higgins in the upper section of the city.

State Fire Marshal Plan.

In the House yesterday, Mr. McGowan offered a bill to create the office of State fire marshal. He would gather statistics of fires and a permit from him would be required for the storage, sale and transportation of explosives, except in municipalities, where such supervision is provided by ordinance. He would also have the right to investigate suspicious fires. It is the same as a bill offered last year by Mr. Goldingay.

Rev. Thomas Francis, of Jersey City, will continue his series of Bible lessons under the auspices of the Woman's Christian and Missionary Alliance in the church at Duer street and Craig place, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. Irving Manley will sing a solo.

FOREIGN MISSIONARY SEMI-CENTENNIAL

The fiftieth anniversary of the inception of organized work in the foreign missionary field will be celebrated this month in New York. Mrs. W. A. Montgomery, one of the leaders in the missionary field, has consented to present the cause before the great gatherings on March 27-30. The Women's Union Missionary Society, the first of its kind, was organized in New York in 1860 by Mrs. T. C. Doremus and it is believed fitting that this semi-centennial should therefore take the form partly as a memorial to her.

Local societies connected with the movement to stimulate foreign missionary work will take an active part in the coming celebration. They include members of the Congregational, Baptist, Presbyterian and Episcopal churches. The schedule of events as prepared by the New York committee of which Mrs. Samuel J. Broadwell, is chairman, is as follows:

March 27, a. m. Quiet day. Central committee, New York executive, speakers. Chairmen of jubilee meetings, to spend the day at Murray Hill Hotel in prayer and consultation. P. M., pageant and young people's meeting, Metropolitan Opera House.

March 28, a. m. Praise and prayer, with definite objects. Calvary Baptist church, Fifty-seventh street, New York. P. M., to meet the pioneers. Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church, Fifty-fifth street. Evening, with the authors of the study books. Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church, Fifty-fifth street.

March 29, a. m. Conference of workers, Calvary Baptist church. Drawing-room meetings.

1 p. m. Luncheon and addresses, at Hotel Astor.

Evening. Missionary prayer meetings in all churches.

March 30 a. m. Denominational rallies. Places to be announced. P. M., Reports from all meetings and outline of future advance.

Evening. Jubilee climax, Carnegie Hall.

TRENTON EFFORT TO CENTRALIZE CHARITY

Trenton, March 2.—To further the plan proposed by the charity committee of the Inter-church Federation, of centralizing the investigation of charity cases, a joint committee composed of representatives of the Inter-church Federation, the Chamber of Commerce and the Know-Your-City week committee met last week and appointed a sub-committee, to outline a plan for a bureau of associated charities.

The joint session was the result of an invitation of the charity committee of the Inter-church Federation.

This committee will prepare its report and will submit it within a week to the general committee. A number of sugegstions for the central bureau were made and it is the aim of the organizers of the new bureau to make it one that will be far in advance of any charity bureau now in existence.

The plan suggested by the Inter-church Federation's committee was that all church and other charitable agencies including the city's department, co-operate and establish a central office, where reports of aid extended shall be kept and where investigations of reported cases of destitution shall be kept on file for the mutual information of all charitable organizations and individuals.

It is planned to entirely eliminate religious lines in this central bureau.

Under such a bureau reported cases of need would be investigated and then reports made to the organizations or individulas seeking the information, leaving the work of giving aid to the various organizations and individuals as at present. In this way there would be no conflict between the aiding mediums, because when the investigations are completed the work of the central bureau will cease, except in special cases, where the necessity of combined assistance is shown.

The Men's Association of Warren chapel will hold its monthly meeting tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the chapel.

INEXPENSIVE HOG HOUSE.

Easily Portable and Can Be Made With an Outlay of $5 or Less.

The hog house shown in the accompanying illustration is ten feet long by five feet wide, the shed is seven feet and the open pen in front three feet. The pen is three feet high, the shed four feet at the front, sloping to three at the back; four corner posts, 2 by 4, three feet long, and two uprights at front of roof, 2 by 4, four feet long; six boards one foot wide and sixteen feet long make sides and ends; boards one foot wide and seven feet long, cut from corner to corner, will give necessary slope to the roof. The roof may be of board, iron or any roofing. If iron is used it should be laid over building paper to prevent sweating.

If made of pine these houses cost about $5 each, but when made of native lumber they cost less. When a lid is put over the opening in front the houses are weatherproof and safe for farrowing sows at any season. In extremely cold spells they may be warmed with a small oil stove and made as comfortable as a high priced artificially heated house could be made.

Finished Hog House.

Five ten-foot boards make a floor, which can be laid in seasons when one is necessary and when not in use can be easily taken up and stored away for another year. Any man can easily move one of these houses with a stoneboat, and when they are to be moved a distance two can be put on a hay frame. The low cost and the ease with which they are moved should recommend a house of this kind to the renter, who is liable to find poor facilities for hog raising on many farms.

CARE OF DRINKING WATER.

Neglect of Wells Is One of the Greatest Aids to the Spread of Diseases.

In dry seasons, when wells, cisterns and country sources of water supply run low and are liable to be tainted, there is need for taking extra care to secure pure drinking water, thus avoiding serious and often fatal illness.

It is now well known that germ infested water is the chief source of the dreaded typhoid fever, diphtheria and various intestinal disorders, and it cannot therefore be too cautiously guarded against.

The germs cannot in most cases be detected by the color or odor of the liquid. It may even have passed through a filter and appear clear and sparkling and yet be poisonous.

For washing and even cooking purposes absolutely pure water, though desirable, is not essential, as the heating in the preparation of food and often of coffee renders it innocuous, and in bathing there is not sufficient absorption by the skin to do injury.

But drinking water is nowadays scarcely ever safe until after it has been boiled. This is somewhat troublesome, especially for the supply of a large and thirsty family, but it is a precaution that may save weeks and months of far more arduous nursing, to say nothing of the attendant suffering and anxiety.

The "flatness" of boiled water may be to a certain extent overcome by pouring it back and forth from one vessel to another in the open air for a few minutes.

It is safest also to avoid cooling any beverages by putting into them lumps of ice, even that which is professedly made of distilled water, as any housekeeper will comprehend when she examines the "drip" from her refrigerator.

Water or even lemonade or frappe can be sufficiently cooled by standing it in jars surrounded by ice, but where lemons and similar acids are used these neutralize most of the dangerous disease germs. The latter may also be destroyed by the addition of three or four drops of tincture of iodine in a glass of water, which will not be perceptible to the taste.

Persons of delicate digestion should accustom themselves to drinking moderately hot water instead of that which is icy cold, as the latter for a time checks the action of stomach solvents and prevents assimilation of food.

FARM NOTES

To trap muskrats set a barrel in their run submerged for two-thirds of its height in earth or water and put an apple six inches above the center of barrel for bait

It saves a lot of work to dump the corn for cattle on the ground and let them dig it out of the dirt for their convenience, but it is a mighty expensive form of laziness.

If there is any doubt whether land needs lime or not test it. One method is to grow common garden beets. This plant makes a very poor growth on soil which needs lime.

Perhaps it is because hay farming is so easy that farmers of this class get out of the way of doing real work and thus neglect to manure and take proper care of their grass lands.

AGITATION FOR C.J.R.R. TUNNEL

Plan of Commerce Chamber to Arouse Public Sentiment Along the Line.

FOR COMMISSION GOVERNMENT.

Vote of Confidence For Common Council For Its Water Probe Work—To Hold Monthly Dinners.

An agitation in favor of the New Jersey Central securing tunnel connection at Jersey City was started at the March meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, last night, and it was decided to invite Vice-President and General Manager W. G. Besler and W. C. Hope, the general passenger agent, to address the chamber at the April meeting on the possibility of such an improvement. It is the intention of the chamber to arouse interest in the project among residents along the New Jersey Central to secure united action.

The chamber also gave its endorsement to the plan of government of municipalities by commission, following the reading of a letter from former Mayor Charles J. Fisk, urging that the chamber "get in line," and President George L. Babcock appointed Mr. Fisk and William Jeffery a committee to confer with the legislative committee and to attend all future hearings on bills pertaining to the subject at Trenton. It is understood that several hearings will be given at Trenton within a short time. There was a question raised as to the form desired by Plainfiled, but the committee will investigate and report.

The chamber gave a vote of confidence to the Common Council in the matter of securing a municipal water supply, believing that its course is right and proper in trying to acquire such a supply either through condemnation proceedings of the local plant or in establishing a new plant.

Words of praise were received from the speakers at the chamber's banquet, including George W. Perkins, George A. Post and W. J. Moran, and said that they would be pleased to speak at some convenient time before the chamber on suggested topics. On motion of P. H. Burns the above men together with James E. Martine were elected honorary members of the chamber.

It was also decided to hold the first of the series of monthly dinners at the Waldorf Hotel Monday evening, March 13, from 6:30 to 8:30, as suggested by the membership committee of which G. M. Christian is chairman. On motion of William Jeffery the membership committee will be enlarged, the president appointing those who are to serve. It is hoped to secure a large non-resident membership.

The secretary, Judge John Ulrich, presented a brief report on the first annual banquet of the chamber, February 13, stating that it was a success and that there was no deficit. D. W. Littell, treasurer, then reported in that connection receipts of $1,200, expenditures of $1,133.94, leaving a balance of $67.06, which was turned over to the treasurer of the chamber. Mr. Littell said that all bills had been paid. The committee was discharged with thanks.

Julius Keller, of the Harris Typewriter Company, who has been seeking a location in this city with a view to establishing a factory here for the manufacture of typewriters, appeared before the chamber, explained his proposition at some length and was questioned in detail by the members. He displayed a sample typewriter, the kind that it is proposed to manufacture.

A communication was received from the New York Globe, informing the chamber that it is soon to issue a special suburban edition of 15,000 copies, and seeking an advertisement for the same. The communication was laid on the table.

William Jeffery stated to the evident satisfaction of the chamber that the executive committee of the old Board of Trade had settled all old bills, with the exception of the one for the Charter Day Badges. That was reduced from $420 to $320, and Mr. Jeffery explained that the old committee had $100 which it had offered to the concern in settlement of that claim, the time for such offer expiring today.

NEED FOR CAPITAL

Commerce Chamber to Raise Fund to Get Big Plant Located Here.

BY POPULAR SUBSCRIPTION.

Harris Typewriter Company Will Build Factory Here If It Gets $80,000—Committee Named.

The possibility of the Harris Typewriter Company locating its factory in this city, seems brighter, following the action of the Chamber of Commerce at its March meeting, last night. Julius Keller, representing the company, appeared before the chamber, explained in detail the special make of typewriter which it is intended to manufacture; also the fact that the concern had assurances of making a contract with Sears, Roebuck & Co., of Chicago, whereby the latter will take one hundred machines a day for ten years.

This Mr. Keller said, was sufficient to warrant the business being a success from the start. And in addition there would be the export trade which Mr. Keller said would greatly increase the profits of the company.

The proposition was thoroughly discussed by members of the chamber and Mr. Keller was closely questioned in every little detail. What Mr. Keller desires is that the Chamber of Commerce endorse the proposition, making it possible for the company to secure subscriptions among Plainfielders to the extent of raising about $80,000 which would purchase land and erect a factory such as the company would need. The plan would be to give the stockholders a mortgage to the amount subscribed.

The discussion raised the point as to whether it is the purpose of a Chamber of Commerce to give endorsement to such propositions. Charles H. Hand, who showed clearly that he was very weary concerning the endless discussion, put the question point blank to Mr. Keller if it was not his purpose to raise $80,000 here among Plainfielders, and if so he said that the question to decide was how is the money to be raised.

Mr. Hand declared that the typewriter company would be waiting six years or more for a location if the present policy of discussion was followed and he suggested that all hands get down to business.

This served to bring the matter to a head and on motion, President Babcock named in addition to the committee on factories, comprising F. A. Duttenhoffer, J. C. Allen, Milton Mindil, other members, Herman Schwed, E. F. Feickert, Charles H. Hand, William Jeffery and W. S. Angleman, to further investigate the proposition to canvass the members of the chamber and see who are willing to subscribe $100 or more for the purpose mentioned.

It seemed to impress those present that Mr. Keller's proposition was a good one, and it is also believed that the company will doubtless locate here. Mr. Keller said that it would be possible to build a factory in a larger city, but then there was also trouble about keeping help. He did not believe that condition would be found in Plainfield. He said that it would probably cost $250,000 to build a plant and equip the same.

"FAKED" WEIGHTS

Mayor Moy Starts Crusade Against Dishonest Dealers.

GETS SOME LOCAL EVIDENCE

If You Have Any Complaint See His Honor—Bill In Legislature Aims to Stop the Evil.

If there is anybody engaged in the retail business whose scales are not standard and weigh truly they are likely to get into trouble with the law. Mayor Moy believes it will be a long time before the special measure which is to be brought before the Legislature providing for inspectors of weights and measures becomes a law and in order that the people may not have to submit any longer to short weights proposes to wage a crusade purely local and under the old State law.

Yesterday his honor asked Chief Kiely to start the ball rolling by taking a flyer at a local junk dealer. The first one the chief asked to show his scale produced one of the variety known as stillyards, which had just been purchased, so he said, from a local hardware dealer. Chief Kiely accepted the scale and later in the day took it to a local butcher.

"How much does that leg of lamb weigh, Bill," asked the chief. "Nine and a half pounds," responded the butcher as he laid it on the counter preparatory to dressing it up for the chief's table.

"I guess I'll weigh that myself," said the chief to himself, and suiting the action to the word hooked the stillyards onto the piece of lamb and held it at arm's length.

"Well, I'll be jiggered," ejaculated the hunter after evidence. "This scale says that that piece of meat weighs only half a pound; now I'd like to know which scale is right—yours or mine."

The butcher looked at the chief in amazement and wanted to know where he got the stillyards. "That's telling," said Mr. Kiely, "but I'm not quite satisfied yet. Let's try another and bigger piece of something. No sooner said than done. A piece of beef weighing fifty pounds or more was hooked on to the stillyards and they registered 22 pounds.

"Looks like a get-rich-quick piece of mechanism, don't it?"

"Seems so," answered the butcher. And there you are.

Question—How many are doing the same trick?

But then there is another side to this weight question and his honor determined to get a little evidence himself this morning. He watched the process of buying a certain commodity by a dealer who does considerable business. After the deal was concluded Mayor Moy asked to look at the stillyards. He found that by pressing on a certain part of the instrument that it could be made to act as the manipulator wished. He confiscated the scale.

According to the plans of the mayor there will be tests made in different quarters and there are several especially flagrant violators who are thought to be "scale manipulators."

That the matter of short weights has become a sort of business as a side line to legitimate enterprise is amply sustained by the information given out by the Bureau of Municipal Research of New York. It is estimated that upward of $10 each is the toll exacted from the famillies of the rich and poor alike throughout New Jersey.

COUNTY HOSPITAL BONDS ARE SOLD

The Union County Board of Freeholders at its March meeting, yesterday, authorized the selling of the $50,000 bonds for the county tuberculosis hospital, and Harris, Forbes & Co., of New York, the highest bidders, secured them. The firm offered $52,740.

The bonds are to bear interest at 4½ per cent. and are to run thirty years. This will give the freeholders a sufficient sum to pay for the land at Scotch Plains and make many needed improvements for the care and treatment of persons suffering from tuberculosis.

SOMERSET COUNTY SUED BY BRUNSON

Before Vice Chancellor Howell at Newark, today, there is a hearing in the case of A. J. Brunson against the Somerset County Board of Freeholders, in which Mr. Brunson seeks to make permanent the temporary injunction restraining the board from cutting down several valuable trees in front of his property on Greenbrook road for the purpose of widening that thoroughfare. The road had been widened up to that point when the temporary injunction was secured.

R. V. Lindabury represents Mr. Brunson and John A. Frech the Board of Freeholders. Among the witnesses called this morning were Mayor N. B. Smalley, of the borough; W. H. Shotwell, James Craig and F. C. Langhorne, the photographer, who took pictures of the road in front of Mr. Brunson's place. The hearing will be continued this afternoon.

JURY DISAGREES IN SUIT ON NOTE

After a five hours' deliberation the jury in the case of the suit of William Abbott against Charles H. Lyman, seeking to recover on a promissory note, returned to the District Court, last night, and was discharged after the foreman reported that no agreement could be reached. The jury retired about 1 o'clock in the afternoon.

The case was tried before Judge William Newcorn and occupied the greater part of the morning. Mr. Abbott was represented by V. W. Nash, Jr., and W. A. Coddington was counsel for Mr. Lyman. Mr. Abbott sued to recover $270 with interest on a promissory note and in addition $90 for commissions on a real estate deal.

Mr. Abbott testified that Mr. Lyman had not paid the note and interest as well as the commission, while Mr. Lyman, who is also a real estate broker, contended that the amount had been paid, that he had sold property for Mr. Abbott and that the commission was sufficient to liquidate the indebtedness to Mr. Abbott.

The jury comprised the following: Edward Lynch, Thomas Hanna, F. A. Duttenhofer, Edward Moraller, Meredith Dryden, Charles E. Vail, James C. Hansen, S. R. Meyers, Frank Dunham, Joseph Harrigan, A. F. Marsh and J. P. Homan. It has been decided to try the case again.

HOWARD CARVER WEDS MISS LUCY GORJINI.

Miss Lucy Gorjini, of this city, formerly of Elizabeth, and Howard Carver, of the borough, were married at the latter's home on Harrison street, last night. The ceremony was performed by Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. Mrs. Richard Higgins and Jerry Signor, both of Elizabeth, acted as matron-of-honor and best man respectively.

The wedding was followed by a reception during which supper was served and musical numbers were furnished by the Mignon Brothers, of Newark. The couple received many handsome presents. Mr. Carver conducts a coal and wood business in the city and borough.

Planning For Columbus Day.

The Italian boss barbers of the city held a meeting last night with a view to planning some sort of observance of Columbus Day, October 12. There was a general discussion of plans, to be decided later, and it is hoped to secure the co-operation of all people who are directly interested in such a celebration.

COLLEGE TO BE REBUILT--AN APPEAL; ADJUSTERS FIGURE LOSS IS $230,000

Bishop McFaul Acts Promptly for Tempoary Quarters-- Monsignor Brady Gives $5,000--Request Made by Sisters-- To Adjust Loss Tuesday.

GLIMPSE OF FACADE OF MT. ST. MARY COLLEGE AFTER THE FIRE. ABOVE THE MAIN ENTRANCE STANDS THE UNBLEMISHED STATUE OF THE VIRGIN MARY.

The ruins of the College of Mt. St. Mary were still smoking today and it will be some days before the heap of smoking debris will be cooled off enough to be searched. The articles of furniture and other things saved from the flames have been taken care of and will be in readiness for the new building when completed.

Help Extended.

It was announced yesterday that several large contributions had been offered toward a fund for rebuilding the edifice. Monsignor Brady, of Perth Amboy, offering $5,000. When seen this morning, Rev. William H. Miller, pastor of St. Joseph's church, said that visitors among whom was Miss Louise Tucker, teacher of music at the college, suggested that a benefit be arranged for, to be given in the Metropolitan Opera House in New York and while this plan was considered a good one it was not definitely decided upon.

Temporary Quarters.

Father Miller also said that temporary houses for the continuance of the classes of the college would soon be obtained and the work resumed, meanwhile most of the sisters have been sent to the various missions in the nearby cities where they will be cared for until the new arrangements are completed. Classes may be begun in seven days.

Kindness has marked the many friends of the institution in offers of aid. Herman Kellar, owner of the building at the corner of Watchung and Jackson avenues in the borough has offered the building for the use of the school and in all likelihood will be accepted. Several other buildings are at the disposal of the sisters.

Adjusters Busy.

Miller & Maltby, public adjusters, acting for the several companies in which the institution was insured, visited this city yesterday afternoon. They had a talk with Bishop McFaul and Mother Gabriel and visited the scene of the fire. The adjusters will hold a conference with Bishop McFaul at Trenton on Tuesday when it is expected that an amicable settlement of the losses will be made.

The Loss $230,000.

The total loss is now estimated at $230,000. Of this amount $170,000 represents damage done to the structure, while $60,000 is the loss on the personalty.

Smoke.

A story was told by some of the boys of the primary department of the college to the effect that they had smelled smoke for several hours on Wednesday afternoon, but paid no particular attention to the incident owing to the fact that they thought the odor came from the cooking being done in the kitchen, or possibly from wood being dried there.

Brave at Fire.

There is no doubt that bravery was exhibited by all the men who went to the assistance of the sisters when the fire became known. Among those of the fire department who were conspicuous for their bravery were Martin Connaughton, Daniel Keiderling, Joseph Clark, Captain James Daley and Chief McCullough and his men from the borough department. Geo. A. Bailey, of the borough, who is not a fireman, accompanied the local police in the patrol wagon and did great work in saving what was possible to carry out. Instances of personal bravery were many and it is owing to the caution of Chief Doane, that two men are not numbered among the dead now. Keiderling and Connaughton were bent on attempting a rescue of the painting, "Christ Before Pilate," which hung just inside the college entrance. The two men started in but before they had gone many feet Chief Doane rushed in front of them and pushed them out of harm's way just at the wall collapsed. The men would have been buried under tons of stone and bricks. It is estimated that the firemen were instrumental in saving $6.000 worth of the contents besides the building on the east end, containing the kitchen and laundry.

The Still Alarm.

Another story told yesterday in which the telephone operator was accused of not sending the alarm in until the sending telephone number was given was denied by Manager P. H. Burns. What really occurred was that the operator, not knowing whether the department wanted was in North Plainfield or this city, had to look it up and could only do so by referring to "information" for its location. As soon as this was obtained the company was summoned. The time consumed was perhaps twenty seconds. In referring to this incident, Mr. Burns said this morning that in front of every operator there is posted in red figures the numbers of the two fire headquarters and as soon as an alarm is given the proper department is notified. It would be wrong and perhaps annoying to call the city fire department for a blaze in the borought and vice versa, hence the necessity for the correct location of a call.

It is believed that if a benefit is arranged as suggested by Miss Tucker that a very large proportion of the funds needed to rebuild the college would be secured.

The sympathy of the entire clergy of both the city and borough has been expressed.

Statue Not Damaged.

One of the remarkable things about the destruction of the college and one that is causing great comment among both Catholics and others is that notwithstanging the fearful heat and the playing of flames all about it, the statue of the Virgin at the entrance of the building was not even scorched nor cracked nor in any way harmed. The statue may be seen in the picture published today.

The School Itself.

Contrary to the general belief the pupils at Mt. St. Mary's included boys from the age of five years up to twelve, which means up to the preparatory for the High Schools. And besides that there was no sectarianism entering into the contract to teach. No methods of religious instruction were inculcated that would in any way conflict with the upbringing of any pupil. The disaster has resulted in bringing to light the actual conditions which prevail at the institutio

Sisters Make Appeal.

At a conference held this morning it became known that fifteen pianos, beds, bedding, household linen and all the equipment of the domestic science department of the college had been destroyed. The most urgent need, therefore, is the things which must meet these requirements. Beds and the necessary bedding, pillow cases and sheets and in fact pieces of black voile, and linen or muslin are urgently needed.

Temporary Quarters.

The building known as St. Gabriel's Academy at the corner of Watchung and Jackson avenues will be the first one fitted up for the continuance of the work of the college and it is hoped to have this ready for classes within a week.

Public Schools' Use.

In speaking of the needs of the advanced pupils of the college this morning one of the sisters said that if the Board of Education of this city would offer the use of the chemical laboratories after the regular school hours the sisters could make advantageous use of them and besides would not cause any inconvenience to the authorities of the education board. And another thing which might possibly be accomplished without very much trouble would be the furnishing of text books which are very much needed. School supplies of all kinds are needed, but those mentioned are the most urgent.

Water Not Inadequate.

The sisters this morning said that the published reports of the scarcity of water were not absolutely true as there was an adequate supply.

The following is the roll of the school: Miss Loretta Nolan, Trenton; Irene Duchesne, Plainfield; Irene Smith, New York; Grace Conrery, Trenton; Anabel Jones, South Carolina; Grace Rafferty, Plainfield; Mme. Alice Jaccard, instructor in French; Alva Stevens, Mont Hagen Island; Catherine Griffin, New York; May Hickey, Raritan; May Costello, South Amboy; Muriel Collins, Plainfield; Anna Sutley, Bordentown; Marie Sheppard, Bound Brook; Minnie Taylor, Plainfield; Pearl Jones, Trenton; Emily McCloud, Elizabeth; Anna Borgseldt, Metuchen; Lucille Borgseldt, Metuchen; Anna Conlin, Bound Brook; Marie Sullivan, Plainfield; May Duchene, Plainfield; Bernardette Duchesne, Plainfield; Marie Tobin, Plainfield; Sadie Lee, Scotch Plains; Margaret Ribson, Trenton.

This Boiler is a Coal Saver

Why? Because it is a BOYNTON and has the BOYNTON square fire pot, which increases fire surface about 25% over other boilers of like diameter.

The BOYNTON "square pot" is the greatest improvement yet devised in heating systems. It is square at the corners, hence clears free of cinders and ash each time the grate is turned. That means a live fire, always, and plenty of draft. See your dealer about the

$3,000 WORTH OF CHECKS MISSING

Jersey City, March 3.—The discovery of the theft of a large number of checks to the amount of $3,000 was made by the timekeeper in the plant of the beef-packing firm of Swift & Co., in Ninth street yesterday. The timekeeper notified the cashier, who called Acting Captain Richards of the Second Police Precinct and notified him of the theft. Detective Sergeants Hoffman and Curry were hustled out on the job.

The police have issued a notice to business men and banks not to accept the checks if presented. One well known business man of Pavonia avenue informed the police that he had cashed one of the checks. He said he knew the man whom he had cashed it for; that he was an employee of Swift & Co., and that he had frequently cashed checks for him.

The checks stolen were to have been paid to men in the Swift Company last night, it being the regular pay night of the establishment. The men to whom they were to be paid had to wait until today in order to give the timekeeper time to make out another set of checks.

Altogether there were about 100 checks stolen. Those entitled to the checks not stolen were paid off last night as usual. The timekeeper missed the stolen checks while going over the list, preparatory to paying the employees. The checks were usually kept in a desk drawer in his office. There is nothing to indicate how the theft was accomplished. The police investigating the case are of the opinion that it was someone in Swift's who stole the checks and they expect to make an arrest in a day or so.

SENATORS LEARN TO PRAY.

At a session of the Kansas State Senate recently Rev. A. F. Randall, the chaplain, requested the Senators to repeat with him the Lord's Prayer. Only eight were able to join in its audible repetition. Since that time the chaplain has distributed copies of the Book of Common Prayer of the Episcopal church among the members.

At the opening of yesterday's session the chaplain again requested the Senators to say this prayer. Fully half of the Senators were able to repeat it.

Sixty Hens Laid 1,039 Eggs.

M. Johnson, a poultry fancier of Glenville, N. Y., made a wager on February 1 that his sixty hens would lay 1,000 eggs during the month. Up to February 28 he had collected 969 eggs, an average of 35 a day. Great interest was taken in the contest, and all day neighbors called to get the latest reports. At 10 o'clock in the morning of the twenty-eighth it was announced that the thousandth egg had been laid. But the hens wanted to make it a good victory, and at 5:30 o'clock the hour the contest was declared off, the last hen jumped off the nest, making the count 1,039.

BASEBALL.

It looks as if the syndicate of bookmakers of Newport, Ky., who are sending circulars all over the country offering to accept bets on the results of the ball games played by the different teams in the National and American leagues this season, will either have to abolish their plan or take the consequences of being arrested. The Department of Justice of Washington, after reading one of the circulars sent out by the syndicate, has decided to make an investigation, and will most likely put the "bookies" out of business.

The train bearing the players of the Philadelphia National League baseball club rolled into Birmingham, Ala., Wednesday, 15 minutes behind the scheduled time. The men bounded off the train with enthusiasm, all glad to be relieved of the fatigue and monotony of a thirty-one hours' ride, which offered little to amuse or entertain them. The Phillies started training at 7 o'clock yesterday morning.

It now seems probable that Sunday baseball will be legalized in Ohio, in which case the Cleveland club will play Sunday games. The House Wednesday passed the bill, 61 to 46, and as Sunday ball is now played at Columbus, Cincinnati and Toledo, by permission of City Councils, the sentiment of the State seems to be in favor of the sport on the Sabbath.

Somebody asked Wyatt Lee, of the Indians, recently if he had signed a contract for this season yet. "Why, I never bother about that," replied Lee. "When it comes time I take my dinner pail along and go to work. They don't need a contract for me. Lee is something of a philosopher. He has seen the rise of many a "busher," and also seen a lot of them come back. Speaking of the reason why so many wonderful minor league twirlers fail in big company, he remarked: "It's this way. They find their fast ball a mite too slow, and their slow ones just a bit too fast."

Pitcher Jack Coombs, of the Philadelphia Athletics, wandered into the office at Shibe Park around 1 o'clock, and, after warm greetings had been extended between the pitcher and Manager Mack, a contract was yanked from the club's safe, and in a few minutes the signature of the twirler was on the paper. Coombs looked to be in mid-season form. Connie was well pleased with the big fellow's appearance, and, as most of the veterans who got away Wednesday did not look to be in need of any excessive exercises, the tall leader of the Elephants expects every man to report in Savannah in superb condition.

President Charles Carpenter, of Tri-State League, today announced his staff of umpires for the season of 1911. He has re-signed Thomas Connor, of last year's staff, and signed Francis R. Connolly, a brother of Tom Connolly, and four years in the New England League; Edward J. Conahan, formerly of the American and Southern Leagues; Levi Glatts, of the Southern League, and A. Alloway, of the Central and Western Leagues.

GOLF.

Under the caption "The Child's Guide to the History of Golf" appears an article in a recent issue of "The World of Golf," of London. It treats of the putter controversy, touches on other subjects over which dissensions have occurred and incidentally takes Leighton Calkins to task. The whole article is written in a lighter vein than is usually found in the foreign golf publications, as may be seen by the following:

"From time immemorial, that is to say, ever since the game became the particular property of Scotland, the nominal rulers had been a few wise men who, although drawn from all parts, had given themselves the composite name of St. Andrews. For the most part St. Andrews always consisted of elderly gentlemen, who never desired any harm to anybody. During many years they held unquestioned sway throughout all the land of golf. They enacted many laws, some wise and some foolish, but they were obeyed unquestioningly by all who wielded the driver or who pursued the rubber core with the less pliant cleek.

"With the growth of the game, however, there arose several insurrectionary bodies. One of these was in the Midlands of England, where several bold, bad barons raised the standard of revolt. Few were attracted by the flag of insurrection, and after a very short time the rising was quelled without any losses on either side. Then St. Andrews did the most foolish thing it had ever been guilty of in all its foolish career.

"It barred the Schenectady putter. Now, this particular putter was an American invention, and used very largely in that country. It really did not make the game any easier, but St. Andrews chose to think that it did, merely because an American once came over here and won the championship with the implement.

"As soon as the news became known that St. Andrews had illegalized the Schenectady putter America was aflame with indignation. Individual American golfers were not particularly concerned about the matter, but they were aroused to a great pitch of indignation by the writing and speeches of one Leighton Calkins. Leighton Calkins was a demagogue and a charlatan. He affected to feel very strongly on the injustice of St. Andrews in barring the Schenectary, but as he had never used this particular kind of putter it was plain that his indignation was simulated.

"The greater number of the American councillors were agreed that the foolishness of St. Andrews was a thing that might be passed over, and several resolutions were carried to that effect. Mr. Calkins' influence with the public, however, was so great that many joined his standard. He raised the insurrectionary flag in the West of America. His inflammatory writings—for he was no man of action and found the pen mightier than the sword—spread all over the United States, and their effect on the unthinking public was so great that within a very short time the whole continent was prepared for war.

"The revolt of America was cabled to all European centres. England for the most part remained loyal to St. Andrews, but France and some of the newer Continental golfing countries joined the rebels. On June 24, 19—, the insurrectionaries set sail from New York. Their army was some thousands strong and armed to a man with Schenectady putters or some other centre-shafted club. They landed in Scotland on June 30, and a couple of days' march overland brought them to Leuchars' Junction, the very gates of the stronghold of St. Andrews.

"It was about this time that the true character of Leighton Calkins made itself manifest. He ordered the army to take the old gray city by assault, but when the army asked him to lead them he declared that he was no soldier, only a golfer. A sharp American caddie discovered him shortly afterward buying a single ticket for Carnoustie. At noon on July 4 the invaders moved on St. Andrews. The level road between Leuchars and their destination was soon passed. They entered the town of St. Andrews without opposition and made their way to the links, where they expected to find their autocratic enemy.

"It was evening when they came in sight of the course. The links lay invitingly at their feet and, Schenectady putters or no, they felt a desire to sample the mother of all golf courses. In a few minutes the severed ranks of the insurrectionists were broken, for each man made a dash to get his name in the ballot for the following day. Thus ended the revolution of 19—."

BLOT ON SENATE

Progressives Were Duped in Lorimer Verdict Says Miss Richards.

NO RELIEF FROM THE TARIFF.

Freight Rates Decision Has Had a Salutory Effect on Railroads Which Are Making Good Profits, She Declares.

There was a large and attentive audience at the Hartridge auditorium, yesterday afternoon, when Miss Janet Richards, of Washington, D. C., gave her sixth talk on "Current History." She said that in spite of the majority vote of the Senate in favor of Senator Lorimer, the country generally and the press almost unanimously, consider his acquittal as a blot on the record of the sixty-first Congress. The Senate had been at a deadlock over this matter and those opposed to Senator Lorimer were only induced to bring the matter to a vote by the promises of Senator Hale, of Maine, that once this decision of the Lorimer case was out of the way the Senate would turn its attention to the establishment of a permanent tariff Board, a measure warmly desired by all progressive Senators.

The Progressives feel they have been duped over this decision, for now though the way is clear for the consideration of the permanent tariff board the Senate by filibustering tactics is delaying a decision on this matter till it is too late for any action a result most likely to be achieved on Saturday, March 4. One result of this inquiry and acquittal is that a very strong argument is placed in the hands of those who consider the direct election of Senators desirable.

"Another decision calling for attention is that of the Interstate Commission which has given as its opinion that the railways are making quite good enough profits without any increase of their freight rates. This decision has had a most salutory effect on the car building industry; one factory has opened again for work, of which there had been an almost total suspension along these lines pending the commission's verdict, and orders for some 400 new cars have been placed."

Miss Richards touched on the Arnold case, denying on the authority of Mr. Arnold himself that the family knew anything of the whereabouts of Miss Arnold and urging on her audience to give no credence to all the alleged slanderous rumors circulated on this topic, but to take this as a painful object lesson of the dangers which threaten our girls and young women in our big cities. In New York alone she stated four such cases occur daily and there seems no way to check the evil. Miss Richards reported the progress made by Mrs. Owen, of Salt Lake City, in her efforts to arouse popular sentiment so that the portrait of Brigham Young, the high priest and founder of a sect so un-American in its ideals—or lack of them—may not go forth to the world on the silver service to be presented to the battleship Utah, as one of the men whom the American nation would wish to represent them in their contact with foreign nations.

Miss Richards spoke briefly on the present tariff pointing out how greatly it had been made to bear upon the women, no less than twenty-five articles of women's wearing apparel being dutiable; among others the cheapest grade of hosiery for working-women, who are ill prepared to bear any increased cost of clothing.

Turning to foreign affairs Miss Richards briefly outlined the situation in France leading up to M. Briand's resignation and to M. Monis' appointment to form a new cabinet. Since the days when Napoleon re-established religion in France in 1793 until the act of disestablishment five years ago, priests, calbinistic ministers and Jewish rabbis had been supported by the State, and it is the struggle between atheistic Socialists who desire to see religion routed out of France, and the more conservative members who deplore the complete extinction of religion, the outrages on beautiful and old buildings, which have been turned from churches to vaudeville halls and other similar acts of vandalism, which has been the cause of the overthrow of the ministry. Miss Richards was most warmly applauded at the close of her lecture.

Number 2
WHAT IS DRY CLEANING?

Many people have erroneous ideas about what Dry Cleaning really is—believing that their clothes are actually cleaned dry—as if by magic method we pass our hands over the Garment and say "Presto!" It is clean.

Dry is a misnomer. "Chemical" cleaning would be a more intelligent name, but people might confuse "Chemical," thinking of acids, alkalies, etc., not used in Dry Cleaning.

The truth is we depend largely upon gasolene, naphtha, benzine—there's a difference—and other petroleum and coal tar products, for our cleansing bath instead of water as do the launderers.

The secret and successful operations in Dry Cleaning are learned only by hard experience and study, coupled with proper equipment. These are what enable us to do superior work.

We know our business thoroughly and are properly equipped in plant, collection and delivery.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

The Passion Play, having been given so recently at Oberammergua, has served to stimulate unusual interest in Henry Ellsworth's pictorial reproduction of "Oberammergau, Its People and Their Passion Play of 1910," which is to be presented at the Plainfield theatre Monday matinee and night, March 6, for the benefit of St. Mary's new convent. Mr. Ellsworth has resided in Oberammergua for the past eleven summers, and has had special privileges accorded him for collecting exclusive photographs and facts pertaining to the village and the play. So comprehensive have been Mr. Ellsworth's studies of his subjects that it is quite safe to assert that no lecturer is as well informed about Oberammergua and its remarkable exhibition of the Sacred Drama, or is as well equipped to give entertaining expression of that information as is he.

The laughing comedy success of the season, "The Traveling Salesman," by James Forbes, author of "The Chorus Lady," will be the offering at the Plainfield theatre on Thursday, March 9, when Henry B. Harris will send the original New York and Chicago company to this city. The story of the play concerns Bob Blake, a jovial fat drummer, who is compelled to spend Christmas day in an isolated village of the Middle West. Here he meets Beth Elliott, the telegraph operator and ticket agent, who, in an effort to brighten his depressed spirits, invites him to partake of her lunch. She is a most dear little girl and the traveling salesman falls a victim to her charms. So well does the play depict the life of the drummer on the road that it has won the endorsement of the United Commercial Travelers and the Travelers' Protective Association. Frank J. McIntyre interprets the role of Bob Blake, and Gertrude Coghlan is "The Girl."

THE LADIES OF PLAINFIELD
ARE INVITED TO SEE A DEMONSTRATION OF
THE LADY CLAIRE
ADJUSTABLE · DRESS · FORM
To be Given March 3d, 4th and 6th
From 10 a. m. to 6 p. m.
and 7 to 9 p. m.
155 East Front Street

This exhibition is given in compliance with numerous requests following the private demonstration held the first three days of this week for the dressmakers and ladies' tailors of Plainfield.

All women know the value of a Dress Form that can be adjusted to any figure. Everyone accepting this invitation will see at once the remarkable adjustability of the Lady Claire Adjustable Dress Form to every style of figure, shape or size.

Conforms to Every Curve

Unlike the old-fashioned Dress Forms, each part may be regulated independently of the other—neck, chest, bust, shoulders, hips and skirt being capable of separate adjustment. No single conformation interferes in the slightest with the other.

After measurements are taken, all the fitting, draping, trimming and hanging may be done on the Dress Form, and a perfect fitting garment the result. Never since the introduction of the sewing-machine has such a useful invention been offered to dressmakers and women who dressmake at home.

We invite everyone interested in the use of a Dress Form to call at the above address on the days mentioned, and see a demonstration of the Lady Claire Adjustable Dress Form.

One of New York's leading designers and style authorities will be in attendance. Your call will place you under no obligation, nor will you be importuned to give an order.

CITY IS HEALTHY

Only 26 Cases of Communicable Disease Reported in February.

THERE WERE 39 BIRTHS.

Total Deaths 22—Health Board Officers Made Many Inspections During the Month.

The reports presented at the monthly meeting of the Board of Health, last night, showed the sanitary condition of the city to be excellent. The meeting was held in the new quarters, 104 East Front street. The total number of communicable diseases reported was twenty-six, as follows: Scarlet fever, 11; diphtheria, 1; tuberculosis, 3; chicken-pox, 1; measles, 10.

Five of the eleven cases of scarlet fever were in two houses, three in one and two in another. Except for these two instances, there was apparently no common source of infection among the cases.

The following returns were made to the office during the month: Marriages, 16; births, 39; still-births, 2; deaths, 22. Of the deaths ten were of persons over sixty years of age.

During the month 64 inspections were made in connection with the milk supply and 34 samples of milk analyzed. The dairies, bottling places, stores, etc., were found to be in fair condition and the milk analysis were very good.

Inspections were made of bakeries, butcher shops, dumping grounds, back yards, cellars, etc., and in addition to inspections made on complaint of nuisances and visits to houses with communicable disease, as follows: Plumbing inspections, 58; inspections with milk supply, 84; general inspections, 340, a total of 4,822.

During February 75 rooms in thirteen houses were disinfected, one wagon, two school rooms and the isolation ward at Muhlenberg Hospital. Through the efforts of the board, E. C. King, of Irvington, was fined $25 for doing plumbing work in the city without first filing a bond.

The following applications for permits were received and permits granted:

Lewis Rosenthal, to sell milk from store; J. H. Snowden, to retail milk from wagon; Mrs. Charles Brunjes and James P. Butler, to collect garbage; plumbers' bonds filed in renewal: P. E. Neylon, W. W. Mills, Vail Bros. and William Islieb. The following are new applicants: Archibald Peacock and William Newell & Bros.

Proctor's Fine Show.

Harrigan, Giles & Co., in "Silverstein's Luck," is making a hit at Proctor's theatre this week. It is one of the best acts seen here in a long time. The Warren Trio, operatic singers give a song fest that is good; Webb & Norton, singers and dancers are clever and Mayer & Hyde English character comedians are excellent, their impersonations of the "Chappies" and "Coster" types being true to life.

Lenten Preacher.

Rev. Dr. Henry M. Nash, of the Cambridge Theological Seminary, will be the preacher at the morning and afternoon services at Grace Episcopal church on Sunday. He will be the second one to give an address during the Lenten series of services. The hours of service are 11 in the morning and 4:30 in the afternoon

Will Improve Property.

John McMorrow, of New York, who purchased the Robert H. McCutcheon estate on Plainfield avenue, plans to cut the tract up into building lots and improve the same. The land faces on four streets and is one of the most attractive sites in the city.

Thieves' Attempt Frustrated.

Would-be thieves were frustrated in their attempt last night to enter the garage of Robert C. Woodhouse, 1210 East Seventh street, by specially constructed doors which failed to open after the miscreants had done ten dollars' worth of damage to the woodwork of the building.

J. H. VanWinkle, Jr., Executor.

John H. VanWinkle, Jr., is named in the will of Daniel VanWinkle, as executor of his uncle's estate.

Rev. Dr. F. P. Blakemore, of Bellefontaine, Ohio, is the guest of Rev. and Mrs. Gabriel Reid Maguire, of East Ninth street. He is pastor of the First Baptist church at Bellefontaine.

EAST END WANTS POLICE PROTECTION

Better police protection for the Netherwood section north of the railroad is desired by the residents of that part of the city and has been taken up by them in definite form. At a meeting of the Dutch Arms Club, held for the specific purpose at the home of Mrs. Charles Noel, last night, a petition was drawn up for presentation to the Common Council at its next regular session. Vice-President William T. Banks was in the chair, a majority of the members were present. The petition was as follows:

"To the Honorable Mayor and Common Council:

"We, the members of the Dutch Arms Reformed Club, of Netherwood, in conjunction with the residents and property owners in the Netherwood section, north of the railroad, do respectfully petition your honorable body for regular police protection in our immediate neighborhood. The recent widespread robberies here indicate the necessity for immediate definite action." The appeal was signed by all the club members and is now being circulated among the residents. It will contain over 200 names before it is read at the Council meeting.

As indicated by the petition, this club's action resulted from the wholesale housebreaking that took place last Monday night. Eleven burglaries have already been reported and to this number several more have been added. It was stated at the meeting last night that the houses of James Daw and James Gibbs were entered and that the burglars tried to get into the residence of Fred Bowe. Small amounts of money and articles of clothing were secured in each place. The latter were afterward found scattered along Leland avenue.

Attention was called to the totally unprotected condition by this paper on Wednesday.

MOUNTAIN LEVELED AS SPARK IGNITES POWDER

Netcong, Mach 3.—It only took a little spark that jumped between two wires nestling in a load of dynamite to lift the crest of "Mountain" (Side Hill Hummock) yesterday and accomplish in a second what it would take laborers two months to do in the Lackawanna Railroad cut-off near this place. The blast was fired at 2 o'clock and engineers reported the result satisfactory.

Ten tons of "Judson" powder and five tons of dynamite had been placed in a four-foot tunnel that had been wormed into the side of the hill where a seventy-five foot cut is to be made on the line of the cut-off. From this central tunnel four smaller leads, star-like, were dug. In these ten separate loads of explosive were placed and the mouth of the tunnel sealed with concrete cap.

Under a culvert 500 feet away an engineer for the Waltz & Reece Construction Company waited for the signal to turn the electric battery. F. L. Wheaton, engineer in charge for the Lackawanna Railroad, saw that the crowd of 100 or more curious persons who had gone four miles into the mountains to see the blast were out of danger and then he waved a flag. More than 20,000 cubic yards of mountain slipped from its place with a roar that made the countryside echo.

Mrs. White is Eighty-one.

Mrs. William White, of Grove street, celebrated her eighty-first birthday yesterday and entertained seventeen of her relatives and descendants at dinner last evening. Mrs. White is the grandmother of Mrs. William G. DeMeza, wife of the City Judge.

Preparatory Services Tonight.

Preparatory services will be held at Trinity Reformed church tonight at 8 o'clock, followed by a meeting of the elders for reception of new members. The subject of Rev. J. Y. Broek's address will be "The Finished Work of Christ."

Freeholders Raise Salaries.

The Union County Board of Freeholders at its meeting yesterday raised the salary of Major Irwin, probation officer, from $1,500 to $1,800, and that of his assistant, W. J. Hamilton, from $800 to $1,200.

Those who are opposed to municipal ownership of a water supply in this city are urged to attend the meeting to be held this evening in the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The quarantine has been raised from Constable Reilly's house and his children who have been ill with scarlet fever are now out and will soon return to school.

A delegation of fifty students from the Catholic school at Metuchen passed through the village yesterday enjoying their first outing of the season.

Theodore Zellars has entirely recovered from the injury to his foot, received while at work at the Levering Garrigues plant.

WHAT RATE RULING MEANS TO CONSUMER

Washington, March 3.—The recent decision of the Interstate Commerce Commision preventing the railroads in official classification territory, and also those in western trunk line territory from increasing their rates, is unquestionably of importance to every family in the United States, more especially every family in the territory immediately concerned in the proposed rate increases.

Experts on the subejct of rates find it difficult to give definite figures saying what the decisions mean in dollars and cents to the average family. They say generally, however that had the decisions been such as to allow the railroads to have made the increases they sought to make the effect would have been perceptible in the living cost of the average family.

Senator Bristow, of Kansas, who has given the rate question much attention, aside from commending the decision as meritorious and right, declared that it prevented a heavy tribute from being exacted from the public. He emphasized the fact, however, that in considering what the proposed increases in rates would have cost the consuming public, much more had to be taken into account than simply the direct increase in freight rates.

"I cannot say in dollars and cents what the decision would mean to the average family," said Senator Bristow, "but there can be no doubt that had these increases been allowed to go into effect they would have resulted in exactions from the public of two or three times the actual amount of the freight increases. An increase in a freight rate in this respect operates just as does the tariff. If the shipper has to pay the higher freight rate this means that he calculates the profits he seeks on a larger amount. It so works out that by the time the customer is reached he is taxed for a great deal more than the actual increase in freights."

Representative Good, of Iowa, who has studied the rate question carefully, and who made a specialty of it in the last campaign, took substantially the same view as Senator Bristow. He pointed out that the cost of increased freight rates to the consuming public was much greater than the actual increase in the rates.

The Increase Planned.

The magnitude of the increases proposed by the railroads in something on which there are the most varying opinions. It is commonly stated that the railroads in official classification territory would have increased rates about $27,000,000 a year and the western roads something like the same amount. Roughly this would mean an increase of $50,000,000 to $55,000,000.

But this view is not accepted on all hands. One western freight authority, a man of wide experience in the freight business, declares that the railroads would have got $300,000,000 more returns annually out of the increase they proposed in rates.

If the proposed increased revenue which the roads hoped to get and which they will not get on account of the rate decisions is taken to be $55,000,000, and if it be correct that through the process of multiplication of charges of which Senator Bristow alludes perhaps double this sum would be visited on the consumer, then $110,000,000 would be amount that would have been exacted from that person whom Senator Lodge once described as mythical. Assuming that two-thirds of the families of the country would have to bear this, this would mean that had the increases gone into effect each family would have paid out about $10 more per year on account of the higher rates.

This increased exaction would, however, have been imposed only in small amounts. It would have meant a few more cents out here and a few more cents there. It would have been difficult for the head of the family to have discovered just where he was being mulcted. But on looking over his accounts at the end of the year he would have discovered that somehow he was ahead a little less than usual. The frugal housewife, casting over her grocery bills, would have found in the course of a few months that somehow her allowance was failing to go quite as far as it used to. The cost of meats, already high, would somehow have crept just a little higher. The same is true of numerous other commodities entering into general household use.

But there is a far more important side to the matter, from the viewpoint of the consuming public, than what is involved directly in the proposed rate increases. That is, the Interstate Commerce Commission has laid down certain principles of rate making that are going to tend to hold down future proposed rate increases. It has to be remembered that if the roads had obtained permission to increase rates in the two instances decided against them, they proposed to follow these increases up with others. So that not only are the increases filed with the commission prevented, but other and probably greater contemplated increases are blocked.

Further than this, the commission had sat down hard on the idea that a railroad can go ahead indefinitely capitalizing surplus earnings and then demanding increased returns on the basis of the increased capitalization. The commission's decisions go far to block the process of indefinite increment of capitalization through means other than actual addition of moneyed capital, and thus the decisions will be found in all probability more important in their future effect than in their immediate effect. In other words, the decisions if lived up to will shield the consuming public from freight taxation increases in the future much greater than the actual increases planned in the rates filed with the commission. The railroads of the country now cost the average family directly, to say nothing of the indirect charges, about $100 a year. This includes freight and passenger charges. It is apparent that the ite mis an appreciable one in the living expenses of the average household.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Amongst the arenic features of note at the New York Hippodrome may be mentioned the Great Albas in a sensational wire act that promises to out-thrill anything ever before shown in the Hippodrome circus; Armando, who presents a comedy novelty animal act which has earned European commendation; the three Donalds, gymnasts; Erna and Jennie Gasch, women equilibrists; the Blumenfeld Sisters in a dainty equestrian specialty, the Colonials in an exhibition of physical culture, and Duffin-Dedcay Co., in an astonishing high bar act. The new circus will be given in conjunction with the three big spectacles, "The International Cup," "The Ballet of Niagara" and "The Earthquake," which continue to prove as potent drawing cards as during the early part of the season.

A charming romance about a princess and a naughty prince set to waltzes that refuse to let one's feet behave, and overflowing with irresistibly amusing situations, is only a skeleton idea of "The Spring Maid," the new operetta from Vienna in which Christie MacDonald has become the favorite of all New York. Since Christmas night, when the holiday crowds in Forty-second street beheld an electric fountain playing over the prima donna's name at the Liberty Theatre there has been a continuous line of carriages at the door. Before the end of January all records were broken and the box office had a $60,000 advance sale, with seats being bought as far ahead as Easter.

For injuries sustained in falling over the top of a cesspool, Mary J. Braum was awarded $300 damages in the Camden courts Wednesday against the Pitman Grove Camp-meeting Association.

Four out of five votes registered in an election Wednesday at Hadden Heights, to decide whether there shall be a $60,000 bond issue for macadamizing the streets, were in favor of the measure.

Mayor Ellis, in Camden Wednesday, served notice on the Moorestown Rapid Transit Company, a subsidiary line of the Public Service Railway Company, to cease operating what are known as club cars.

At the meeting of the Board of Agriculture at Harrisonville, Monday afternoon, S. J. Morgan and Wilbert T. Beckett will discuss the question: "Will the farming interests of New Jersey, be affected by the reciprocity treaty?"

Accompanied by the Stone Road Committee of the Board of Freeholders, Colonel E. A. Stevens, the new State road commissioner, and State Superintendent of Roads Meeker made a tour of the roads of Camden county Wednesday.

The Cumberland County Board of Agriculture will have its annual meeting in the rooms of the Bridgeton Commercial League on March 7. There will be addresses by speakers of the State Board and the United States Agricultural Bureau.

Drowned about two months ago in a fall from a barge, the body of Henry Rookery, sixty-two years old, of 319 Richmond street, Philadelphia, was found in the mud at the river end of Thirty-sixth street, Camden, Wednesday. Rookey was a watchman on the barge Lee.

The friends of Miss Katherine Pauline Sharp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sharp, of Ocean county, and Walter J. Hackroth, of Philadelphia, were surprised when the secret leaked out yesterday that they had been married there last Saturday by Justice of the Peace Rush. They are now on a wedding tour.

One hundred and fifteen representative men of Newark sat down Wednesday evening at a banquet tendered to Circuit Court Judge Clarence L. Cole, of Atlantic City, at Bridgeton, who made his first judicial appearance in Newark yesterday. The banquet was under the auspices of the Central M. E. Sunday school, and was held in the church.

The Burlington County Board of Freeholders is facing an alarming financial condition. Many of the funds will be exhausted before six months of the year have passed. After Wednesday's business had been closed, the bridge appropriation of $21,000 had dwindled to $2,780, which is all the board has for expenditures during the remainder of the year.

GUARD'S RETIREMENT MEASURE IS SIGNED.

These bills have been signed by Governor Wilson:

House 7, Mr. James, authorizes the placing upon the retired list any member of the national guard who has served for more than twenty years or who shall be incapacitated by military service.

House 88, Mr. Turner, provides conditions under which finance boards in boroughs may appropriate moneys to pay the cost of a pedestal and foundation for soldiers' and sailors' monuments.

EDISON NAME INCORPORATED.

Following action taken at a stockholders meeting last Monday, the National Phonograph Company has filed an amended certificate with the secretary of State changing its name to "Thomas A. Edison, Incorporated." Attached to the certificate is a statement signed by Mr. Edison consenting to perpetual use of his name by the corporation.

The company has an authorized capital stock of two million dollars. The stockholders are Mina M. Edison, Ernest J. Berggren, Frank L. Dyer, Carl H. Wilson, William Pelser and Harry F. Miller.

The correspondent of The Tribune in Paris says the new Cabinet formed by M. Monis is acclaimed only by radical socialists and laborites, but the average Frenchman is inclined to suspend judgment.

DOG POISONER AT WORK IN BOROUGH

The dog-poisoner is again at work in the borough and three canines have fallen victims in the neighborhood of Watchung avenue and Chatham street. One of the dogs which died yesterday as a result of underhand work was "Colonel," the valuable Boston bull, belonging to Mrs. Margaret Wilson, of Grove street. He dropped in his tracks at Chatham and Warren streets. The dog was known almost everywhere in the borough and was the idol of the children in the vicinity of his home.

Early this morning another dog was found dead on Chatham street, giving evidence of poison. At noon Chief Marshal Weiss was notified that a third dog had crawled into the yard at Mrs. Back's, 21 Chatham street, and was suffering from the same trouble. Percy Culver and Claude Hann were sent to the scene and put the animal out of its misery with a couple of pistol shots.

Chief Weiss said later that he would conduct a personal investigation to learn the source of the poisoning. He asserted that he is always ready to help a neighborhood get rid of undesirable dogs, but draws the line at people taking the law in their own hands and ruthlessly exterminating all in sight.

ASSOCIATION GAME TAKES PLACE TOMORROW.

The Plainfield Association Football Club will play the Eureka A. A., of Kearney, on the Clinton avenue field tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. This will be one of the Inter-City league games and should be of special interest to soccer fans as the Eurekas are leading the league with Plainfield in second place. The Eurekas have played thirteen games and have not lost a single one. It will be up to the local aggregation to do the trick.

Plainfield will lineup as follows: McNeice, Menzies, Craig, Crawford, Hosie, McComb, Spalding, Mitchell, Heaume, Braidwood, Sutton; reserves Mackay, Gould, Marks, John Johnson, of Arlington, will be the referee.

Planning to Improve Streets.

The Councilmanic street committee met last evening and discussed proposed repairs to the streets of the city during the coming year. It was realized that there are many streets needing immediate attention and just as soon as possible work will be started under the direction of Street Commissioneh Gavett. It is likely that the committee will use oil to a considerable extent this year, it having given satisfaction in the past. These matters will be taken up at greater length a little later.

South Plainfielders Delayed.

South Plainfield commuters returning home last night were delayed near Potters' Crossing, their train, No. 3, being held up by a freight which had pulled out two draw heads, disabling the air brake system. The engine on train No. 3 uncoupled and helped to push the stalled freight into the yards at South Plainfield, where a repair gangs fixed up the disabled engine.

Mrs. Mary E. Teeple.

Mrs. Mary E. Teeple, an aged widow of South Plainfield, died at her home in that place, last night. She was well known among the older residents. The funeral will be held at the Baptist church, South Plainfield, Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The burial will be at Samptown.

CHAPTER XXII.

A BOLD RESOLUTION.

Mr. Foscombe found it convenient to be absent in the city for the rest of the day and most of the evening. He dined in town and did not go home till late, hoping that there would be no necessity for his seeing Eva that day.

But as soon as he was known to have returned a note from her was put into his hand. She wanted to see him for a few moments.

He went to her room and took her hand in silence. She did not look up and silently thanked him for refraining from offering to condole with her.

"I only want to ask you, Mr. Foscombe, do you think it possible that I should see him again?"

"My dear Miss Fitzgerald," he said gently, "it distresses me more than I can tell you, but such a thing could never be allowed. Even in the cases of blood relations they never allow it if it can possibly be avoided. You can see that with the limited accommodation they have in London hospitals it would be difficult to make arrangements"—

He paused, hoping that the girl would fill up the gap for herself. And as she was entirely ignorant of the rules in force in London hospitals she gave up the hope she had cherished of gazing once more on the face of the man she loved.

"Besides," said Mr. Foscombe, "I should think that by this time, or, at all events, before a visit from you could be arranged for, his relatives will have removed the remains to the country."

"Oh, may I not go to the funeral even?" cried Eva; and there was such an accent of despair in her voice that the man had not the heart to say at once, as he had intended doing, that this, too, would be out of the question.

"If the funeral is to be at one of the London cemeteries nothing would be easier," he said after a pause. "But if it is to be in the country I am afraid you would find it very awkward to obtrude yourself upon strangers, who might not be disposed to admit any claim on your part. Do you know whether Guy had mentioned his approaching marriage to any of his relations?"

"I—I don't know. You see, the thing was decided in such a hurry—there was no time"—

"I quite understand," said Foscombe in a sympathetic tone. "Guy may very well have thought that there would be plenty of time to announce his marriage afterward. I know he was frightfully busy—indeed I should not wonder if it was overwork that brought on his illness."

After this conversation Foscombe had no difficulty in making Eva believe that the funeral was to take place in the north of England and that it would be thought an indelicate thing if she were to travel down to Durham to be present at the last rites. He showed her a paragraph apparently cut from a newspaper in which the death of Mr. Lorimer was referred to as an event of local interest, but in reality this was an unnecessary precaution. She had learned at the hospital that he was in great danger, and it never once occurred to her to doubt her lover's chosen friend when he told her that the death that had been expected had actually happened.

Foscombe kept out of Eva's way for the next three or four days. He could not bear the sight of her grief and, besides, he felt that he would best consult his own interests by refraining from anything like intrusion at that time.

But at the end of a week he received a message from her and he went at once to her room.

"Mr. Foscombe," she said, going up to him and taking his hand in both her own, "I simply do not know how to thank you for your constant and great goodness to me. But I feel that I have trespassed on your kindness—I mean on your aunt's and yours—too long. I have written to my mother, telling her what has happened and asking if I may go home."

This was no news to the lawyer. He had anticipated that Eva would write to her mother and he had given strict instructions that any letter she might write must not be posted, but must be brought to him unopened. As this order was backed by an offer of £5 for the letter his orders were strictly obeyed, and the letter which Eva imagined had been dispatched to Castle Dare was handed to Foscombe. He had the grace to burn it unopened.

No answer coming from Castle Dare, Eva wrote again, and again the letter was handed to Mr. Foscombe and destroyed.

But the scheming lawyer knew that this could not go on indefinitely, and he was not surprised when she told him one evening that she had made up her mind to go home next day.

That night Eva's sorrow was tinged with a new bitterness. She was going home, solitary and ashamed. She did not know what reception awaited her, but she judged from her mother not answering her letters that it would not be a very cordial one.

And then the thought came to her: What was the end to be? Must she, after all, marry Sir Rufus? She felt that she would die first!

Then, not for the first time, the question sprang up in her mind, Why was her mother so anxious that she should become Lady Deveril? It must be because of some secret tie between her mother and Sir Rufus. They must be in some way connected, though there was no relationship between them. What could be the nature of that tie? She could not guess, except that its effect seemed to be that her mother was forced to do what Sir Rufus wished.

At the thought only of the miserable thraldom in which her mother must have been living Eva conceived a noble idea. She would find out the nature of the hold that Sir Rufus evidently had over her mother and set her free.

But how was she to learn that secret? Not at Castle Dare. She knew that she could never wring it from her mother. But was it not possible that either by finesse or by accident she might get Sir Rufus himself to tell her the nature of the secret? Surely it was at least possible. She must see him and either by cajolery or threats worm the truth out of him.

She felt certain that she had seen Sir Rufus' name in a society paper only the day before, and she soon found the paragraph:

"Sir Rufus Deveril is at his country seat, Ravenscrag, Wesdale, Cumberland, and he will probably remain there till partridge shooting begins on the 1st."

Eva decided that the opportunity of having it out with Sir Rufus was too good to be lost. She would spend a night at some town in the north country and so arrive at Ravenscrag early in the day and avoid the awkwardness of having to decline an invitation to stay overnight. There was no need, she decided, to mention her project to Mr. Foscombe. He would be surprised and would probably try to dissuade her from going to Ravenscrag, and she did not mean to be dissuaded.

Before she went to bed that night she had made up her mind, and next morning at Euston she took her ticket, not for Dublin, but for Kendal.

CHAPTER XXIII.

A MAD ESCAPADE.

Eva slept so poorly at Kendal that she missed her train in the morning and did not get one till noon.

In the afternoon she found herself at a small station dignified by the name of Junction because three times a day a train took its leisurely way along the single line to Wesdale. There was no substantial building, no refreshment room, no waiting rooms even. And there was an hour to wait.

The rain was coming down in torrents. It rained as if it had rained always and never would stop raining.

There was a wooden shed, along one side of which ran a narrow bench. At the other end of the bench sat a girl with a trunk at her side waiting for a train. She had a downcast air, and it was easy to see from the redness of her eyes and the handkerchief rolled into a ball and tightly clinched in her right hand that she had recently been crying.

Through a window could be seen a good sized stone house bearing a great sign, "Railway Hotel—Wines and Spirits."

Would it be possible, Eva asked herself, to go across to the hotel and get a cup of coffee? She hesitated and stopped. The girl on the bench was sobbing. Eva stepped back under shelter of the shed and walked up to her.

"I was just thinking of going over to the hotel yonder and trying to get a cup of hot coffee. May I order one for you as well? I am sure it would do you good."

The only answer was that the girl buried her face in her hands and gave full vent to her wretchedness.

Eva waited until the paroxysm was over and then said gently: "It is easy to see that you are in trouble. Tell me what it is and I will help you if I can."

The girl looked up at the sweet face bending over her and a few seconds passed before she replied.

"I don't know what to do nor where to go," she said at length, speaking with a decidedly cockney accent. "I want to git back to London and I ain't got the money to pay my fare. I came here to go to a place, but I'm not going to that house."

"What house?"

A Geisha Girl

By SADIE OLCOTT

"By the spirits of your ancestors I beseech you to hide me!"

The words were spoken by a young Japanese who rushed into a tea house where stood a startled geisha girl. It was more than forty years ago, when the followers of the mikado and the shogun were struggling for the supremacy in Japan.

"What is it, Herobumi?" asked the girl quickly.

"The shoganites! They are after me. If they catch me they will kill me. Quick, Nikama!"

The girl darted glances in every direction, and finally her eyes lighted on what she at once recognized as the best place for concealment. In every Japanese house is a dust hole. The ground floor is raised about two feet above the earth, and a square hole is cut in the floor, into which the dust and litter of the rooms are swept.

"Get in there, quick!" cried the girl, pointing to the hole.

Herobumi sprang into the hole, doubling himself up to occupy the space. Nikama put a board over it, and on the board she placed a brazier, thus concealing the hole and making it appear that the brazier rested on the floor. Then she sat down before the brazier, in which was a fire, and appeared to be lazily warming herself. In another moment a band of armed men rushed in. The girl looked up at them in feigned surprise.

"A man is here," said their leader, "whom we seek. We saw him enter. Where is he?"

"You are welcome to look for him."

"We will see for ourselves," replied the man, and, with his followers, he began a search of the premises. They moved furniture; they opened closets; they pulled out drawers. Into every cranny in the house they peered, but none of them thought of the dust hole. Thinking him they sought had simply passed through and had gone on, they rushed out as hurriedly as they had come in. When they were well away the girl called to the hider:

"There is nothing now to fear, Herobumi, but you had better remain where you are for awhile in case they come back."

"Thank you, Nikama. You have saved my life. I knew when I came, having been here at times for tea, that I would not be betrayed, but I did not know that I would find one who by her presence of mind would keep my head on my shoulders."

The girl went out and looked about and, finding all pursuit of the fugitive in that vicinity had been abandoned, returned to the house, removed the brazier, and Herobumi came out of the hole. He did not think of the dust with which he was covered, but Nikama did, and, getting a wisp broom, she brushed his clothes. Then he took both her hands in his and said to her:

"You are but a poor geisha girl, while I am of a far different rank, but I promise that you shall never regret the act of this day."

When it was dark he slipped out of the tea house and found a more permanent place of safety.

One day—it was after the shogun had been permanently defeated and the mikado securely placed upon the throne of Japan—a jinrikisha stopped before the tea house. Nikama was standing at the door, and who should she see alight from the jinrikisha but the young man whose life she had saved. He came up and led her out on to a veranda.

"I have not seen you for a long while," she said. "I feared that the shogunites had caught you at last."

"No; I was too slippery for them. But all my inventive powers—and there are those who esteem them considerable—are as nothing compared with yours. Had it not been for your quick acting brain I should not now be here."

The girl, naturally pleased at his appreciation of her act, smiled and blushed.

"I told you that you would not regret your act of that terrible day," continued the visitor, "nor shall you. I wish to make you a present. I will first offer you that which I value most highly and which will include within itself all I can give you. Then if you prefer a part rather than the whole you may ask for what you like and I will give it.

"You speak in riddles, Herobumi, or, rather, you speak like the mikado when you say you will give what I ask. Are you, a young man not yet thirty years old, so powerful that you can give me anything I ask?"

"I can at least give you that which I prize most."

"And that is"—

"Myself."

The girl stood looking at him in astonishment. No high caste young man in Japan was likely to marry a geisha girl.

"I am the whole," resumed the young man. "If you don't find me to your taste you may take a part."

"But I know you only as one who has come here to drink tea and be amused," said Nikama.

"Oh, you wish for my credentials. Well, then, know that when our new government was formed it was I who was principally intrusted with its formation. Then I was made prime minister by the emperor, and that office I hold at the present time."

It is true that Prince Herobumi Ito of Japan, who was recently assassinated, married the geisha girl who more than forty years ago saved his life by hiding him in a dust hole, put a board and brazier on it and then invited the followers of the shogun to search the house.

The Market Strength which characterizes the Securities of the

PUBLIC SERVICE CORPORATION OF NEW JERSEY

at the present time is not in our opinion merely a temporary condition—but, we believe, the natural result of an adequate appreciation on the part of the public and investors, both here and in other cities, of the inherent values lying back of these securities and the continually increasing earning power of this Corporation.

Investors who buy Public Service securities at the present time are not only sure of obtaining a safe investment, but one which promises increases in value.

We WANT COMPETITION of the Right Sort, Not the Following Kind!

A Mrs. S—— after selecting her outfit and learning the total cost from our plainly marked price tags, said she preferred to make comparisons elsewhere before ordering, to which we readily agreed, for it's a thing we always URGE!

On getting another store's prices (where they were marked in private signs) she found ours were far less, and SAID so. The salesman promptly dropped to our figures—AND GOT THE ORDER.

Here, where there's but ONE PLAINLY MARKED PRICE ON EVERY ITEM, such an "accommodating" and sudden price drop would be impossible—here, when you read the price tag, you KNOW it's already at lowest point, for ALL prices are made and REMAIN on the SAME UNIFORMLY SMALL PROFIT BASIS. We don't HAVE to run a "leader" here and there for an hour, or a day, to catch trade, as ALL lines are equally good values EVERY day in the year!

All we want is HONEST competition that meet OUR plainly marked prices WITH prices you can READ!

ISN'T THAT FAIR?

EASY CREDIT 6 months, 1 year, or 1½ year's time to pay—or 10 per cent off for cash. EVERY PRICE MARKED IN PLAIN FIGURES.

Elizabethtown Company Empowered to Draw Water Here if it Desires.

OTHER OBSTACLES FOUND.

Property-Owners Point Out the Troubles Which Would Follow If Public Ownership is Adopted.

More unforseen obstacles in the way of municipal ownership of a water supply in Plainfield were presented at a public meeting held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms, last night, when Winfield S. Angleman, a lawyer, read from the laws of 1872, a supplement to an act incorporating the Elizabethtown Water company, showing that that company has the right to pump water for its use from any locality in Union county, and that it could come to Plainfield, bore wells and take water out of the city under its charter rights.

This announcement caused a great stir among the citizens present and had a tendency to still further their belief that a new contract with the Plainfield-Union Water company is the best thing for the city's interest. Mr. Angleman also quoted a portion of an editorial taken from the Newark Evening News, which he said was an independent newspaper and not controlled by the interests, which has an important bearing on local conditions. The abstract follows:

"Canal abandonment, if it is carried out at the present session of the Legislature, will mean a readjustment of the whole water situation throughout North Jersey. It will mean, too, that the safe thing to do will be to postpone as far as possible all action looking to new water supply enterprises until a careful study can be made of all the effects that the surrender of canal water rights will have on existing corporations and on running contracts for water supplies."

Mr. Angleman read from the laws of 1872, Chapter CCCLXXI page 874, supplement to the act incorporating the Elizabethtown Water company, which is as follows:

"And be it enacted, that the said company are hereby authorized and empowered to do any and all lawful acts necessary and expedient to procuse water for the domestic and public uses of the citizens of the city of Elizabeth, and places adjacent thereto; and it shall be lawful for the said company, by its officers and agents, to enter at all times upon all lands or waters in the county of Union, and survey, excavate, and bore for water, and locate pipes, drains, reservoirs, and other buildings and fixtures, doing no unnecessary damage to private property; and when said location shall have been determined upon, shall cause a map to be made of all lands, except streets now in use, which they may require for the purposes of this act and the act to which this is a supplement, and file the same in the office of the clerk of the County of Union; and then it shall be lawful for the said company, by its officers, agents or contractors, to enter upon and hold the same for reservoirs, conduits, and all other purposes necessary for compliteing the works hereby contemplated and to take and use such water as they may need, subject to such compensation as is hereinafter provided."

The recent decision of Vice-Chancellor Stevens in the case of the East Jersey Water company was referred to by Mr. Angleman and he explained that recent decisions all tended toward the conservation of waters by the State against the action of water companies.

Leighton Calkins, who was chosen chairman of the meeting, at this point requested Mr. Angleman to read a communication received from former Councilman Elliot T. Barrows, bearing on the subject. The communication follows:

"I expected to appear in person, but a severe illness has kept me confined to my room this past week, and I therefore ask your indulgence for these remarks on the Water and other city questions, so pertinent at this time to every man, woman and child of our city.

"Figures have been presented to show that some ten thousand dollars ($10,000) has been paid out thus far for Commissions and Expert Engineers' advice; this I consider well expended and the only unfortunate incident connected with it is that we did not have their full reports before the vote was taken giving the Council the power to build, condemn, or purchase a Water System; for I am sure, but few of us would have voted in the affirmative if we had been cognizant of the facts at that time.

"Exception seems to be taken to what is known as 'large property owners' appearing so prominent, and that we should hear from the 'small

MAYOR APPLAUDED

Mothers' Association Approves Betterment Crusade at Meeting Yesterday.

URGE WELFARE BUREAU BILL.

New Jersey Congressmen to Be Asked to Help Pass Measure for Children—A Resolution.

Among the things of moment done at the meeting of the Mothers' Association yesterday were a resolution unanimously passed praising Mayor Moy for his actions in bettering the conditions of the city, and another authorizing the secretary of the association to write to the Congressmen of New Jersey urging them to support House Bill No. 24,128, which provides for the establishment of a Federal Child's Bureau. After the regular business meeting the members adjourned to the Y. M. C. A. Hall where the lecture by Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews was listened to with approval.

The topic which occupied most of the time of the members was the State Congress of Mothers which is to be held in this city next November. Discussion of this subject took up a greater part of the afternoon and resulted in several plans being made which will tend to make the event a memorable one. Over 100 delegates are expected to attend the congress.

The Federal Child's Bureau is believed to be one of the most urgent needs of the present day involving as it does the keeping of records of vital statistics covering every phase of child life and suggesting the methods by which certain evil conditions may be eliminated and the child of coming generations improved mentally, physically and morally. The bill was introduced in the Senate in 1905 but through proscratination, say the mothers, it has not been sufficiently urged in Congress. Every association in the State is now working to have this bill passed.

The resolution introduced at the close of the meeting follows:

"Resolved, That the efforts of Mayor Moy in enforcing the laws relative to keeping the Sabbath Day holy, which appeals strongly to the mothers of Plainfield, and his further efforts to prohibit the sale of strong drink and of cigarettes to minors which manifestly are for the physical and moral good of the growing generation be and the same are most emphatically approved by this association.

"Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Mayor, to the local press and in addition given such publicity as is possible."

Following the mothers' meeting the members adjourned to Y. M. C. A. Hall where at the conclusion of Rev. Mr. Mathiews' lecture, Mrs. Harold Corbusier addressed the gathering briefly, expressing a feeling of approbation and approval of the work being done by the Women's Auxiliary of the Young Men's Christian Association for the children in the home. Mrs. Corbusier said that the Mothers' Association was heartily in sympathy with the movement and would encourage it.

Mrs. Corbusier told of the coming State congress of mothers and outlined its purposes, inviting all those present to attend, assuring them that information of inestimable value to all mothers would be given at the two days' session.

Rev. Mr. Mathiews responded with words of appreciation of the sentiments of the mothers and thanked them for the invitation.

MISS VIOLET STEWART WEDS CHAUNCEY LANT.

Miss Viola Stewart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Stewart, of 971 West Fourth street, and Chauncey Lant, son of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Lant, of West Third street, were married this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the parsonage of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, by the pastor, Rev. C. S. Kemble.

The couple was accompanied by their parents. After a brief wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Lant will reside at 971 West Fourth street. Mr. Lant is employed by the New Jersey Central at the Jersey City offices.

"Our Primary Department."

The Sunday-school Times will soon publish a new book by William D. Murray called "Our Primary Department." It contains an account of the work being done in the primary department of the Crescent Avenue church Sunday-school, together with illustrations.

Mrs. F. William Leitheusser, who underwent an operation for spendicitis at Muhlenberg Hospital, returned home Thursday and is improving rapidly.

RYTHMIC GROWTH

Subject of First of New Series of Talks by Rev. F. K. Mathiews.

JIMMIE, JAMES AND JIM.

Physical Development and Its Relation to Present Day Methods —Approval of Mothers' Association.

Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews delivered the first of a series of talks to mothers of boys on "Oedience," yesterday afternoon in Y. M. C. A. Hall. The widespread interest the mothers of this city are taking in these lectures was manifest by an attendance of 101. Mr. Mathiews' topic was "Jimmie, James and Jim, or the Problem Stated From the Viewpoint of the Boy."

Explaining the significance of the topic, Mr. Mathiews said that the boy's personality is liable to three interpretations: Jimmie, the boy of the gang, as the boys know him. James the model boy the mother likes to think her boy as being, and Jim, the real boy. The principal cause at work in the making of this strange personality is physical and effort should be made to relate the physical fact to ethical precept. In the treatment of mental and moral delinquency we are beginning to understand the relation of body to mind and morals.

Considering the fact and consequences of physical growth, there are two things to be remembered: First, the physical growth of the boy is largely by acceleration. The infant's weight doubles during the first six months and increases 175 per cent. during the first year. The weight of the heart doubles during the first two years while the weight of the brain doubles in one year. At the age of 6 the child has seventh-ninths of the adult brain. The adolescent boy increases in weight in three years from one-half the adult to three-fourths the adult weight. In height he increases during this same period from four-fifths to nine-tenths of the adult height. Other physical growths are similar. Second, the physical growth of the boy is rythmical. Muscles and morals go together. Muscles are the organs of the will.

Mr. Mathiews applied the test of physiological facts in three ways: First, concentratre on environment rather than on particular faults; the boy of 13 needs plenty of fresh air. Bright boys always have good lungs. Second, expect much; demand little. The child has little sense because the physical brain has not developed through proper co-relation. Third, cultivate the habit of over-looking A study of over 3,000 boys between the ages of 11 and 18 on the basis of good, bad and indifferent shows that at the age of 11 seventy per cent. were good. The percentage decreases until the age of 18 is reached when we find it has increased to 74. What has happened? The boy has passed through the adolescent period in which states of mind and body are produced.

Members of the Mothers' Association heard the lecture and later Mrs. Harold Corbusier addressed the gathering. The next lecture will be given next Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

MEADOWVIEW KENNELS WON ALL SETTER PRIZES.

Meadowview Yale won first open and winners and May Belle won first open in the matron class and winners, while Deydora Countess won first American bred and reserve winners. The other winners were the brace and team classes and the Duquesne Club medals for best setter dog and best setter bitch. May Belle also won the trophy offered for the best English setter in the entire show.

As Pittsburg and the towns in the neighborhood are noted for their high-class English setters the winnings are considered most complimentary to the A. G. Hooley Kennels.

ACTION ENDORSED

Boro's Resolution on City's Refusal to Renew Gloekler License.

WANT THE STREET WIDENED.

Mayor Makes Report on Brunson Suit Against Somerset County—Petition to Macadamize Allen Place.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Borough Council last night a resolution was presented and passed endorsing the action of the City Council in refusing the liquor license application of Christian Gloekler. The ground was taken that inasmuch as these premises guard the approach to the main entrance of North Plainfield, the removal of the saloon might tend to improve the gateway. The vote was not unanimous.

Councilman W. L. Smalley introduced the resolution and spoke in favor of it, as did Mr. Van Arsdale and Mr. Waldron. Mr. Milne and Mr. Stahl were in opposition. The former declared that it was really a matter that did not concern the borough and should keep its hands off. He asserted that if the abolition of the saloon would eventually result in the widening of Somerset street at that point and the erection of a modern building, he would heartily concur, otherwise the borough would derive more harm than good. Mr. Stahl seconded his remarks.

Mayor Smalley expressed himself as being in favor of the resolution for the same reasons as those given by the three councilmen, He asserted that the corner was one that all strangers noticed on entering the borough and that the saloon occupancy held up improvement. With this obstacle removed there is a chance of improvements that would vastly benefit North Plainfield. He added that he would like to see the resolution passed unanimously, but the vote was recorded with W. L. Smalley, Van Asdale and Waldron in favor and Milne and Stahl against. Councilman Woolston was absent.

In the course of regular business considerable discussion was evoked by an application from L. B. Goldstein to erect a store and dwelling on Cedar street. He originally applied to the building committee about two months ago, but was held up because the plans did not conform with the borough ordinance. Goldstein proposed to erect the store in front of the house extending the former to the sidewalk line, thus shutting off the porch view of all nearby residences. The plans were changed to put the store back to the porch line, but there is nothing in them to prevent the addition of a wooden covering to lead from the walk, thus making it practically the same as before.

Mr. Goldstein was given the privilege of the floor, last night, to explain his proposition. His remarks did not alter the opinion of the councilmen and the application was denied. Mayor Smalley stated afterward that it is not the purpose of the authorities to interfere with the rights or privileges of citizens, but they do propose to protect property owners and put an end to the building of structures that will depreciate values.

The following building permits were granted: Edward Mundy, dwelling on Greenbrook road; U. G. Tingley, erection of porch to residence at Grove street and Lincoln place; J. C. Burner, Jackson avenue, addition of porch to residence; Walter Conover, addition to barn on Jackson avenue.

Mayor Smalley addressed the Council briefly on the hearing before Vice-Chancellor Howell in the Brunson application for an injunction against the Somerset freeholders to prevent the removal of certain trees from in front of property on Greenbrook road. The borough, the mayor said, was interested with the freeholders in the improvements on the thoroughfare and was giving its support to them. The hearing is to be continued next week.

Resolutions were passed authorizing bids for crushed stone for borough needs and the purchase of the former borough bank safe, now stored in the fire house, at a cost of $600. A petition was received from the residents of Allen place asking that it be macadamized. The matter was referred to the proper committee. Bills to the amount of $1,849.14 were ordered paid and chairman Stahl's report showed the fire department expenses for the month were $222.73. The usual request of Winfield Scott Post for $35 to help defray the cost of Memorial Day expenses, was granted.

Miss Sarah Wells, of New York, one of the territorial secretaries, will speak at the Y. W. C. A. meeting at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon and Miss Bertha vanNuis Willis will sing. A social hour will follow.

MYSTERY STILL SURROUNDS ORIGIN OF FIRE AT COLLEGE

Cupola Where Blaze Started Was Kept Locked—Prized Paintings and Tapestries Cannot be Replaced—Work on New Building to be Started at Once.

What caused the fire which destroyed the College of Mt. St. Mary structure on the slope of the Watchung mountains entailing a loss of $220,000, on Thursday morning is still as much a mystery as when the blaze was discovered by Sister Cecelia. Father Miller, who has taken charge of much of the work following the disaster, at the request of Mother Gabriel, said today that he was unable to account for it.

The priest asserted that some believe it originated in the electric wiring. No matches could have been dropped carelessly in the cupola, where the fire started, he declared because it was a rule that no student was allowed in that part of the structure. Only when the bishop or some noted visitor wanted to get a panaramic view was any one permitted to go up there and then care was observed that no cigar or other light be taken there.

Within a week at the latest, work on clearing away the debris will be finished and the actual work of rebuilding will be begun. This is stated on the opinion expressed today by Father Miller, who asserted that the Bishop ordered that no time be lost in raising a structure to replace the one now in ruins. Whether the building will be designed the same as the old one is not decided but probably no change in the architecture will be made. As this is the mother house of the Order of Mercy in America, large quarters are imperative for some times as many as 200 sisters may have to be accommodated here.

Among the prize possessions eaten up by the flames was a huge painting representing "The Virgin and the Mother, St. Ann," and another equally costly was "The Virgin and St. Elizabeth." One of these was imported and was the work of an Italian Master. There were seven of these precious paintings among them being "Christ Before Pilat,e" the work of Sister Xavier. All of them were hung in the corridors and evcited the admiration of visitors. Some were painted by sisters of the order long since dead.

This was the case also with several fine large tapestries destroyed by the fire. One of the tapestries, highly prized, was done by Mother Regius, who has passed away. She and other sisters studied abroad under foreign masters as did some who painted pictures of sacred scenes. The losses of these caused the hearts of Mother Gbbriel and the sisters almost to break when they realized that they could not be replaced.

In the library were cases of curios collected in the Holy Land, India and the Far East. These were the gifts of Lord Anthony MacDonald, of England, who spent years in India and other lands as a representative of the British Govenrment. His sister is a member of the Order of Mercy and through her he gave them to the College here.

Father Miller said today that Mother Gabriel had received many letters of sympathy from trustees, patrons and friends of the institution and that some letters contained contributions for the rebuilding fund. Whether a benefit performance will be given the priest said is still doubtful but some means he asserted will be used to procure funds.

Referring to the precautions taken against fire, Father Miller explained today that Mother Gabriel had assigned a sister whose duty it was to daily visit the tower to see that all was right. The key to the cupola was always in her possession and the door was kept locked.

In anticipation of the crowds of sightseers that will visit the college tomorrow, Father Miller has announced that no one will be allowed nearer than 100 feet. There is great danger of heavy stones dropping from the walls and in addition the authorities have been greatly annoyed already by people poking in the debris for articles to be carried away as souvenirs. A cordon of police, aided by members of the St. Joseph's Holy Name Society, will maintain a guard line. It will be continued from tomorrow until further notice.

The condition of Sister Ligouri, who was critically ill when carried out of the burning building, remains the same, according to a report from St. Gabriel's academy today.

MOTHERS' CONGRESS ON CHILD WELFARE

On April 26, there will open in Washington, D. C., the International Congress of Mothers' Clubs. The congress will last until May 2 and representatives from all over the country will attend. The subject for discussion will be Child Welfare.

According to a recently issued circular of the Mothers club, of Chicago, the movement for the betterment of the child everywhere was started in 1897 by Mrs. Pheobe Hearst, assisted by Mrs. Theodore W. Birney. Mrs. Hearst, who now lives in Pleasanton, Cal., has founded numbers of free kindergartens in the west and through these smaller institutions sprang the knowledge that organized effort was necessary for the welfare of the child. Therefore with Mrs. Birney as a helper and through correspondence a mothers congress was held in Washington where thorough organization took place. Mrs. Birney became its first president.

Msr. Hearst bore the entire expense of the first congress and as vice-president aided in all directions possible to her, in making it a help and inspiration to the mothers of the land. Today there are 38 State branches, the most recent of which being that established by Mrs. Frederick Schoff in Alabama, established on February 3 last. Mrs. Schoff's success in organization has been remarkable and it is expected that the coming Congress will be the greatest in the history of the organization. All interested are invited to be present.

Mr. Harper was passing through the kitchen of Mr. Hazel's home on East Sixth street, when her dog jumped at him, inflicting a wound on his hand. Mr. Harper had the the wound cauterized by Dr. Marcus L. Clawson.

GOVERNMENT BUYS J.W. TYGARD ENGINE

James W. Tygard, of South avenue, the inventor of the Tygard steam and gas engine, has returned from New York, where he has been exhibiting his famous steam engine. It was suspended on a chain, direction connection, and demonstrations were given showing that the engine was capable of making from ten to 5,000 revolutions a minute and being instantly reversed without shock or jar. It is a "cut-off" engine and not a turbine.

Two of the engines have been sold to the Government for steam launch service in the navy and a ship building concern in Brooklyn has purchased one of the large 5,000 horsepower engines for steamship use. Within a short time Mr. Tygard expects to manufacture gas engines here. The steam engines are now being made in Pittsburg. The Union Pacific Railroad Company, under license, has about equipped one of their large engines with a 1,500 horse-power gasolene engine for a test and it will be shown in New York within two weeks.

Nelson, of New Market, to recover a penalty of $50 for failure on the part of the physician to comply with the provisions of the law requiring reports of births to be filed within five days. The specific charge is that Dr. Nelson failed to make any return for several months of the birth of a son of Charles Day, which occurred September 14, 1910.

The bringing of a suit is in accordance with the announced determination of the board to prosecute all cases of failure to comply with the law where sufficient evidence is obtainable.

"LUNATICS" RAID A DINNER.

Guest of F. W. Roebling Wounds One Before Learning It Was a Joke.

A practical joke that resulted seriously was a feature of the dinner in the Trenton Country Club house on Monday evening, to Ferdinand W. Roebling, in honor of the sixty-ninth anniversary of his birth.

Mr. Roebling and his friends were at the table, when an official of the New Jersey State Hospital for the Insane, who was present, was summoned to the telephone. Returning to his chair, he remarked that the inmates of one of the most violent wards in the institution had escaped. The club is situated near the asylum, and it was not a great while before a crash of glass was heard and a number of wild looking persons, armed with pitchforks and clubs, burst into the room.

To those who were not in on the hoax, the affair appeared serious. A guest seized a bottle and struck one of the intruders on the head, inflicting a serious injury. It was some time before the "joke" could be explained and the diners made to know that the entire matter was in fun.

Ain't Skeered, Are Ye?

It is supposed in annexation circles that Champ's cat has been safely bagged again. A little manipulation and a little diplomacy brought the feline back to its old place. But Canadians are not so simple as some people imagine. They know to what end a particular path leads. And if they are wanting in knowledge on this point they have but to turn to President Taft's message to Congress which tells them that they are at the parting of the ways and that reciprocity is designed to lead them to Washington.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

OPPENHEIM, COLLINS & CO.

Opening of Their Handsome New Newark Store on Monday, Mar. 6—Immense New Stock of Women's, Misses' and Children's Wearing Apparel.

A distinguished addition to the already notable list of Newark's high-class mercantile houses will be made at 9 o'clock Monday morning, when Oppenheim, Collins & Co. throw open the door of their new store at the corner of Broad and William streets.

The firm will deal exclusively in women's, misses' and children's wearing apparel, as has been their custom in their other large stores in New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia and Buffalo, where they have been established for the last decade.

The building, which has just been completed, is four stories in height and has a frontage of 50 feet in Broad street and a depth of 175 feet in William street, with an "L" extension of 80 feet. The furniture and fixtures throughout are of rich red mahogany

The first floor is devoted to the sale of ladies' waists, petticoats, skirts, coats and children's garments.

The second floor is given over to ladies' and misses' gowns, dresses and suits.

On the third floor is a handsomely-appointed reception room, and a floor space set apart especially for fitting and alterations. The space on the fourth floor is occupied by a lunchroom for the employes and a stockroom.

The firm calls particular attention to the reception room, which will be at all times at the service of the patrons of the store.

A fully equipped writing room has also been laid out, where handsome stationery and writing materials are provided.

Oppenheim, Collins & Co. enter the Newark field strongly backed by a reputation earned during the last decade in Manhattan and other cities, and their advent should be warmly welcomed by the shopping public of Newark and its suburbs.

The gentle spring, as poets say,
Is nearly due.
I know I rather feel that way—

BASEBALL.

Arthur Irwin, peerless scout for the New York Americans, says a pennant is in sight for the Yanks this year. Irwin has been visiting in New England, and leaving for New York Thursday to escort a squad of players to Athens, Ga., said: "It isn't the fact that I draw good money from the Yankees' treasury that makes me pick Farrell's team to get the flag this year. It is sound logic. It will be a royal battle between our team and the Athletics, and I figure that Bender and Plank are due to slow up a little. With Ford in trim we should be able to beat them out."

President Edward Barrow, of the Eastern League promulgated the following contracts, purchases and releases yesterday: Contracts—With Newark, Adam Rankin Johnson, Frank P. Swayne; with Providence, Frank Winn Duffy, George C. Nill, Roy Green, Matthew H. Doyle, George F. Edwards, James Gillespie, J. H. Doyle, William Lyster; with Toronto, Teddy Cather; with Montreal, William S. Savage, Joseph Yeager, L. U. Purtell, Fred Ashton, Phil Sitton, Ed. Bridges. Reinstated—By Buffalo, Ed Speer. Released by purchase—By Huntington to Buffalo, Ragsdale; by Boston Nationals to Buffalo, Bay and Sharpe; by Buffalo to Troy, Walter S. Woods; by Newark to Jersey City, Jake Gettman; by Boston Nationals to Providence, C. Elliston; by Toronto to Wilkes-Barre, Wilbur Corey; by Philadelphia Americans to Baltimore, J. Atkins.

The Cincinnati club will have no scouts during the coming baseball year. This has been settled by Manager Clark Griffith, who believes that a regular scout to work from April until October is a bit expensive and is very little help to a club. Therefore he will do away with this practice, which has been one of the rules of local club for the past six years.

He will use Cliff Latimer, one of the veteran catchers, whenever he hears of anybody he thinks he might want. Latimer has been one of the best scouts in the major leagues, securing several great men who are used by the different clubs.

However, he feels that he must quit this business except for short trips, and therefore he and Griffith have come to the conclusion that any time the team wants a certain player looked over it can call upon him.

Latimer told Dreyfus last season that he'd better get George Suggs from Mobile, but Dreyfus didn't like him, so Cincinnati got him, and he won more games than any of the other twirlers.

Professor A. B. Johnson, father of Ban Johnson, president of the American Baseball League, died in Cincinnati Thursday, aged eighty-four years. President Johnson and other members of the family were at the bedside. Until he retired from active life several years ago Professor Johnson was one of the leading educators of Ohio.

Hugh J. MacWilliams, a Cornell student, from Wilmington, Del., was severely hurt in the baseball cage at the Ithaca college Thursday afternoon, when he was struck in the face by a pitched ball. The bridge of his nose was broken and his face was badly bruised. MacWilliams was taken to the infirmary and will not be able to play for the balance of the year.

Hal Chase, manager of the Yankees, has signed another pitcher. His name is Ed Sykes a right-hander who has made some reputation as a performer in semi-professional circles around Chicago. Some pretty good ball players have come from Chicago semi-professional circles. Sykes was recommended by a friend of Chase's in Chicago. He will join the team at Athens.

The gamblers, who, by making a "future book" on baseball, threaten to disrupt the great national game, will have a fine and a hot fight on their hands. The National Baseball Commission is after them and the Department of Justice of the United States is after them. It would be a good thing if the big moguls in baseball could get something criminal on the gamblers, and teach them an effective lesson. Gambling will ruin any sport, but it would seem as if baseball were too big a proposition for the bettors to get in on very strong. Betting has been indulged in freely at the Newark ball park, and Owner Joe McGinnity and former Secretary Tommy Martin did all in their power to stop it. It is said that during the coming season Pinkerton detectives will be employed to see that gambling on the games is stopped. The ones who do the betting could well be spared. They drive away a lot of desirable trade. Get the Pinkertons by all means—Newark News.

GOLF.

The long looked for list of tournament dates as approved by the Metropolitan Golf Association, has made its appearance. Thus far sanctions have been granted from April 20, 21 and 22, when the Country Club of Lakewood will entertain to the end of September. The October and November competitions will be attended to at another time.

Included in the present list are no less than twelve tournaments, and it is worthy of notice that the months of July and August usually shunned by clubs hereabouts, have their share of attractions. The Powelton Club, of Newburgh, which has returned to the invitation tournament game, has July 6, 7 and 8. The new list, which does not include the amateur championship, women' national tournament or women's metropolitan, is as follows:

April 20, 21 and 22—Country Club of Lakewood, annual spring tournament.

May 4, 5 and 6—Garden City Golf Club, annual spring tournament.

May 24, 25, 26 and 27—Garden City Golf Club, metropolitan championship.

June 1, 2 and 3—Englewood Golf Club, New Jersey State championship.

June 15, 16 and 17—Montclair Golf Club, invitation tournament.

June 22, 23 and 24—Apawamis Golf Club, invitation tournament.

June 29 and 30 and July 1—Ardsley Club, annual invitation tournament.

July 13, 14 and 15—Wykagyl Country Club, invitation tournament.

August 24, 25, 26 and 27—Brooklyn-Forest Park Golf Club, annual invitation tournament.

August 30 and September 1—New York Golf Club, invitation tournament.

September 27 and 28—Apawamis Club, seniors' tournament.

JAS. R. BLAIR

THE DAILY PRESS.

Plainfield, N. J., March 4, 1911.

Captain Robert E. Peary is the first "Congress made" hero.

In many parts of the city there is real need for more crosswalks, but for some reason or other the Councilmanic street committee has not been as active as it might to supply the demand. During the recent muddy condition of the streets, complaints have been many and they have been just ones. The only thing for the people to do is to make a good stiff "kick" to the Mayor and Common Council and if this is done we feel quite sure that the necessary cross walks will be laid without any further procrastination.

The attention of the Councilmanic lights and streets committees is called to the inadequacy of lighting facilities at the trolley stand at Fourth street and Watchung avenue. On Sunday nights that particular locality is in darkness save for the few rays of light shed by a 22 candle power incandescent lamp placed high up on a pole. Consequently patrons of the trolley company are unable to even read the signs on the approaching cars unless they stand within a few feet of them. There is urgent need for an arc light at this point and we suggest that one be placed there before some accident occurs.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

At the Plainfield theatre Monday next matinee and night, for the benefit of St. Mary's new convent, Henry Ellsworth, the American traveler and lecturer, will give his pictorial reproduction "Oberammeragu, Its People and Their Passion Play of 1910." Mr. Ellsworth has recently returned from his eleventh summer at Oberammergau. His 304 superbly and correctly colored views are not confined to the Passion Play alone. On the contrary, he takes his audience through the streets of the village, to the homes of all the principal players, to the little stores or shops, then to the King's Castle at Linderhof. He shows how the Passion Play was given before the erection of the present theatre, (1899), tourists going to and returning from the Play. Then follows a series of marvelous views showing every scene and tableau in the Passion Play of 1910. A special feature of unusual interest to all intelligent persons will be the introduction of some of the original Passion Play music of 1910.

One thousand laughs are guaranteed by the management of "The Traveling Salesman," James Forbes' latest comedy which comes to the Plainfield theatre, Thursday next, with the original New York production in its entirety. Each one of the laughs is the logical sequence of a natural, plausible situation in the life of a jovial drummer on the road. To add zest to the already enjoyable performance, Mr. Forbes has interwined in his story a bit of pathos here and there. The company wich Henry B. Harris, the producing manager, will send to this city is the original New York and Chicago aggregation of talent and includes Frank J. McIntyre, Gertrude Coghlan, Sarah McVicker, William Beach, James O'Neill, Jr., Percival T. Moore, H. D. Blakemore, Nicholas Burnham and others.

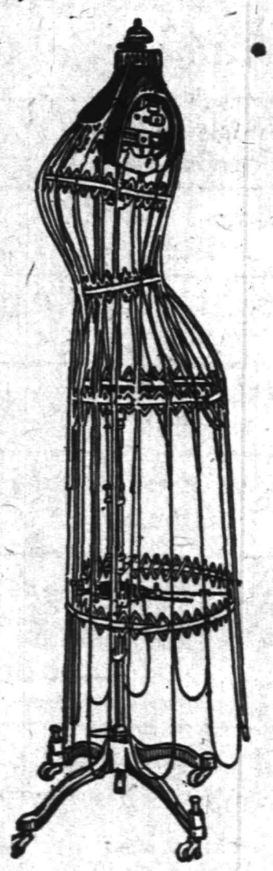
A DEMONSTRATION OF
THE LADY CLAIRE
ADJUSTABLE · DRESS · FORM
To be Given March 3d, 4th and 6th
From 10 a. m. to 6 p. m.
and 7 to 9 p. m.
155 East Front Street



This exhibition is given in compliance with numerous requests following the private demonstration held the first three days of this week for the dressmakers and ladies' tailors of Plainfield.
All women know the value of a Dress Form that can be adjusted to any figure. Everyone accepting this invitation will see at once the remarkable adjustability of the Lady Claire Adjustable Dress Form to every style of figure, shape or size.

Conforms to Every Curve
Unlike the old-fashioned Dress Forms, each part may be regulated independently of the other—neck, chest, bust, shoulders, hips and skirt being capable of separate adjustment. No single conformation interferes in the slightest with the other.
After measurements are taken, all the fitting, draping, trimming and hanging may be done on the Dress Form, and a perfect fitting garment the result. Never since the introduction of the sewing-machine has such a useful invention been offered to dressmakers and women who dressmake at home.
We invite everyone interested in the use of a Dress Form to call at the above address on the days mentioned, and see a demonstration of the Lady Claire Adjustable Dress Form.
One of New York's leading designers and style authorities will be in attendance. Your call will place you under no obligation, nor will you be importuned to give an order.

DRY CLEANING TALK
Number 2
WHAT IS DRY CLEANING?
Many people have erroneous ideas about what Dry Cleaning really is—believing that their clothes are actually cleaned dry—as if by magic method we pass our hands over the Garment and say "Presto!" It is clean.
Dry is a misnomer. "Chemical" cleaning would be a more intelligent name, but people might confuse "Chemical," thinking of acids, alkalies, etc., not used in Dry Cleaning.
The truth is we depend largely upon gasolene, naphtha, benzine—there's a difference—and other petroleum and coal tar products, for our cleansing bath instead of water as do the launderers.
The secret and successful operations in Dry Cleaning are learned only by hard experience and study, coupled with proper equipment. These are what enable us to do superior work.
We know our business thoroughly and are properly equipped in plant, collection and delivery.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

The Plainfield High School girls added somewhat to the prestige of their school yesterday by emulating the example of the boys in winning a game of basketball from the girls' team from "across the brook." The final score was 18 to 14, and there was much rejoicing at the finish. Misses Wean and Phillips played a remarkably strong game for the local school, as did Miss Smith of the borough for her team. The lineup:

Plainfield: Misses Stewart and Durar, forwards; Douglas, center; Wean, Phillips, Walling, guards. North Plainfield, Misses Hummel, Main, forwards; Carson, center; Wadhams, Smith, guards. Referee, Miss Dark.

J. E. HENRY BREAKS LEG IN PECULIAR MANNER.

J. Emmons Henry, of Somerset place, is under treatment at Muhlenberg Hospital for a broken leg, the result of a peculiar accident at his home, yesterday. Mr. Henry had just finished his dinner and was getting up from the table, when his foot caught in a rug and threw him. He at once found himself helpless and had to be assisted to a chair by his wife.

A physician was called and an examination showed a break in the leg between the knee and ankle. Mr. Henry was removed to the hospital where the broken bone was set.

Sam Brooks in Vaudeville.

Sam Brooks, Plainfield's diminutive comedian, has signed with N. E. Manwaring, of New York, as a member of a vaudeville offering soon to be placed on the leading circuits. It is entitled "Four Little Girls and a Teddy Bear" and Brooks will take the difficult but comical role of the shaggy little animal up to all sorts of pranks. Rehearsals commence Monday morning and the act begins a ten weeks' engagement in New York on March 20. It is possible that it may be seen at the local Proctor house late in the spring.

Sues Childs Brothers.

Edward H. Haven, of Montclair, has instituted a suit in Chancery, against former Senator S. S. Childs, of Somerset county, and his brother, William Childs, Jr., charging a deliberate attempt to conduct the business of the Childs Dining Hall Company in their interests at the expense of the other stockholders. Mr. Haven has asked for an accounting and an injunction to restrain further extravagances, which he claims the company has been foolishly indulging.

Express Strike Settled.

The strike of the United States Express Company drivers in New York and Jersey City, which commenced yesterday morning, was officially ended at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The drivers went out because two platform men had been put on wagons, a violation of the gareement between the company and the Union. The matter was argued by the committees from both sides and an agreement was quickly reached.

Record Flight by Garros.

Roland G. Garros, flying a monoplane, reached a height of 4,758 feet above the valley of Mexico Thursday. The altitude here is 7,294 feet, thus giving him an altitude from sea level of 12,052 feet. Garros carried a barograph authorized by the Aero Club of France. Garros' weight, 130 pounds, was a determining factor in the flight. He was in competition for altitude with Rene Barrier and Rene Simon for a cup offered by the Mexican Herald.

This is said to be the greatest altitude ever attained in an aeroplane above sea level. M. Deverbiac, who was instrumental in arranging the meet at Bordeaux, France, was present as the representative of the Aero Club of France.

Scene From the "Passion Play" at Plainfield Theatre Next Monday Night For Benefit of St. Mary's Convent.

JUDGE N.Y. DUNGAN TO CONTINUE COLONEL

Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan's friends are opposed to his resigning command of the Second infantry, and it is likely that he will remain in command, although he goes directly on the bench as a circuit court judge.

When the colonel was named by Governor Wilson to the circuit court bench it was taken for granted that he would resign his military commission, although it is known that military affairs are with him a pet hobby. But it was said that he would follow the example of Justice Charles Parker, who resigned his commission as assistant adjutant general of New Jersey when he became a supreme court justice. The difference between the Parker situation and the Dungan one was that Justice Parker resigned as he went on the supreme court bench, but did not resign his military commission when he was a circuit court judge.

Now Colonel Dungan's friends see that, in following in the footsteps of such a punctilious military man as Colonel Parker was, no criticism can come to Judge Dungan, for Justice Parker was assistant adjutant general of New Jersey for more than three years and did not resign. He even acted for ten days as adjutant general of New Jersey while he was on the circuit court bench, and only saw the ethics of the bench as he was promoted to the post of supreme court justice. The friends of Colonel Dungan say that the judicial wisdom of Justice Parker and his desire to be absolutely correct in all things justifies Colonel Dungan in remaining, although he is now a circuit court judge.

It is also pointed out that should Colonel Dungan leave his command, the State of New Jersey would lose one of its best officers. There are those who know who say that tucked away in the military archives of the State are some handsome compliments which the war department has said about Colonel Dungan. But these things do not see the light of day because of military exactness.

It is therefore, unlikely that Colonel Dungan will resign as commandant of the Second Regiment.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Miss Elsie Janis has scored the greatest hit in her remarkable career by her splendid and captivating performance of "The Slim Princess" in Charle Dillingham's new musical comedy production of that name, now playing to packed houses at the Globe Theatre, New York. Miss Janis is seen in a role in marked and wonderful contrast to the parts she has impersonated in past seasons. She appears as a Turkish princess who is too slim to find favor in her own country, where the ladies must be fat to be fashionable, so she comes to America, where she has heard that slim ladies are much admired. Miss Janis is a striking picture of youth and beauty when she makes her first appearance in the gorgeous robes of a Turkish princess, borne in by slaves and surrounded by a retinue of the prettiest girls ever assembled together on any stage in New York. This harem is a riot of color and magnificence.

Is Baseball An Art?

Pittsburg, March 4.—If President Barney Dreyfuss of the Pittsburg Baseball Club can demonstrate to the satisfaction of the Pittsburg Council that baseball is an institution for the promotion of the arts and sciences he will secure a big slice of valuable ground in Schenley Park to enlarge the Forbes Field stadium. There is now an ordinance in the Council providing for the deeding of the park land to the ball club, but a few sticklers for form have declared that the proviso in the deed conveying the land from the Mrs. Mary Schenley estate to the city specifies that the ground shall be used only for parks, public libraries, art buildings and institutions for scientific uplift. The councilmen are in favor of giving up the land, and already some of the more rabid of fans among them are preparing arguments for Dreyfuss that are calculated to officially convince the Council that baseball is an uplifting institution.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL.

Health is Worth Saving, and Some Plainfield People Know How to Save It.

Many Plainfield people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Sick kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health—the slightest delay is dangerous. Use Doan's Kidney Pills—a remedy that has cured thousands of kidney sufferers. Here is a Plainfield citizen's recommedation.

Mrs. Margaret Reville, 732 West Third street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "For a long time I was troubled by lame and weak back and I never found anything that would help me until I got Doan's Kidney Pills from Randolph's Drug Store. My back was so painful and sore that I dreaded to stoop and whenever I caught cold or exerted myself, I suffered more severely. I tried several kidney remedies but it was left for Doan's Kidney Pills, which I obtained from Randolph's Drug Store to cure me. They are certainly a most effective preparation for kidney trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

STATE NEWS BRIEFS

David B. Potter, U. S. N., of Salem, has been ordered to Manila as purchasing paymaster, and he and Mrs. Potter will go there in June.

Workmen dredging Salem river have been greatly handicapped by some one stealing the survey stakes and have offered a reward of $500 for the names of the culprits.

Edward Green, driver for Philip Reid, a Lumberton grocer, is in a precarious condition at the Burlington County Hospital as a result of having been run over by his wagon Thursday.

Bottle-blowing records were broken at the glass factories of T. C. Wheaton Company, Millville, Wednesday, when Philip Fisler, Chris. Peterson and Thomas Peterson packed 685 dozen one-ounce ovals.

A meeting of the managers of New Jersey newspapers has been called for next Saturday at Jersey City, to discuss the bills pending in the Legislature to further regulate rates of legal advertising.

Endeavoring to stop two runaway horses attached to a brewery wagon, William Sturm, of 404 Webster street, Camden, was thrown violently to the ground, sustaining contusions of the arms and legs Thursday.

Government engineers have indorsed the plans of spending $20,000 to deepen the water on the bar at the entrance to Atlantic City. The cost of keeping the channel open to the required depth will be $45,000 a year.

Having been located on the gunboat Franklin at the Portsmouth Navy Yard, where he enlisted four weeks ago after becoming a fugitive from justice, Richard Holloway, of Mt. Holly, was captured and brought from Richmond, Va., Wednesday night by Sheriff William W. Worrell. Witnesses are being held to testify that the defendant is the man who stabbed several persons during a recent fight at Mt. Laurel.

After having experimented for months at an expense of thousands of dollars with glass-blowing machines, the Whitall-Tatum Company, at Millville, is said to have succeeded in the manufacture of carboys by machinery, and yesterday machine operators were started making the ware. Even the strongest advocates of the machine have said that it would be many years before this kind of ware could be thus made, while many believed that it would never be accomplished.

Falling eight feet from a scaffold at Sixth street and Ferry avenue, Camden, and striking squarely on his head, Thursday afternoon, William Mullen, a painter, of Eighth street and Woodruff avenue, is in a critical condition at the Homeopathic Hospital. His skull is fractured at the base, and the doctors entertain scant hope for his recovery. Mullen, who is fifty-five years old, was reaching for his paint pot when he lost his balance.

That eight-year-old Mary Sparks, of Woodbury, is alive, is regarded as wonderful. To make a near-cut to her home Thursday she attempted to pass over the third rail of the West Jersey and Central Railroad at Carpenter street and Railroad avenue, came in contact with the rail and was thrown several feet. She made a few more steps and, bewildered, again touched the rail and was again thrown to the ground. When led to safety she remarked that she felt "funny."

Discovering a case of small-pox in a thickly populated section of the city the Camden health authorities Thursday rushed the sufferer to the Municipal Hospital and took other immediate steps to prevent a spread of the disease. The patient is Mrs. Mary Benson, colored, thirty-five years old, of 734 Chestnut street. From what the health officers learned the woman has been ailing for ten days, during which time she worked at Tenth and Spruce streets, Philadelphia.

At its meeting Thursday night, the Gloucester Council finally adopted the long pending resolution providing for the appointment of a board of three city assessors and a receiver of taxes. The assessors are to have salaries of $400 each, taking the place of the present assessors chosen at the polls. The tax receiver is to have $1,000 a year. The Mayor is to appoint the new officials, who will probably be all Republicans. An ordinance providing for an increase in the membership of the Board of Fire Commissioners from six to nine was placed on first reading. Its purpose is said to be to give the Republicans control of the body where Democrats now have a majority. The Committee on Waterworks reported that charges of dereliction of duty would be preferred against the engineer at the water plant. He is a Democrat, and several Republicans look longingly on the job.

Another Grass Fire.

A still alarm was received at fire headquarters at 12:40 yesterday for a grass fire in the rear of Senator James E. Martines residence. No. 2 hose wagon responded. There was no damage.

Mr. and Mrs. John Torney, of New York city, have returned after visiting relatives here.

Mrs. William Hanlon, of the borough, has returned from a visit with relatives in New York city.

A Desperate Game

By JOHN K. LEYS,

Author of "The Lindsays," "The Lawyer's Secret," "The Black Terror," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, by John K. Leys.

"They call it Ravenscrag."

"Ravenscrag? You were going there?"

"Yes, Mrs. Jorrocks—that's the 'ousekeeper—engaged me by letter from a registry in London. There was no money sent to pay my fare—it was to be repaid me when I got there. I left London last night, and I should ha' been there now, but as I was wytin' here for a trine I come across the young lydy as was leavin'. And such a character as she had to give of the place! Poor grub an' not too much even of what there is. And that's not the worst. The 'ousekeeper's temper, this young lydy said, is something beastly. You 'as to git up at harf past 5, and sh's down on you like a cart load of bricks for the least thing.

"And that's not the worst! The place is gloomy enough for a first class graveyard. Might be the lodge to a simitry. Not a soul to speak to. Not so much as a Sunday out, nor anywheres to go if you had a Sunday out, nor ever a young feller to walk out with you if there was anywheres you could go. Oh, it must be a lively place, I tell you! I ain't goin' there! Not much! If I was to live in such a place I'd go dotty in no time! It 'u'd be worser 'n livin' in a desert, like Sin John the Baptist, with a she bear for comp'ny. I wouldn't go not if I 'ave to walk from 'ere to London, which I bitterly repent I ever left it." And the girl fell to weeping again.

Eva turned away, but before she had taken a dozen steps a new idea flashed into her mind. Why should she not go to Ravenscrag in this girl's place and live there till she should either gain a knowledge of Sir Rufus' secret or till she had convinced herself that the secret was beyond her reach?

She walked back to the girl, who had now stopped crying and was gazing over the rain splashed fields with an expression of moody doggedness.

"What were you to have been at Ravenscrag—housemaid, or what?" asked Eva.

"House parlor maid."

"Do you know what I have been thinking—that if it could be managed I should like to go to Ravenscrag in your place."

The girl sat open mouthed for perhaps half a minute.

"My word!" she ejaculated at length. "What for?"

"I should like to see for myself what it is like to live there."

"But you are a lydy!"

"Yes; I am afraid that I might be recognized."

"Is it the master?" asked the girl, with all a Londoner's shrewdness.

"Yes," answered Eva, and she hated to know that she was blushing. But the little cockney took no notice.

"He won't never know you, not if you dyes your 'air and never look him straight in the face. I've got some in my box," said the girl eagerly. "See my 'air. A lovely brown, ain't it? That's dye. I'll do it for you and give you the bottle as well. I don't want the 'ousekeeper to be writing to the registry lydy and complain that I never turned up. That gives a girl a bad character, that does. Looks as if I had gone off the road somewhere—see?"

"I see. But it would be of no use to go in these clothes. What I thought of proposing was that you should give me not only your name— By the way, what is your name?"

"Evelyn Gladys Atkins."

"But give me your clothes as well. I suppose you have a complete outfit in that box?"

The girl nodded.

"Well, suppose you try to dye my hair so as to make it like your own? I see you have a pair of eyeglasses too. You might give me these. Then, when I am dressed in one of your dresses I ought to look pretty different from what I do now. If I think the disguise is good enough to serve my turn I will give you what clothes I have with me and £10 for your wardrobe. We are very nearly of the same size, so that there wouldn't be much difficulty about that."

"Done with you! We'll go over to that place they call a hotel, though it's the queerest hotel I ever see, and ask for a bedroom. In about half an hour I'll have you so that your own sister wouldn't know you! Come on!"

CHAPTER XXIV.

A TORN ENVELOPE.

It was nearly dark when the light cart that carried Eva and her box drew near to Ravenscrag, but she was able in spite of the waning light to make out something of the appearance of the house she was going to. It was a large and gloomy building, standing on a small, rocky promontory that jutted out into a dark mountain lake. Apparently it had been a strong place in the fatal days when the wild men of the borders used to bring fire and sword into the northern counties of England. Even now, partly ruined and standing solitary and sullen amid the green hills, it presented an imposing appearance. The rock on which it was founded ran down sheer to the water's edge, and, indeed, in places the walls overhung the surface of the lake. There was a wall, now broken and crumbling, that inclosed a piece of the little promontory, so much of it as was not covered with buildings, and in this wall was a gateway, which was the only means of access to the castle, unless it were by water.

The cart jolted and rumbled along the rough mountain road till it stopped at the large oaken door that filled the gateway in the wall. The driver got out, and, seizing a deer's foot attached to the end of a chain that hung by the side of the door, he gave it a hearty tug. Presently half the great oaken gate was opened by a tall, strapping country girl, who gave no greeting and asked no question, but proceeded to open the other half of the gate, so that the cart might drive through.

Eva and her box were deposited at a door opening into the courtyard, and she was taken first into a vast room or hall, with black oaken roof and an immense fireplace at one end. The apartment was quite unfurnished, and Eva guessed that it had been the kitchen in the days of the castle's prosperity. From it she passed to a smaller apartment, which now served as a place for cooking and servants' sitting room, for the housekeeper had a private room of her own, which, of course, her husband, Mr. Jorrocks, the butler, shared with her, and the other servants had to content themselves with the kitchen. There were but two of them, besides Eva, housemaid and scullery maid, for Mrs. Jorrocks herself did the cooking for her master.

"Are you Evelyn Atkins?" said a harsh voice behind Eva. She started and turned round.

"Yes, ma'am," she answered.

"You are very late. I understood you were to leave London last night," said the housekeeper. She was a large, bold looking woman, with an eye that would have suited a lion tamer. When she frowned her husband quailed, and the two big country girls shook in their shoes. She frowned now, but Eva had an answer ready for her.

"I didn't think it mattered what hour I arrived so long as I got here today."

"Well, now that you are here, see that you behave yourself. You will have the sitting rooms to keep in order and to serve up the meals."

She gave a few more instructions in her duties and then told one of the other servants to show her to her room.

The passages were all lofty and those on the lower floor were flagged with stone. They did not meet a soul or hear a sound as they traversed the corridors and ascended one staircase after another till they reached the topmost story.

"This is your room," said the girl, pushing open a door. It was of good size and fairly well furnished.

Eva turned to thank her guide, hoping that she might be able to exchange a few friendly words, but when she turned to speak to her she found that the girl had already gone.

Eva sat down on her box and burst into tears.

All was so strange, so grim and forbidding, that she felt nervous and wretched. As for her errand, she would not dare to avow the trick she had practiced, and she must at least stay out her month, like any other servant.

But in a minute or two Eva had plucked up her spirits and dried her tears.

"I am a big baby to cry for nothing," she said to herself. "At the worst a month or two months will soon pass. And if I don't succeed in learning what I want to know, at least I shan't be any worse off than I was before."

The only thing she really feared was that Sir Rufus might recognize her. But the ordeal had to be faced, and she told herself that the sooner it was faced the better. It would be safer to meet Sir Rufus that night, because then his first sight of her would be by candlelight, and next day he would be to some extent familiar with her appearance. The first time she entered his presence would probably be the critical moment, and she was nervously anxious to have it over with as soon as possible.

She went downstairs and the first person she met was the girl who had helped her to carry her box upstairs.

We WANT COMPETITION of the Right Sort, Not the Following Kind!

A Mrs. S— after selecting her outfit and learning the total cost from our plainly marked price tags, said she preferred to make comparisons elsewhere before ordering, to which we readily agreed, for it's a thing we always URGE!

On getting another store's prices (where they were marked in private signs) she found ours were far less, and SAID so. The salesman promptly dropped to our figures—AND GOT THE ORDER.

Here, where there's but ONE PLAINLY MARKED PRICE ON EVERY ITEM, such an "accommodating" and sudden price drop would be impossible—here, when you read the price tag, you KNOW it's already at lowest point, for ALL prices are made and REMAIN on the SAME UNIFORMLY SMALL PROFIT BASIS. We don't HAVE to run a "leader" here and there for an hour, or a day, to catch trade, as ALL lines are equally good values EVERY day in the year!

All we want is HONEST competition that meet OUR plainly marked prices WITH prices you can READ!

ISN'T THAT FAIR?

HERE AND THERE.

Such a small thing as a "stitch in time" would have saved Postmaster Biddulph, of Montclair, $500 in cash Thursday afternoon, that sum of money slipped through a hole in the postmaster's trousers pocket while he was running for a trolley car. It has not yet been recovered. Mr. Biddulph had just drawn the money in five $100 bills, from the Bloomfield Savings Institution and after he had placed the money in his pocket he ran for a trolley car to go back to Montclair. When he reached the postoffice in Montclair he missed the money. He telephoned to the bank news of his loss and a search in the business centre was made by the clerks in vain.

ones' as well as the women. In the abstract this is true, for every one who rents or boards pays indirectly a water tax just as much as the one who pays for their own home; yet weight must be given to large property owners and real estate companies who are doing so much to develop our city without any cost to the same.

"I am sure we owe a great debt to the labors of the Water Committee of the Common Council; it is a most exhaustive report, yet the very ability displayed there makes one wonder why their opinion should be so different from many of our other citizens.

"Why go to law to try and purchase what we can hire?

"A reported mortgage has or is about to be placed by the Water Company on their property to the amount of three millions of dollars; surely a pleasant basis to proceed against?

"Should we win, can we expect to sell our surplus (if there should be any) after using the argument that our city's under ground water must only be for ourselves?

"And again, should we win and then decide not to accept, the expenses of both sides to be paid by ourselves is certainly not cheerful to contemplate.

"If we should again have such a state of affairs as we had during last summer (and this because water was recklessly wasted in irrigating lawns) how much better that we should have someone else to carry the burden?

"We all like to control our own conveniences. We had a chance years ago to purchase this water plant and failed to take advantage of it. 'Why cry over spilled milk.' We none of us like to be in the hands of corporations, yet the laws of the State make them obey the same as individuals.

"The next twenty-five years will undoubtedly change all water conditions at and around congested centers of population. Mr. Bergen very frankly states that their company is stretching out in every direction for water, it is apparent sooner or later that to supply the greater metropolitan district of Northern New Jersey, the State will directly or through commissions, have to conserve, and even build a dam flooding the German valley to impound sufficient water to carry through dry seasons; why, therefore, have an expensive out-of-sight water plant on our hands when that time comes?

"We can now make a thirty year contract for practically our own city water, for no reasonable person believes but that will be the ultimate result and certainly as long as it flows.

"The looking ahead in born out by the experience of New York city, and our conditions last summer were nothing compared to the Lower Hudson, West Chester and Sound cities and towns, that for days were on the verge of water starvation; this acute stage was reached in North Eastern Massachusetts in 1895, when the Legislature was forced to create a Metropolitan Water Commission that now supplies twenty-two cities and towns including Boston.

"But there are, however, other pressing conditions that bear on the water questions. Our city has been most fortunate since its creation in being able to draw its best citizens to carry on its affairs, and I am optimistic enough to believe that she will do so in the future, but those who serve her faithfully realize the tedious work and the discouraging conditions that constantly arise from lack of money. Why, therefore, add the last straw to the camel's load;' —the worry of a Water Company?

"Each year it has seemed as if the increased valuation would leave a margin for needed expenditures, and each year finds abreast of the times; nine robberies in one night on a policeman's beat of nine miles reminds us on what 'thin ice we are skating.' We must properly police and protect the whole city.

"We have just added two school houses to our bonded school debt; and another is soon to be built in the East end; our streets have suffered more than usual during the past winter and extra money will be needed to get then back into their former condition; we are without a city collection of garbage and ashes, which during the summer months not only brings about a most deplorable state of affairs, but undoubtedly militates against attracting any citizens to our city. We are liable to have sewer troubles again and all these means increased taxes.

"Plainfield has attained its present size without a boom. During the past few years outside capital has taken up and developed large tracts of land, opening, macadamizing sewering and side-walking streets without expense to the city; real estate men have enjoyed an era of prosperity, but we are now 'at the parting of the ways.'

"Although fortunately situated on the line of the best railroad running out of New York, we are handicapped by the lack of tunnels, and the last census shows that we have not grown in the same ratio as those who are thus favored.

"To offset this we must present other advantages and we must have our hands of opportunity clear of the blighting influences of law litigation. Our Council is a representative one largely composed of veterans in the public service who realize our daily needs far more than the average citizen. Let them put the water question in the hands of a commission of representative citizens to make a contract with the Water Company and free themselves for the other pressing questions that are so pertinent at this time.

"We are of many minds and opinions. It is not human nature that we should all agree on any subject except our wish and hope for the prosperous future of our fair city. Let us all try and stand upon the platform of 'pro bono publico' and take no step on the water question that would not be ratified by practically the whole body of our intelligent community."

Mr. Calkins also stated that former Councilman George P. Mellick, being unable to attend the meeting, had requested him to say that he is opposed to municipal ownership of a water supply and wanted to go on record to that effect.

Permission was given Joseph C. Allen to read a recently published article written by A. L. Case, a local engineer, in which the water situation was covered pretty thoroughly from Mr. Case's point of view. It favored municipal ownership, claiming that there is an abundance of water in this city.

The discussion was continued by Amos Andrews, of this city, who gave some facts and figures disputing claims made by certain persons who favor municipal ownership.

"I am against municipal ownership of anything," declared Roger F. Murray. "A private concern or corporation can always conduct business, whether it be water works or anything else, at far less expense than a municipality. This has been proved time tnd again if anyone will take the trouble to inquire into the subject."

At this point the discussion was enlivened by A. E. Johnson, a former resident of Perth Amboy, who reviewed the history of that place in an attempt to show how it had grown since adopting the municipal ownership plan of water supply. He thought Plainfield would lose a great opportunity, possibly forever, if it failed to get control of its own water supply at this time.

Mr. Johnson's remarks provoked Charles H. Hand, who explained that the population of Perth Amboy was composed of three-quarters of foreigners and that they had driven the Americans out. Some personal remarks were passed between the two men, and the chairman was obliged to call a halt, requesting that the speakers confine themselves to the question.

Earnest support to the plan of continuing the present arrangement was given by S. D. Lounsbery. He said that he failed to see how municipal ownership would bring about any "Arabian Night" results. He believed that the water company was anxious to have the city grow for it would mean more business and more profits. He was also of the opinion that the water company could conduct the business for less money than the city and that private ownership is more efficient.

Although Charles H. Hand favored the plan of securing the best legal advice obtainable to determine the exact rights of the city and the water company, he thought that Mr. Angleman had cleared the question to a large extent by quoting the law.

It was the opinion of Mr. Murray that there is plenty of water here for all time,as was evident when contractors tried to get rid of some water on Randolph road where they were building sewers. He said that the only fear Plaindelders have had were that the supply might be exhausted. Eliminating that fear he did not think any one would favor a municipal plant.

Explaining that it was not his original intention to enter into a discussion, Mr. Case said that he felt constrained to say a few things. He said that the discussion to an extent had resulted in a question of engineers instead of the city's interest. While he conceded that perhaps the flow of water in the gravel beds under Plainfield was from north to south, he was sure that in the rock strata the flow was not from Fanwood. He believed that there is enough water here for all time and that wells could be driven all over Plainfield and a supply would be found.. There was no question but that the water company can furnish water cheaper than the city, but will they do it. Referring to the fact that at the Potter Press Works,where he is employed, there is city water connection, he stated that insurance regulations require this, but that experience had taught him that it cost more to buy water than pump it. He said that about 130,000 gallons of water is being pumped daily from a ninety foot well at the works.

Replying to a remark by G. M. Christian that the residents of Yonkers pay $9 for the same water service that cost $25 in Plainfield, Mr. Murray said that he was in Yonkers on Monday dining with Mr.Spreckles, the sugar manufacturer, and that during the day he wanted a drink of water. Mr. Speckles cautioned him not to drink the city water as a Hungarian had been found dead in the reservoir, a common occurance, he said, and his body had not been recovered. Mr. Murray said that the water in Yonkers is not of the high quality to be found in this city.

This about concluded the discussion, and a resolution offered by Daniel F. Dugan, to the effect that is was the sense of the meeting that the Common Council make the best possible contract with the water company, was adopted with only one dissenting vote. Joseph C. Allen voted in the negative. It was thought best not to make the resolution specific as to details, but let the Council attend to that part of the contract.

HEAR NEW PASTOR

Rev. Frederick L Greene Occupies Hope Chapel Pulpit for First Time.

ADDRESSED HIS CONGREGATION

He Prefaces His Sermon by a Talk On His Advent to the Local Religions Field.

Rev. Frederick L. Greene, the new pastor of Hope chapel, occupied the pulpit at the chapel, yesterday for the first time as pastor, and made a favorable impression. Large congregations attended both services, as well as at the Sunday school session in the afternoon, when the minister addressed the members.

The subject of Mr. Greene's morning sermon was "The Culture of Christian Love." The discourse was a helpful one and was listened to with much interest. The topic in the evening was "The Gospel of Recovery," the text being found in Luke 15:11. The sermon sounded the keynote of a new spiritual life at Hope chapel.

Prefacing his morning sermon, Mr. Greene spoke of his first impression on his recent visit to Plainfield. He said that it appealed to him as a field of Christian work and endeavor which he had always yearned for and he was exceedingly glad to be with the members of Hope chapel. He said that he was also pleased to note the religious enthusiasm and earnestness which would result in one thing, a higher and better Christian community.

Mr. Green stated that as soon as he was located in a home he wanted every member of the chapel to make himself known to his wife and himself. He said that he would at once begin the making of pastoral calls, especially looking up the absent members. At the close of both the morning and evening services, Mr. and Mrs. Greene were given an opportunity to meet all present. At the Sunday school session, Mr. Greene spoke along similar lines of his sermons for the day, after which he met the officers, teachers and children of the school. Beginning with tonight, Mr. Greene in company with the chapel superintendent, G. Herbert Condict, will visit the Boys' Club, tomorrow night the Young Men's Club, Wednesday afternoon the interdenominational missionary rally; Wednesday evening, the Junior Boys' Club; Thursday, the weekly prayer meeting, which will be the preparatory service before communion on Sunday and which meeting Mr. Greene will conduct, and Friday night the C. E. Society play, "The Two Idiots," and the Junior Boys' Club.

REAL ESTATE REPORT FROM LARUE'S AGENCY.

Among the recent sales and rentals effected through the agency of Ira L. LaRue, real estate dealer, are the following:

Recorder Charles M. Dolliver, of the borough, has purchased two two-family dwellings from B. C. Bodine, of Flemington. The houses are situated on South Second street near Clinton avenue. William Young has purchased from the Burr estate a lot on West Sixth street near Lee place, where he will build a house.

Rev. John W. Musson has rented his home on East Second street to S. Muscovitz, manager of the Weinberger store. Emil Bey's house on Woodbine avenue has been rented by George E. Volk, of Hunterdon county, and the dwelling belonging to Mrs. Mary Gillies on Duer street has been taken by Mrs. J. M. Noel. The demand for dwellings far exceeds the supply.

A Pair of Idiots.

Under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E. of Hope chapel, there will be given a play on Friday evening, March 10. "A Pair of Idiots" will be the medium of showing what the young people can do in the way of acting. The play is given to augment the treasury of the society. The cast includes: Frank Rimmer, C. H. Firstbrook, Harold A. Brownell, and the Misses Mary N. Mortimer, Edna Eckert and Elizabeth Slorah.

Hospital Supervisor.

Miss Ina Rudd, of East Front street, has been appointed supervisor at Muhlenberg Hospital to succeed Miss Florence L. Jadwin, who leaves the institution at an early date. Miss Rudd graduated from Muhlenberg training school in 1909 and has been very successful in private nursing. Her home is in London, Ontario.

The Rasores Meeting.

The Rasores will meet tomorrow morning with Mrs. Joseph W. Yates, of East Seventh street. The subject will be "Roger Williams."

THREE ATTRIBUTES

Theologian's Stirring Lenten Discourses at Grace Episcopal Church.

"SERVE THE LIVING GOD."

Two Powerful Sermons By Rev. Dr. Henry F. Nash, of Cambridge Seminary, Here Yesterday.

Large congregations gathered both morning and afternoon at Grace Episcopal church yesterday. Rev. Dr. Henry F. Nash, of Cambridge Theological Seminary, preached at both services, and both discourses were of a high order of interest and deep thought. The morning topic was on the three attributes of God to which mankind must look for success here and in the life to come, while the afternoon subject was "Repentance."

Dr. Nash preceded his morning sermon by telling of the peril of "going stale." "Men in training for any event," he said, "must guard themselves against overtraining. It is essential, too, to observe the niceties of obedience to the trainer. A college man who has been on the track team knows just what punishment is meted out to the man who wilfully neglects the training table and thus imperils his team's chances. There are words used to him which I will not repeat here, but they are sure to indicate to him that he has erred. A dereliction shows a want of loyalty, one of the most reprehensible of traits.

"There occurred in the United States navy not long ago a case similar in many respects to the college man's defection. An officer of high station was almost within sight of his honorable retirement when suddenly there appeared the charges which forever barred him from the respect and love of his fellow officers. He was dismissed from the service. He must have been disloyal. He was not called a sinner, but worse.

"The function of religion has always been the building up of great groups, the home, the school, the church and the greatest is the church of God. It is known that people must be got into groups before they can be reached with any effect. The wise teacher knows the wisdom of knowing when not to speak. Take the gang of boys. I have seen one of the worst gangs of boys converted into a good athletic team and from the team to good citizens and finally into good servants of the State, but this was not done by separate talking. They had to be brought into a group and handled together. It was the discovery of the living God which brought such grand results with this group.

"The three attributes of God," continued Dr. Nash, "are God of Patience, God of Consolation and God of Hope. I feel that of the first a different interpretation should be put on the Greek word meaning patience. I would substitute steadfastness. I never could believe as a boy that patience was one of the primary virtues, but I do believe steadfastness to be all that. Washington's steadfastness at Valley Forge was of the kind which makes the man fight the good fight and win. It comes from the living God.

"The God of consolation we need when we are strongest. We need Him because it will be His never failing support which will make our strength greatest and more enduring. With Him there is no such thing as going stale. Then the God of Hope. That man who, though hopelessly beaten still is full of hope and will not give in, is the one who will win ultimate victory. It is the living God from whom we draw these inspirations of eternal hope. Don't try to be one of those who just hopes to get in at the last minute. Try to be as the ancient Greeks, who in their race with the flaming torch held aloft ran the race and brought the torch, still flaming, to the winning post. Just to get in anyhow ahead is wrong. Let us come in with the torch ablaze thus showing that we are eager to serve the Living God."

Large Accession at Trinity.

Trinity Reformed church had a large accession at the communion service yesterday morning, twenty-two persons being received, sixteen on confession and six by letter. Of the former twelve were from the Sunday school. One family of eight persons, father, mother and six children were also among those received on confession.

To Rehearse Minstrels.

There will be a reeharsal of the minstrels to be given by the Elks shortly after Easter, in the club house on West Second street this evening at 8 o'clock. All those who are to take part are urgently requested to be present.

CONSOLI VIOLATED THE SABBATH LAW

John Consoli, who it is alleged violated the Sunday closing ordinance three weeks ago, and who pleaded not guilty last week, when arraigned this morning before Judge DeMeza changed his plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty to the charge. Sentence was deferred until two weeks from today.

The case against Julius Fragante, who is charged with the same offense, was postponed for one week.

It is said that Consoli has made desperate efforts to become a bona fide member of the Seventh-Day Baptist church in order that he might pursue his regular business on Sunday, the most lucrative day of the week for his business.

Rev. Edwin Shaw, when asked this morning, said that Consoli had approached him looking toward becoming affiliated with the Seventh-Day church, but after some conversation on the matter Mr. Shaw handed the applicant some literature connected with the faith and since that day has not seen Consoli.

The matter ended with Consoli's plea of guilty this morning.

MRS. SYKES BURNED BADLY BY EXPLOSION

Mrs. Frank Sykes, of Front street, Scotch Plains, was badly burned about the head, face and arms yesterday through an explosion of alcohol in a coffee percolator. The blazing fluid was thrown about her, setting fire to her clothing. She would undoubtedly have been fatally burned but for the timely intervention of her husband, who stood nearby. The latter pulled a heavy portiere from its fastenings and wrapped it about her. The flames were quickly extinguished in this way.

Dr. Ellis W. Hedges was called and found the burns severe, but not serious. The patient was made as comfortable as possible, but will be detained at home for a long time. It is not known what caused the lamp to expolde.

Trespassers Discharged.

Seven boys ranging in ages from fourteen to eighteen years, were before Judge DeMeza on complaint of Detective John Leavitt of the Central Railroad force this morning charged with trespassing on the railroad property and incidentally playing craps. All were discharged with a warning. The game consisted of throwing dice for pictures, not money. The boys were ordered to keep off the railroad property on pain of again being arrested.

Dinner to Publishers.

The New Jersey Telephone Herald Company has issued invitations to an informal dinner to "The Press" of Northern New Jersey, on Saturday evening, March 11, at 7 o'clock at the Washington Restaurant, Newark, to commemorate the company's advent in the news and amusement field in that section.

Dedication Service at Trinity.

The dedication service of the new memorial organ at Trinity Reformed church will take place Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock. Rev. Dr. Edward Payson Johnson, professor of church history in the New Brunswick Theological Seminary, will assist in the service and make the presentation speech.

Golf Trustees to Meet.

The trustees of the Plainfield Country Club will meet tomorrow night to discuss plans for the coming season and possibly to make arrangements for holding a meeting of the club soon to vote on the question of issuing bonds for lengthening the course the regulation distance.

Soccer Game Postponed.

On account of the snow storm on Saturday, which rendered the field unfit for the purpose, the soccer football game scheduled between the Plainfield Association Football Club and the Eurekas, of Kearney, was postponed. Another date will be announced within a short time.

Free Shower Bath.

Anyone wanting a shower bath this noon need only to have stood on North avenue on the dividing line between the Taylor building and the Sattle piano warerooms to have his wish gratified. Pedestrians were compelled to cross the street or get wet.

Pastor in New Gown.

Rev. J. Y. Broek, pastor of Trinty Reformed church, was attired in a new silk pulpit gown yesterday, the gift of one of his congregation. It was very becoming to the young pastor and in keeping with the new pulpit furnishings.

ANOTHER RECRUIT

One More General for the Campaign Against White Plague.

ENLISTMENT OFFICE NOW OPEN.

Those Who Would Help Stamp Out Terrible Disease in Plainfield Will Find Opportunity Here.

Another well disposed citizen has signified her willingness to join in the war against the great white plague and has recruited in the army which will forage for dollars for the Plainfield Anti-Tuberculosis Society. She has been brevetted a general because she already had her work well in hand when she entered the recruiting office. That makes three generals—eight more are needed for the grand charge against the enemy.

Remember there are twelve generals, whose work is directed by the secretary of war, who represents the year "1911." The twelve generals represent twelve months. There commanding officers each appoint four colonels, representing that many weeks in a month. The colonels in turn a sign to duty seven captains, representing the seven days in the week. Now, in the first place, the secreary of war "gives up" One Dollar to the cause. After the generals have each "produced" a like amount they see that their colonels follow their example and that the latter's captains "follow suit." Of course the colonels can play a trump card by giving up seven dollars without appointing captains for that purpose, but the secretary of war doesn't want that done for this is to be a popular cause and the more enlisted the merrier the war will be. Will you join the army? If so, report for duty by notifying The Daily Press.

Dr. William O ler says: "This is not a battle of a year or a generation. The probabilities are that it will take two or three generations at least before we have the mortality from tuberculosis reduced to the rate, say, of that of typhoid fever in well regulated countries. This will probably be a matter of two or three generations. Whether tuberculosis will be finally eradicated is an open question. It is a foe that is very deeply intrenched in the human race, but when we think of what has been done in one generation, how the mortality has been reduced in some localities 50 and even 100 per cent., we at least feel that we can continue the battle with hope, and so long as we are fighting with hope the victory is in sight."

MAY SPEND $1500 FOR CROSSWALKS

It is reliably reported that Mayor Moy will recommend to the Councilmanic street committee that an appropriation of $1,500 be made for crosswalks to be placed in various parts of the city where they are sorely needed. The matter will be discussed in all probability at the Common Council's regular March meeting tonight and it is more than likely that the amount stated will be included as a part of the budget. During the last few days the Mayor and Street Commissioner Gavett have been waited upon by various citizens who impressed upon these officials the dire need for such crosswalks.

As these crosswalks cost $30 each, the appropriation would permit the committee to have 500 of them laid this year.

Whether Mayor Moy will send to the Common Council tonight any appointments for confirmation is doubtful. It is known that he is considering filling the places of corporation counsel, overseer-of-the-poor, one member for the Board of Health and one for the shade tree commission.

BOY RANG DOOR BELLS AND IS FINED IN COURT.

Frank Maury, aged sixteen years, of West Front street, pleaded not guilty to a charge of ringing doorbells when arraigned this morning before Judge DeMeza in the city court, but the court did not believe him and imposed a fine of $1 or five days in the county jail. This is the first one of the West Front street gang to be fined. Others will be given the same or harsher treatment upon conviction of the offense.

The arrest was made by Patrolman Charles Flynn who said he watched the boy ring the bell and run away. He arrested Maury on Park avenue a few minutes later.

Among the guests registered last week at the Ponce de Leon, St. Augustine, Fla., were Mr. and Mrs. W. 9. McCloud and the Misses Helen and Evelyn McCloud, of this city.

MINOR OPERATION IN SENATOR'S EAR

United States Senator James E. Martine has suffered another attack of his former trouble which affected his hearing and is again confined to his bed under the care of Dr. H. V. Hubbard, a local specialist. Shortly following his recovery from the grip, Senator Martine suffered great inconvenience with his hearing but his physician believed that it would eventually return and that he would completely recover from the illness.

It is now believed that Senator Martine must have caught a little more cold, causing further trouble to his hearing. Yesterday Dr. Hubbard was obliged to perform a minor operation on the ear which he thinks will eventually remove the trouble. Mr. Martine returned from Washington, D. C., on Saturday suffering much pain in his affected ear.

The Senator will be obliged to remain indoors for some days and his physician has cautioned him that he must take the best of care of himself to conserve his strength, which was considerably weakened by his long illness with the grip.

TO SHOW PICTURES OF OBERMMERGAU

Henry Ellsworth, the noted traveler and lecturer, will present his pictorial reproduction of "Oberammergau, Its People and Their Passion Play of 1910," at the Plainfield theatre tonight, coming direct from a brilliant series of entertainments at the New York Hippodrome. He has been a resident of Oberammergau for the past eleven summers and spent five months there during the sacred drama of 1910, witnessing twenty-four of the fifty-nine performances. During these visits, he was given special privileges for making the most complete collection of colored steropticon views of Oberammergau and the Passion Play in existence.

In adition to the pictures, which are exclusive and number no less than 300, Mr. Ellsworth employs musical effects rendered by competent singers, organ and cathedral chimes. His lecture covers all details of the wonderful Passion Play and tells all about the players and the town of Oberammergau. Mr. Ellsworth also wishes particularly to refute the idea that any one has ever been permitted to take moving pictures of the Passion Play, and has signed a statement from the players themselves emphasizing this point, and also contradicting the statement of a theatrical manager that the Passion Play would be offered in this country or anywhere except in Oberammergau, where it will be given again in 1920. Mr. Ellsworth exhibited his colored views of the Passion Play in Oberammergau on July 5, 1910, in the presence of the players themselves from whom he has written endorsements.

The entertainment will be given for the benefit of St. Mary's new convent. Mr. Ellsworth will be assisted by the choir of St. Mary's church.

Two Take the Pledge.

It took the combined efforts of Patrolman McCarthy and Detective Sergeant John Flynn and the nippers to land Michael Gleason and James Shields in a cell on Saturday afternoon. Both men were fighting drunk and causing distrubances on West Front street. As the records of neither man was bad, Judge DeMeza exacted the promise of a pledge for a year from each and discharged them.

In Honor of Bride-to-Be.

Miss Nellie Williams, whose marriage to Winfred R. Harris, of Bridgeton, will take place in the near future, was given a reception and tea, Friday afternoon from 2:30 to 5 o'clock by Miss Mary Leveridge, of Sherman avenue. There were about thirty guests from New York, Perth Amboy, Elizabeth and Fords. The decorations were attractive and the guests had a delightful time.

Famous Women Hymn Writers.

The service at the First Baptist church a week ago in which the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, spoke concerning famous women hymn writers, and the congregation singing the hymns, was of such interest that it was continued last night when a service of a similar character was held.

Forty Hours Devotion.

Forty hours devotion were commenced at St. Mary's church yesterday morning, when a solemn high mass was said at 10:30. The devotions will continue until 8 o'clock tomorrow morning. At the first mass yesterday the members of the Knights of Columbus attended in a body.

COLLEGE TO USE INSURANCE MONEY TO LIQUIDATE HEAVY INDEBTEDNESS

Sisters of Mercy's Loss by Fire More Appalling Since Institution is Not Endowed—Benefit Performance on St. Patrick's Day—Getting Ready to Rebuild.

Accurate details of the conditions resulting from the destruction by fire of the Mt. St. Mary College show that the total loss while it may be expressed in figures representing the intrinsic value of building and contents, can never show the actual loss sustained by the Sisters of Mercy. Individual losses of priceless treasures are coming to the front which show that thousands of dollars worth of books in the splendid library can never be replaced.

The idea has gone abroad that the college is endowed. This is not so. As a matter of fact when the total insurance upon building and contents is realized it is believed that a deficit of over $60,000 will be shown.

In the face of all these facts the sisters have not lost their faith in human kindness any more than they have lost their faith in God. They are looking forward to the rehabilitation of the college and its prestige as a foregone conclusion. The many evidences of sympathy which they have received since the catastrophe of Thursday morning encourage in no small degree the work of those who have the college in charge.

The mere fact that the Prudential Insurance Company holds a mortgage on the building does not seem to cause Mother Gabriel the worry that it would cause another individual. Her faith, like that of the other sisters, is sublime, and the support she receives from all her co-workers seems to be a support which knows no measure.

In an interview this morning it was revealed that the loss by the fire will perhaps never be recovered. The insurance, of which there appears to be $119,000, will leave a deficit of at least $60,000 which the sisters will have to face. Among the things which will be missed most when St. Gabriel's home is opened on March 15 will be the pianos, of which fifteen were burned up. Three cottages have been rented for the occupancy of the pupils of the college, St. Gabriel's, the Smith cottage on Watchung avenue and another for which negotiations are about to be concluded. It is hoped to have all these open and ready for the students on March 15.

The sisters this morning desired The Daily Press to thank St. Mary's Sewing Circle for the box of clothing sent by them and all those others who had contributed money and other things voluntarily. Sums of money have been sent in, some anonymously and other with the donors' names and the sisters want it known that they appreciate the gifts.

It is proposed to use the cottages which are being fitted up, for dormitories, and if the space will permit one will be used as an art school while the other will be devoted to music study. For the study of music there has been one piano offered by a family whose name was not disclosed, but one will hardly suffice. Any piano offered by persons intending to go away for the summer will be accepted and assurance given that their instruments will have the best of care during the time they may be in possession of the sisters.

A meeting will be held in Trenton tomorrow at which Bishop James McFaul will preside. After this conference it will be possible to state the exact conditions which will confront the sisters. In the meantime it is assured that any contributions of beds and bedding as well as furniture will be especially appreciated even though loaned. The best of care is sure to be given to anything loaned.

Father Baldwin, the chaplain of the college, is perhaps one of the greatest losers by the fire. He saved nothing but the scant clothing in which he escaped from the building after making one of the most stubborn fights of his life for its salvation. The library belonging to the sisters of the college can never be replaced. The book-shelves contained volumes bought abroad on special subjects and other volumes were gifts from friends and their duplicates do not exist on this side of the ocean and it will be with difficulty that any of them are replaced.

In order to help along the work of rebuilding a concert will be given in the Plainfield theatre on Friday evening, March 17, St. Patrick's Day, for the benefit of the college. This was the announcement made today by David T. Kenney, who, with the community at his back will stage the performances. It is expected that artists of premiere quality will be engaged for this event and that the results will amply repay the committee.

While Mr. Kenney stated that he would prefer to tell the full program tomorrow he said enough to assure the public that a first class entertainment would be provided for the people and he hoped that it would receive the support the cause warranted. Among the first to volunteer for the musical end of the entertainment was Mlle. Mathilde Bruguiere, who is proficient in Wagnerian and other roles. It is hoped to secure the services of Dr. W. J. Callan, professor of elocution and oratory of the college whose Shakespearean lectures were so much appreciated last fall.

An independent entertainment has been promised by McMahon & Chapelle, a pair of vaudevillians of the Keith & Proctor circuit. They will bring with them a number of artists who will volunteer their services and thus contribute a goodly sum to the total which it is hoped to secure within the next month. The date and place of this latter entertainment have not yet been determined.

The details of the entertainment at the theatre will probably be available tomorrow.

The wide pread interest attracted by the burning of Mount St. Mary's College, coupled with the spring-like weather, resulted in an enormous crowd visiting the scene of the great conflagration yesterday. From early in the morning until nightfall made it impossible to see clearly the people toiled up the steep roadway from Mountain avenue to get a near look at the grim and blackened walls of what was once the beautiful and imposing educational institution. No one except former pupils who came from distant points with their parents, were allowed on the upper terrace, a guard line being maintained by police and volunteers from St. Joseph's Holy Name Society, of the borough. They were in charge of Robert McCormack, who extended every courtesy to the visitors so far as was permissible.

The largest crowd was present during the afternoon. The people came in automobiles, carraiges, farm wagons, horseback, bicycle and afoot. At one time the number was easily 15,000 and by many is declared to have reached 20,000. Between 2 and 3 o'clock one solid line of pedestrians extended along Terrill road from the trolley tracks on East Second street to the college grounds. Vehicles could move only at a walk through the ranks of the walkers. To those who viewed it from the slope of the mountain, the sight was a memorable one.

The visitors were not confined to this immediate vicinity as there were delegations from points as far as Philadelphia, New York and clear to the coast. Large contingents come from South Amboy, former home of Father Miller; New Brunswick, Trenton, Elizabeth, Newark, Jersey City, Raritan and places over the mountain. Men of prominence in State and church affairs were noted in the gathering.

The statue of the Virgin Mary which passed through the blaze unscathed was the cynosure of all eyes. It was the first thing looked for and old and young gazed in an awesome way. If the crowd had been given permission to clamber about the ruins it is probable that a great part of the debris would have been carried away in souvenir forms.

The students who were in the building when the fire broke out and who live in other cities were allowed to take their parents inside the limit line. This was done to permit the young women to properly explain how they had escaped and give their relatives the proper insight of the ordeal they had passed through. The girls faces glowed with excitement as they clambered about, talking and gestulating, yet omitting none of the details of the experience they will remember as long as they live.

The offerings received at the services in St. Joseph's church yesterday are to be donated the convent re-building fund. The response to Father Miller's appeal was very liberal but the amount was not yet known this morning. A similar offering will be gathered at St. Mary's church next Sunday at all the masses.

Gun Club to Meet.

The Watchung Gun Club wil hold a regular meeting this evening to plan for the coming year. Arrangements will also be made for a shoot to be held in the spring.

AMONG OUR NEIGHBORS

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

About half of the town's residents walked over to see the ruins of Mt. St. Mary's College yesterday. Miss Sadie Lee was the only local pupil attending the college and she happened fortunately to be spending Wednesday night at her home.

An interesting meeting of the B. Y. P. U. was held last night in the church parlors. The B. Y. P. U. meetings are the only evening service being held at present and the young people turn out fairly well.

Mr. and Mrs. William Guest, who were married last week, have returned from their wedding trip and have begun housekeeping on Stout avenue.

Supervising Principal S. Dana Townsend, of the public schools, spent the week-end at his home at Orange.

The weekly meeting of the Epworth League was held last night in the class room of the Methodist church.

Lynus Walpole, Jr., of Metuchen, was the guest over Sunday of relatives and friends in town.

The monthly communion was held at the morning service yesterday at the Baptist church.

The Misses Southard, of Cook avenue, have been entertaining friends from out of town.

Extravagance.

Two oysters were in a big pot full of milk, getting ready for stew. Said on oyster to the other:

"Where are we?"

"At a church supper," was the reply.

Whereupon the little oyster said: "What on earth do they want of both of us?" — Milwaukee Free Press.

We WANT COMPETITION of the Right Sort, Not the Following Kind!

A Mrs. S—— after selecting her outfit and learning the total cost from our plainly marked price tags, said she preferred to make comparisons elsewhere before ordering, to which we readily agreed, for it's a thing we always URGE!

On getting another store's prices (where they were marked in private signs) she found ours were far less, and SAID so. The salesman promptly dropped to our figures—AND GOT THE ORDER.

Here, where there's but ONE PLAINLY MARKED PRICE ON EVERY ITEM, such an "accommodating" and sudden price drop would be impossible—here, when you read the price tag, you KNOW it's already at lowest point, for ALL prices are made and REMAIN on the SAME UNIFORMLY SMALL PROFIT BASIS. We don't HAVE to run a "leader" here and there for an hour, or a day, to catch trade, as ALL lines are equally good values EVERY day in the year!

All we want is HONEST competition that meet OUR plainly marked prices WITH prices you can READ!

FIRE ENGINES ARE BLOCKED BY TRAIN

Elizabeth, March 6.—Responding to a blaze which started in a closet in a frame building owned by Herman Newman at 450 Port avenue at 7 o'clock Saturday night No. 2 truck and No. 5 engine were delayed for eight minutes by a freight train which was drilling slowly over the Long Branch tracks at Marshall street. The fire was not too serious and was reached promptly by No. 5 engine, which came from Wall street and was not delayed. Assistant Chief Mahoney stated yesterday that the delay might have meant a big loss. As it was the damage amounted to about $400. The closet and adjoining rooms were badly damaged. The family occupying the place was absent at the time.

The numerous blockades on the Long Branch tracks have been frequent sources of complaint by pedestrians as well as the drivers of vehicles. A police court suit brought by a citizen a year ago resulted in a judgment of $50 against the railroad. An appeal was taken on this case and it is still pending. The contention was that a city ordinance which forbids a blockade for longer than five minutes was violated.

About a year ago Bernard Travers, a driver for No. 1 engine, was seriously hurt when the vehicle collided with a train at this crossing. The fire apparatus was badly damaged and the horse killed. The collision was the result of an understanding on the part of drivers that fire engines had the right of way in corresponding to a siren and his contention was proved correct.

CORNER'S HISTORY

O. B. Leonard Tells Interesting Story of Gloekler Saloon Site.

BUILDING OVER 111 YRS. OLD.

First Occupied as a Postoffice and Later the Home of Freemasonry, Says the Local Historian.

The westerly corner of West Front street and Somerset street had a beginning during the latter half of the eighteenth century. Front street then was known by a different name; but most frequently as the road from Scotch Plains to Piscataway. It was opened about 1750, a few years before the "Swift-Sure Line of Coaches" was started. At first this highway skirted Green brook as far as present Plainfield avenue, whence it turned southerly toward Samptown and Piscataway. Subsequently within ten years, the main street was extended westerly along Green brook "as near as will allow for a good road." Somerset street at first had a very different course from now and was opened later as a road to the mountains. The brook was crossed several hundred feet northerly from present street by fording the stream a short distance below the dam (Horse) where the Wooster grist mill was then located, but removed in 1782 to the modern site of "French's Mill."

The frame building on the westerly corner of Front and Somerset streets as it stands now (1911) was built there about 1800 or a few years before. It is generally believed by those well qualified to say, that the United States Postoffice first occupied the house in 1806-07.

John Fitz Randolph, a Quaker, was the first postmaster. He was succeeded by Samuel Manning in 1806, who occupied an adjoining property as a hotel and for ten years following distributed the mail therefrom.

In 1822 this corner building was being used by the Free Masons and continued to provide accommodations for the Masonic Lodge fully twenty years longer. The ground floor was occupied by Oliver Dunn for a cabinet maker shop for several years.

A change of ownership occurred in 1834 as the following "Indemnification Bond of the Grand Master and others of the lodge clearly shows. How much longer this corner was used for other purposes, there is no one now living able to tell from observation and none by tradition that the writer knows of.

Whereas, John Allen, of Plainfield, in the County of Essex, has sold to James Leonard, of the same place, all that certain house and lot of land and premises in said village where William B. Fisher now keeps a public house or tavern, for the sum of two thousand dollars, and is willing to secure the said Leonard from losing money by the said purchase; Now therefore we the Undersigned Subscribers do hereby agree and bind ourselves, our heirs, executors and administrators, that if the said Leonard, his heirs, executors or administrators, shall make sale of the said property either at a public vendue or by private contract at any time within five years from this date, and shall not be able to sell it for as much as two thousands dollars (the premises being in the meantime by him kept in reasonable good repair) that then and in that case we will make good to said Leonard his heirs executors and administrators whatever it may fall short of the said sum of two thousand dollars except in so far as such falling short may be occasioned by fire or tempest.

In Witness Whereof we have hereunto set our hands and seals this twenty-first day of January, Anno Domini, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four (January 21, 1834).

Sealed and delivered in presence of John Wilson to the executor by John Allen.

EZEKIEL SUTTON.

The following year, 1835, Vincent Barkalew bought the premises for $2,000 and continued its use for two years as an "Inn and Tavern." In connection with his business as innkeeper he operated a stage line from Plainfield to Elizabethtown Port to connect with steamboat for New York. His son, Lewis, who is still living hale and hearty at 82 years, was one of the few village boys at that early day and remembers distinctly the old stage coach before the steam cars were in operation.

In 1837 the corner was redeemed from drink habits, by clean journalism when Milton F. Cushing became owner of the place. Here "The Plainfield Union" continued to be published until 1865 at which time the property was sold for $6,000. Ever since then, for nearly fifty years, the corner has been dedicated to Gambrinus and King Alcohol.

HERE AND THERE.

The next craft to be perfected and brought into use is the hydroplane, the strange mechanical water bird on which Enrico Forlanni, the Italian engineer, has been working since 1905. An imperfect motor caused much difficulty in the early experiments, but in the newest model the boat is equipped with a 100-horsepower gasoline engine, with which forty-five miles an hour has been easily made, while greater speed is promised as improvements are worked out.

The present vessel weighs a little less than two tons, the carrying capacity being six persons. Under each end of the hull—which is 32.8 feet long—a twelve foot steel tube is placed crosswise; and the four ends of these tubes support a framework carrying a series of steel planes.

The propellor, supported on a hollow fin amidships, is revolved by bevel gears on a vertical intermediate shaft driven by the motor. At rest, the hydroplane appears like an ordinary boat, but as it is driven forward it gradually rises until, at maximum speed, only the bottom plane slide along on the water, the bottom of the hull being two feet above the surface.

Future development, it is anticipated, will yield a vessel on the flying-fish plan. This will glide along the water's surface in ordinary use, but at highest speeds—sixty to 100 miles an hour—will rise into the air freeing itself entirely from the water resistance. Such expectations open up a new vista of sport and useful navigation.

BASEBALL.

Connie Mack, who has moulded the Athletics into a world's championship ball team, was induced to talk about the coming American League race the other day. Mack, usually reticent and modest, showed that he didn't believe in boasting when he replied in this strain:

"If the Athletics are to repeat last year's triumph they must be in first class condition when the race begins and never let up for a moment. We were very lucky in 1910 in not having our best players crippled and the same good fortune must be with us this year if we are going to land the pennant. We are pretty well supplied with substitute material, yet accidents may upset my calculations. Nothing is sure in baseball.

"So many factors must be combined to produce a pennant winner that it is foolish to single out a team as a sure winner. There are seven other teams in the American League and I figure that all of them have been strengthened. Two of them I have in mind are Cleveland and Chicago. Both McGuire and Duffy have added undoubted strength to these teams and it isn't wise to declare them out of contending positions. Detroit is always dangerous. The Tigers can hit the ball and know how to fight for every inch of ground. They should improve this year, which means that the Athletics will have to play harder to beat them.

"The Boston Red Sox are very strong. They have a great pitching staff, good catchers and fielders and they can hit. They seemed to go to pieces last fall at the critical moment, but I believe that weakness will not occur again. Our most dangerous rivals though, are the New York Highlanders. They have a fast team in the field and they know how to play inside ball. The pitching staff is wonderfully good and I think Hartzell will prove a valuable man in the infield or outfield. The Highlanders showed more real baseball science last year than any of our American League rivals and yet the team was almost wholly new.

"Hal Chase is one of the greatest ball players in the profession. I believe it won't be long before he is rated just as highly as a manager. The team that beats out Chase's men this year will capture the pennant, at least that's how it appears to me."

SALE OF SORG HORSES.

That the horse show string of Paul A. Sorg, said to have cost him over $200,000, is to be sold at auction at Durland's on Tuesday evening, March 21, has been announced before, and it is the talk of the professional and amateur whips throughout the country. There have been guesses that the champion road four, Fatty Bates, Jim Silby, Grey Eagle and Red Eagle, the latter the wheelers, and the cock horse Black Eagle will bring a record sum as an appointment team, while as much as $40,000 has been named as the price the racing team of trotters will realize.

Twenty-five lots, including pairs, are carded besides the carriages and sets of harness. A most artistic catalogue has been prepared. The cover of leatherette is edged in gold and embossed with the effigy of Vanity Fair. In addition to the details regarding the items of the sale the catalogue contains beautiful photogravures on tinted paper of the two teams mentioned, the park team, the hackney mares, Vanity Fair and Royal Victoria, the latter to a gig, the pair Tease and Torment to a ladies' phaeton, and the Olympic winners as a big pair last year, the sixteen hand Loudwater Rob Roy and Loudwater Flourish.

There is a photograph of William G. Grant, professional whip and manager for Mr. Sorg, in the same artistic style. The catalogue as a work of art is worthy of the fine horses it records.

STATEHOOD VOTED DOWN.

New Mexico, However, May Be Admitted By President.

Washington, March 6.—Consideration of immediate Statehood for New Mexico and Arizona held up the business of the Senate for two hours Saturday and threatened to defeat several appropriation bills.

The Senate had under consideration the resolution formally approving the New Mexico constitution. Senator Owen, insisting that the Arizona constitution should be approved at the same time, held the floor against all efforts to displace him until the Senate leaders finally agreed to couple Arizona with New Mexico.

After the two propositions had been couple, however, the Senate voted down the resolution. It was said afterward that this does not mean that New Mexico cannot be admitted by action of the President.

COMMUNICATIONS.

It seems necessary for us to repeat at stated intervals that anonymous communications are not published in The Daily Press. By "anonymous" we mean those sent to us with the request that the name of the writer be withheld. We attach no value to such communications, neither do we believe that the general public does. The true value of a public letter depends in a very large degree upon the source from which it emanates. Furthermore, there is no less reason why a correspondent should not reveal his identity and stand responsible in the eyes of the public for any given opinion than the editor himself whose name is at the top of the editorial page. The man who has the courage to express his views should have the courage to stand sponsor for them. In this connection it might be mentioned that it is an old trick of some newspapers, not in Plainfield, to write letters to themselves when copy is short or when it is desired to stir up a discussion on some subject.

THE FORUM.

Kensington Avenue.

976 Kensington Ave.
Plainfield, March 2, 1911.

Editor The Daily Press:

In its efforts to facilitate city traffic, Council recently passed a resolution providing for the opening of Kensington avenue—this spontaneous legislation—spontaneous because not in response to a demand in the way of a petition or other public request—will apparently cost the city a large sum of money, which could be very profitably used in other channels. While benefitted property will, of course, be assessed in proportion to such benefit, there is some of the "benefit" which is a charge item rather than one which belongs on the credit side. The doubtful benefit is in the neighborhood of $15,000, which represents the difference in cost between one good way of making the improvement and that favored by Council. As a taxpayer I must say that I cannot see how Council is warranted in authorizing a street opening, the cost of which is out of all proportion to the value of the improvement.

Yours truly,
H. G. PHILIPS.

Kensington Avenue Extension.

Editor, The Daily Press:

The home folks in the First, Third and Fourth wards appear to have been overlooked lately by their councilmen when plans for public improvements were made.

By a recent resolution of Council, those of the city fathers living outside of the Second ward have unanimously declared that Kensington avenue is to be opened. No ordinary street opening this, but something on a more lavish scale, suitable for Paris or Washington. "Spare no expense—the city is rich and will gladly pay all that the nearby property owners refuse to stand for," was apparently the word passed along, when framing the resolution.

Strange to say, the councilmen of the Second ward, as a body, did not participate. Perhaps it is not so strange either, because living in the Second ward they are more familiar with the local needs.

In street openings, as in other matters, there is usually a way, and then sometimes there is still another way. As a rule second thoughts are better. Thanks to Mayor Moy, the gentlemen of the First, Third and Fourth wards have been afforded an opportunity to think again.

Instead of coming forth with a plan to butcher building lots wholesale, involving large public expenditure, let us hope that next time they look over the ground and seek out the rational plan of opening wherein the minimum of property need be taken.

Fix it so that all of the cost may be rightfully assessed on benefitted property.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

The second act of "The Travelling Salesman," the James Forbes' comedy drama, which Henry B. Harris will present at the Plainfield theatre Thursday night, March 9, shows a sample room in a hotel displayed. Here are shown a full line of samples of the latest styles in coats and suits which were purchased by Mr. Harris to add interest for the feminine contingent of playgoers. Inasmuch as these gowns and suits represent the advance fashions for the coming season, they will no doubt attract many ladies to the theatre. The role of Bob Blake, the traveling salesman, is interpreted by Frank J. McIntyre, who appears for the first time in Plainfield, and the heroine, with whom he fall in love at first sight, is in the hands of Gertrude Coghlan, an exceedingly pretty and talented actress. Others in the cast are Sarah McVicker, Wm Beach, James O'Neill, Jr., Percival T. Moore, H. D. Blakemore, Nickolas Burnham and others.

A. L. Andrews, who has occupied the house at 142 Grove street for several years, has removed to Grandview avenue. The house vacated by him has been leased to A. B. Davis, of Duer street.

Mr. Tingley, who recently purchased the property corner of Grove street and Lincoln place, formerly the home of Miss Holton, is improving it with an enlarged and extended piazza.

JOHN M'CROGAN DIED SUDDENLY TODAY

John McCrogan, aged 58 years, of 17 Manning avenue, died suddenly at an early hour this morning from heart trouble. Mr McCrogan, who had been employed by L. G. Henry, the Liberty street grocer, for the past five years, was leaving the house about 6:15 on his way to work, when he was taken suddenly ill with heart trouble. The attack was so severe that Mr. McCrogan immediately returned to the house, summoned his wife, who immediately sent for the family physician.

In the meantime, Mrs. McCrogan applied such remedies as she had at hand, but these failed to give any relief and Mr. McCrogan died about a half hour after the attack. Dr. T. H. Tomlinson arrived before Mr. McCrogan died, but the latter's condition was such that he was beyond help.

Mr. McCrogan removed from Dover to this city about ten years ago and half of that time was employed by Mr. Henry. He is survived by a wife. $20,000,000 LESSON IN NEGLECT.

Jay F. Durham in an article appearing in Freight dwells at length on the careless and shabby way in which Americans pack goods for shipment to foreign markets. He says that "if Americans are really earnest in desiring to build up a foreign trade more thought and more money must be devoted to the proper packing of products destined for the markets in Europe, Asia, Africa and the Latin-American countries on this continent. Millions of dollars are annually lost because of the insecure, careless and improper methods employed in packing for such shipments.

Much complaint has been heard of late years about the decline of demand for United States products in Central and South America. Many of the commercial bodies of the larger cities of these countries have repeatedly advised producers that they must pack their goods as securely as is done in England, France, Germany, Belgium, Italy and Spain. Even in England there is much criticism of the quality and workmanship of American packing boxes.

For Travelers.

Women who travel much in the winter should remember that furs and heavy outer garments take so much room in the trunks that everything else must be reduced to the minimum of space. Therefore see that as many of your undergarments as possible be combinations, three and two piece, and make even underskirts and corset covers as far as possible of lisle or china silk. Then they can be rolled up into almost nothing and room will be left for more conspicuous, though not more important clothing.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mrs. Van Natta and family wish to thank their friends who so kindly aided them during their late bereavement in the loss of their beloved son, Jacob, who was so suddenly taken from them. Words cannot express our thanks to the members of the Fraternal Order of Eagles and the Public Service electric employes for their kindness shown, which shall long cling in our memories.

DRY CLEANING TALK

Number 2

WHAT IS DRY CLEANING?

Many people have erroneous ideas about what Dry Cleaning really is—believing that their clothes are actually cleaned dry—as if by magic method we pass our hands over the Garment and say "Presto!" It is clean.

Dry is a misnomer. "Chemical" cleaning would be a more intelligent name, but people might confuse "Chemical," thinking of acids, alkalies, etc., not used in Dry Cleaning.

The truth is we depend largely upon gasolene, naphtha, benzine—there's a difference—and other petroleum and coal tar products, for our cleansing bath instead of water as do the launderers.

The secret and successful operations in Dry Cleaning are learned only by hard experience and study, coupled with proper equipment. These are what enable us to do superior work.

We know our business thoroughly and are properly equipped in plant, collection and delivery.

SOME BIG BLAZES

Mt. St. Mary College Fire Near Anniversary of Babcock Building Loss.

COOK BROS.' LUMBER YARDS

Baird Cycle Co.'s Home, Chapot Chamois Factory and Others Destroyed By the Flames In Recent Years.

The destruction of Mount St. Mary's College and the fact that it occurred within four days of the ninth anniversary of the Babcock building fire, which occurs today, recalls to mind that Plainfield has experienced several large and costly conflagrations in the past thirty years. A resume of these is quite apropos also inasmuch as the present city fire department and Gamewell alarm system was installed twenty years ago and the first box pulled was No. 12 on March 21, 1891. The fire was in a barn on East Front street, owned by Hugo Weigman, who lost his life trying to rescue a horse.

The first big blaze which the present generation remembers best resulted in the destruction of the Cadmus livery stable at Park avenue and Second street, where the Marsh building now stands. This was on May 24, 1884. Twenty horses were burned to death and the money damage amounted to many thousands of dollars. This fire was followed on Saturday afternoon, November 21, 1885, by the most spectacular blaze the city has yet experienced, the destruction of the Cook Brothers' lumber yard, the site of the present Boice, Runyon business, together with seven barns and numerous small buildings along West Second street from Park avenue to Madison avenue. In addition all the houses nearby and even Trinity church were badly scorched. They were all saved by heroic work of the volunteer department, which worked continuously for five days before the last glowing pile of coal was reduced to cinders. The department from Somerville, Elizabeth and Scotch Plains gave assistance the first night when it seemed as if the entire business section was doomed. The borough department came across the brook directly after the bell in the old Second street tower clanged the alarm and worked like Trojans until all danger was passed.

The cause of the Cook fire was never fully established but it was undoubtedly the work of two boys who had been playing in the Randolph Dunham barn on Second street. They lighted a lantern to see by as darkness fell and somehow, it is supposed, knocked it over. They ran away when a blaze sprang up but for years denied the fact. The total loss was about $150,000, partially covered by insurance.

Six years later, on December 3, 1891, the old Boice lumber yard on the south side of the railroad between Park avenue and Arlington avenue, was destroyed. The paid department was then in vogue and handled the conflagration in a most commendable manner. The fire started through hot ashes being placed in a barrel against a barn on the Huff estate on Park avenue. flames spread to the barn and before discovery, had started a pile of lumber directly against it. The coal heaps burned about three days.

The loss from this blaze totalled about $75,000 and included the following: D. J. Boice estate, loss $40,000, insurance $32,000; A. M. Runyon loss $200, no insurance; N. W. French, barn destroyed, loss $600, insurance $300; S. O. Doane, workshop destroyed, loss $450, insurance $450; Felix Lincoln, house destroyed loss $1,500, insurance $20; C. M. Raybert, barn, personal, loss $170, insurance $400; Levi Hetfield, house destroyed, loss $2,700, insurance $175; Levi Hetfield, house, loss $1,000, no insurance; Levi Hetfield, house, loss $300, insurance $300; S. O. Doane, tools destroyed, loss $300, insurance $100; N. W. French, personal loss $100, insurance $700; Green building, (now Praed's), loss $1,000, insurance $4,500; Huff estate, dwelling loss $300, insurance $4,200; Edmund Pack, personal loss in Huff barn, $200, no insurance; Huff estate, barn loss $200, insurance $200.

On Sunday October 16, 1898, the fire department fought what it known as the Bard Cycle Company fire. It destroyed the A. D. Thompson building now the site of the Kenney building, on North avenue, causing a loss of $20,500, divided as follows: A. D. Thompson building loss $10,000, covered by insurance; Bard Cycle Company, loss on stock, $10,000; C. V. D. Corle, livery on Second street end of building, loss $500, no insurance. One half of the telephone service of the city was crippled by this fire as the wires at that time ran along North avenue on poles to the exchange opposite the depot. The company's loss was heavy but is not given in the records.

The Chapot Chamois factory fire at Rock avenue and South Second street on Sunday, October 28, 1900, was also a costly blaze. The origin was never learned. The loss on building was $10,000, insurance $15,000; on contents $22,500, insurance $32,000, making a total loss of $32,500.

The Babcock building fire was on the morning of March 6, 1902, and was also of unknown origin. The loss on the structure was $70,000 and insurance $170,000. The total loss on the personal property of tenants was $53,000 and insurance $100,000, a total loss of $123,000. something like twenty tenants, including Woodhull and Martin, the Postoffice and the Roger Silverware Corporation were affected by the blaze. The former Sebring building, occupied by O. M. Dunham and J. H. Harkins, was also destroyed at this fire, at a loss of $10,000.

There has been scores of fires in the business section since the paid department was installed, that might have caused disastrous conflagrations but were checked by prompt action. Chief Doane and his men have more than once killed a bad fire in its incipiency and have demonstrated to the full satisfaction of everyone that the are "worthy of their hire."

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Mrs. Erma Yahrman, of Plainfield, to Orrin P. Curl, of Dunellen. The wedding will take place in Philadelphia early next month. Mr. Curl is in the employ of George T. Schenck, and has many local friends.

The Borough Council will hold the regular monthly meeting in the borough hall tonight. It is probable there will be further developments in the fire team controversy and several other important matters brought up for discussion.

A large number of Dunellen and New Market people journeyed to the "Picture Lands" on the mountains yesterday to view the ruins of Mt. St. Mary's College.

The improvements of the Walter G. Runyon place on Front street, are rapidly nearing completion and make a fine and commodious office for the owner.

More Corn, Fewer Cruisers.

President Brown, of the New York Central Railroad, believes it would be wiser to spend money from the Federal treasury in providing better education for farmers than in building more battleships. The farmer is about the hardest working man in the country; but a heavy percentage of his work is thrown away because he does not know how to get the best results out of the land he tills. Properly trained, the farmer would make the farms doubly fruitful, and his advantage would be a common advantage. Big crops are the nation's largest asset.—Philadelphia Record.

The Wearing of the Yellow

By Donald Allen

(Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.)

Just why Mrs. Thompson Cardinger decided to use yellow as her color scheme at the last of the series of bridge parties she was giving is not known. It may have been that it was her favorite shade; it may have been that it harmonized with her costume of the afternoon, or, it may have been simply because yellow spring flowers, jonquils, daisies and tulips were plentiful in the florists' shops in March.

But the very fact that she had selected yellow instead of any other hue in the rainbow made all the difference in the world to her faithful cook, Norah.

Norah was a daughter of the Emerald Isle and she never lost an opportunity to go to a St. Patrick's ball whenever the anniversary of that good saint's birth rolled around. And in all the five years that she had been in the country she had never failed to dance the opening waltz with big Pat Deasy from her own County Cork.

Norah's mistress had chosen the afternoon of St. Patrick's day for her bridge party, and when the last guest had gone and Mrs. Cardinger's duties as hostess were over, she stepped into the kitchen to give a word of praise to her cook for the extra effort she had made to have the pastries and coffee toothsome and dainty.

"And, Norah, I want you to wear a bunch of those lovely jonquils to your ball tonight. They will add much to your appearance. Also, you may serve dinner at 6:30 instead of seven, so as to be in plenty of time," she said good naturedly. Mrs. Cardinger appreciated the faithfulness of Norah, and she knew with what pleasure the girl had looked forward to the ball of the evening.

Norah sang over her cook stove, and when dinner was over she mounted the stairs to her room to dress in her finest frock. And in her hand she carried a bunch of the lovely yellow flowers her mistress had given her.

She pinned them this way and that, and it was not without a thought as to how Pat would like them best that she finally arranged them in her belt, pinned there by a shamrock Pat himself had given her the year before.

On her way uptown to the ball Norah stopped to call for her chum, Katie Malone, who was maid-of-all work to a family in the next block.

"An' you must share my bouquet, Katie, my darlin'," she said to the girl. Her big Irish heart was generosity itself, and she could not be so selfish as to wear flowers when her friend had none.

Their tongues wagged busily as they climbed the stairs to the elevated road in great haste lest they miss even one strain of the fiddler's music. Their hearts were beating quickly in anticipation of the evening's pleasure, for Katie, too, had a son of Erin who awaited her coming with anxious eyes. It was not the custom in their set to be called for by their beaux—it was a waste of time, and the dancing and the escorting home again were the important things.

Bright lights streamed from each of the great ballroom windows as the girls approached the building where the Irish ball was an annual social function. They entered the cloakroom to dispose of their outer garments just as the orchestra inside began an introductory number.

Flushed and smiling, Norah and her chum made their appearance in the wide doorway of the ballroom to scan the assembled crowd for familiar faces. No sooner had they stepped onto the shining floor than they were pounced upon by half a dozen strange young men who demanded by what right they came to St. Patrick's ball wearing the colors of the Orangeman? And, without further ceremony, the beloved bouquets were torn from the belts of the two girls and trampled under foot by the husky young Irishmen.

Norah had been innocent of the breech of etiquette she was making in wearing the flowers and her chum had been as guiltless of error. Now, as they retired to the dressing room, red faced and not knowing whether to be angry or merry, they looked at each other and broke into laughter.

"Faith, and I never thought of it at all, at all, Katie," said Norah, adjusting her disarranged belt. "I'm sorry I was so generous with my bouquet."

"It's nothing at all," retorted Katie, "but I saw Pat Deasy and Michael O'Flanagin standing on the other side of the room takin' in the whole thing. It's mad they are, or I'm not Katie Malone this night."

Now, Pat Deasy, though well favored in the eyes of Norah, was not her only admirer, and she had seen the time when his blue eyes flashed at the presence of another young man in her spotless kitchen. "Perhaps," the thought now, "he thinks I am after getting the flowers from Tom."

At least, whether the two swains took the wearing of the yellow flowers as a personal insult or whether they had other reasons for ignoring their hitherto adored ones, Norah and Katie heard the opening strains of "Come Back to Erin" wafted from the orchestra without noticing the approach of their usual partners.

Never long alone at a ball, Norah was soon whirling about the room in the arms of another admirer. And from the way in which her soft Irish laugh rippled in response to bits of witty blarney her partner whispered in her ear she was conscious of no other man in the room. She was possessed of the inherent Irish quality of being all things to all people for the time being.

The ball waxed merry and waltzes and jigs and two-steps and barn dances were called off one after another, but Pat Deasy never once sought Norah as his partner, and she did not know that his eyes followed her through every turn of the dance. If, as he believed, she had deliberately worn flowers—and yellow flowers at that—sent her by his hated rival—she must indeed have forgotten all that he believed had been between them.

It was late in the evening that an Irish reel was proposed, and the orchestra struck up the merry music to which the feet of no true son of the verdant land can remain quiet. Norah, a new-found admirer in her wake, was taking her place. Her hair had become tumbled, her cheeks were as rosy as apples and her black-lashed blue eyes sparkled like diamonds. If her heart was heavy she did not let it dangle on her sleeve so that all who passed might see it.

In the intricacies of the reel, Norah, by counting ahead, could see that before many moments she must clasp hands with Pat Deasy, and her heart thumped excitedly at the prospect. Would he recognize her? Would he press her fingers—never so slightly?

It was her turn and she put her hand in the great one Pat extended. Yes; he held it closely, more closely than any other partner would dare to hold it. Quick as a flash, Norah detached the green shamrock pin from her belt and, when next she met Pat in the dance, slipped it into his palm. Across the petals was written in gilt letters, "Come Back to Erin."

When the reel was over and the dancers stood about the refreshment table or sat in cool corners, Pat sought out Norah, the message of the pin having been too much for him to resist. And, perhaps, after all, he had been mistaken.

"Norah, is it all over between us?" he asked, his color rising to the roots of his well-brushed black hair.

"An' why should it be?" asked the girl, saucily.

"Sure, you wore the yellow flowers to the ball and who but that hateful Tom Horton could have given them to you—to spite me?" he asked.

"It's a silly Mick you are, Pat," she retorted, making room for him beside her on the bench. "It wasc my lady who gave them to me off her own table to wear to the ball to charm you with. Oh, Pat!"

And, on the way home, Pat and Norah decided to visit the priest before another St. Patrick's ball should take place. But so busy were they in their own affairs that they did not see Katie and her beau deciding the same thing in the other end of the elevated coach.

Seeing Things.

"Whenever I think of the meanest trick I ever played," said Detective Jack Reeves, "I am sorry for the man I played it on. He is dead now and I can't forgive myself."

In the original Oyster Ocean, under the Academy of Music, years ago, a stuffed turkey roosted on a shelf. Those lined up at the bar could see the turkey reflected in the large mirror.

One day Reeves lifted the stuffed turkey off its perch and substituted a live one. The bird seemed to enjoy it and strutted back and forth on his new perch.

Reeves then wandered out, found his friend Jim and said: "Come over to the Ocean and have something."

Jim was willing.

With a glass of whisky in his hand at the Oyster Ocean bar, Jim gazed into the mirror. Suddenly his face assumed an ashen hue.

"Look, Jack, look!" he exclaimed, his hands trembling. "See the turkey, see!"

"What's the matter?" asked Reeves. "That turkey has been stuffed for years."

"Stuffed! The cussed thing is alive—it's walking around and looking at us."

"You're dreaming."

"It's come at last, Jack. I've got 'em; I've got 'em!" shouted the unhappy Jim, and, dashing his glass to the floor, he ran from the place.—Cleveland Press.

A Desperate Game

By JOHN K. LEYS,

Author of "The Lindsays," "The Lawyer's Secret," "The Black Terror," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, by John K. Leys.

"You are to take in the master's coffee and set out the spirit decanters, and then you can have your supper," she said. There was a sullenness in her manner that was more than the mere uncouthness of ill breeding, but Eva thought it best to affect not to notice it.

"Very good," she answered quietly. "Where is the coffee?"

"In the kitchen. Mrs. Jorrocks has just made it."

"And will you show me the way to the dining room?"

To this she got no answer. She went on to the kitchen, procured the coffee and then asked a long, thin, delicate looking man, who was lounging by the chimney, if he would show her the way to the dining room.

"Certainly, my dear," he said with alacrity, and even went so far (first glancing in the direction of the housekeeper's room) as to take the coffee tray from her hands and carry it for her. As they left the kitchen Eva happened to glance behind her and she saw the two under servants looking at one another, each with a broad grin on her face.

"Never mind," said Eva to herself. "I have found one person at Ravenscrag who may be depended upon to do a civil action, and that is something."

Jorrocks took her into a room larger than any in Hampton Place, but sparsely filled with furniture that was old and faded. At one side of the wide fireplace Sir Rufus sat reading by the light of a reading lamp. The light fell only on the table and a foot or two beyond it, so that although Eva's heart beat at the sight of her enemy she told herself that for the present, at all events, she was safe.

Jorrocks now advanced to the table and, laying down the coffee tray at his master's elbow, he cleared his throat to attract the baronet's attention and then said in a low, respectful tone, "This is the new parlor maid, sir."

As he spoke Eva purposely advanced, dropping a slight courtesy. Then she stood with her hands in front of her and her eyes on the ground. Her heart beat so as almost to suffocate her. Every second she expected to hear a scornful laugh telling her that her trick had been discovered.

"Very good. What is your name?"

"Atkins, sir."

"Well, Jorrocks, show her where the things are kept and coach her in her duties for a day or two. I dare say she will soon pick them up."

"I will do my best, sir," said Eva, forcing herself to speak. She greatly feared that the sound of her voice might betray her, but she purposely spoke in a low and rather hoarse voice, and the baronet's next words reassured her.

"That's right. I've no doubt you'll get along all right. But you mustn't make Mrs. Jorrocks jealous, you know."

She turned away to hide her blushing face, and Sir Rufus laughed a loud, unpleasant laugh, under cover of which she escaped.

It was not till she reached her own room after supper that she was able to take stock, as it were, of her position, and she could not find in it much cause for satisfaction.

She saw now, only too clearly, that in coming to Ravenscrag she had acted from a foolish, unreasoning impulse. How was it possible, she asked herself, that she could gain any hint of the secret she wished to unearth from the servants? As for actual spying upon Sir Rufus—opening drawers and desks at midnight and that sort of thing—she felt that she had neither the nerve nor the callousness necessary to carry it through. No; she had made a mistake, and the sooner she got away from Ravenscrag the better. Having come to this conclusion, she fell asleep.

She was awakened in the morning by the loud ringing of a bell just outside her door. She jumped up and began what was to her a day, not of toil merely, but of worries and perplexities innumerable. She was astonished to find how ignorant she was of the commonest duties of a household and how difficult it was for her unaccustomed hands to carry out even the simplest directions.

But what harassed her most was the fear that Sir Rufus, when he came to look at her in broad daylight, would see through her disguise at once. She wondered how she should ever have exposed herself to the shame, the intolerable humiliation, of being detected playing such an unworthy part.

The first ordeal would be when she waited on him at breakfast, and she screwed up her courage to go through with it. He hardly looked at her at all during the meal.

"Pour me out a cup of coffee," he said abruptly. "Not too much sugar or milk." She obeyed in silence, but Sir Rufus was too busy reading his letters to pay any attention to what she did. The meal went on, and when it was over the baronet gathered up his letters and one or two of the newspapers and went off to the study, leaving a litter of torn envelopes and wrappers on the floor.

Having carried away the dishes, Eva proceeded to gather up the waste paper, but suddenly her hands ceased to move and she stood gazing at one of the envelopes as if she had been petrified. The envelope was addressed in her mother's handwriting!

If Sir Rufus and her mother were in correspondence and if only she could get a sight of that correspondence she might by its help unravel the whole mystery. Was it not possible that in some way she might see those letters?

CHAPTER XXV.

THE SECRET.

Days merged into weeks and summer had become autumn, and no chance—not the ghost of a chance—had offered itself. Eva was beginning to despair. She saw that years might pass and the wished for opportunity might never come. And then suddenly the door was opened.

One morning in September a neighboring squire sent over a note to Sir Rufus, and as Jorrocks was busy Eva was told to take it to the library.

Sir Rufus was not in the room. But the lid of the desk of the writing table was raised and the key (one of a bunch) was in the lock! Scarcely thinking what she did, Eva pounced upon the keys and slipped them into her pocket. The next moment she took them out and dropped them behind one of the books on the bookshelves. Hurriedly noting the name of the volume—it was "Roderick Random"—she passed out of the library into the hall. She was anxious that Sir Rufus should not find her there. He was upstairs, and she met him on the stairs and gave him the note.

It was not until dinner time that the master of the house said, "By the way, Jorrocks, have you seen anything of my keys?"

"Your keys, sir? No, sir."

"I must have dropped them somewhere."

"Shall I look for them in your dressing room, sir?" asked Eva. There was not a tremor in her voice, and the suggestion was natural enough. She went upstairs, congratulating herself on having got out of the room without being questioned.

As a matter of course the keys were not found in the dressing room nor anywhere else, and all Sir Rufus said was: "Be sure that you search the room carefully in the morning. They must be somewhere about the place."

That night Eva never closed her eyes. She waited long, so that she might be sure that Sir Rufus, who often sat up late reading, had gone to bed. It was nearly 3 in the morning when, with infinite caution, she descended the stairs. In her left hand she carried a candle, unlighted. Having reached the library, she gently opened the door. The room was dark and silent as the grave.

Her match made no noise on the phosphorous paste surface, and in another moment she had a faint light glimmering from the candlestick. The desk was not fastened. There was no need to fetch the keys. When she raised the lid she saw in front of her a quantity of miscellaneous papers, all huddled together. At the back were two ranges of pigeonholes, one above the other. Some of these were filled, some empty. Eva pulled out the contents of one pigeonhole after another. With a gasp and a thrill of satisfaction she came upon one small packet—three letters in all, in the handwriting she knew so well, her mother's.

Her excitement was now almost too great to be borne. She softly closed the lid, set the candle on the top of it and, drawing up a chair, sat down to read the letters.

The first of them was only about six months old. Eva skimmed through the opening sentences and turned the page.

The first words she read on that page turned her sick and faint. The words were:

If what you say is true no doubt Lord Roscommon is not my husband and my children are illegitimate. I do not deny the fact of my first marriage, though it was only at a registrar's office. I have no doubt it was legal enough. The point is whether the man I, a foolish, friendless girl, married in haste was still living when I married Lord Roscommon. I do not know that he was alive, and I do not believe that you do. Still less can I believe that you would take advantage of the knowledge which your intimacy with Bethune gave you to make life yet more wretched for an unhappy and sorely tried woman.

So this was the secret! This was the hold that Sir Rufus had over her mother! She had been married, probably in secret, to this man Bethune. He had left her, and his wife imagined him to be dead. Then she married Lord Roscommon—that was most likely after her uncle had come home from India and had proclaimed his intention of making her his heir. But was the man dead at the time of the second marriage?

With trembling fingers Eva opened the second letter. And in it she read:

It is true. I have seen him. In spite of the changes prison life has made in him I should have known him anywhere. The secret of my life is known to you, and you have the power to bring disgrace upon me and those nearest to me. But I entreat you to be merciful and say nothing. Why not come and stay here for a time, so that we may talk things over?

This letter was dated from Hampton Place.

So this was the mercy Sir Rufus, descendant of an ancient race, had shown this woman in her extremity! He had used his knowledge to levy blackmail in its most odious form. He knew that Lady Roscommon's money was tied up for the benefit of her children. This made Eva wealthy. Therefore he had demanded her as the price of his silence.

Eva's hands clinched and her teeth set themselves hard when she thought of it. The infamy of it! And to be the wife of such a scoundrel!

She turned to the third letter—it was evident from the freshness of the paper that it was the one that had arrived within the last few weeks.

I can scarcely believe your assurance that you do not know where Eva has gone. You were the one who had an interest in getting hold of her. But you must marry her or you shall not see one penny of her money. Even if I wished to give you the money without her, if you were to try to force me to do so, I could not, since the investments stand in the names of trustees, and they would not pay a penny of the capital without proof of Eva's death. But I do not believe that she is dead. I believe that—

A slight noise in the room made her start.

She looked up. Sir Rufus Deveril was bending over her, gazing into her eyes.

CHAPTER XXVI.

THE NET CLOSES IN.

"Put those papers back!" the baronet said sharply.

"No. I will keep them."

"You"—

Eva stood up.

"Sir Rufus, do you not know me?"

"Know you?" A bewildered look came into his face and he stepped backward.

"I am Eva Fitzgerald."

There was absolute silence for some seconds. Then he burst into a loud, harsh laugh.

"By Jove," he said, "I didn't guess that you were as fond of me as all that, little Eva."

"If you choose to insult me here under your own roof, Sir Rufus, of course, being alone and unprotected, I can't prevent it."

She spoke with dignity, but the dignity was quite thrown away upon Sir Rufus. He continued to laugh with genuine amusement, and Eva felt that she hated him as she had never hated him before. She turned red, then pale, and began slowly to move toward the door. But he stepped in front of her and with one hand swung a chair round for her.

"Won't you sit down?" he said in his usual tone. "We really ought to come to an understanding. What were you doing at my desk?"

"I was looking for my mother's letters."

"Ah! And did you get them?"

"Yes; and I mean to keep them."

"We shall see about that by and by. You took my keys, I suppose?"

Instead of answering, Eva rose, and, going to the bookshelf where she had hidden the keys, she fetched them and laid them down on the desk without a word.

"Thanks. Though I did not know you were Miss Fitzgerald good heavens, I can scarcely believe it yet—I suspected that you were of a dishonest turn of mind. I knew perfectly well that they had not been lost by accident and was determined to find out who the thief was. So, feeling pretty confident that she would begin her researches tonight, I waited for her in the dining room. Unfortunately I fell asleep or I should have been on the scene a little earlier."

"I am very glad you were not," said the girl gravely.

"You are very cool! And that reminds me—would you mind telling me what wild idea led you to come masquerading here?"

"I wanted to find out why it was that my mother was your slave and had to do whatever you wished."

"So she didn't tell you?"

"No."

"You know now, I suppose, that your mother is not really Lady Roscommon and that both you and your brother are illegitimate?"

Eva flushed painfully, but she answered, "Yes, I know it."

"It is better to give things their true names, else misconceptions might arise. Well, that being so, don't you think you will change your position a good deal for the better when you become my wife?"

"I would rather die than be your wife."

The man's face fell, and for a moment he looked sullen, but he quickly recovered his usual air of easy indifference.

"I trust that you will soon give me the opportunity of trying to make you change your mind," he said politely.

"Sir Rufus," said the girl, prompted to frankness by a sudden impulse, "I am not vain enough to fancy that I have made you fond of me against my will, but I am to have a large fortune on my marriage. Could you not take the money and let me go? I would be so grateful to you!"

"You are too modest, my dear Miss Fitzgerald, and place an absurdly low value upon your own charms. But, to tell the truth, that plan of solving the difficulty did occur—not to me, I beg you to believe—but to Lady Roscommon. She made inquiries, and she found that her late lamented uncle had settled the money in such a way that neither you nor she can touch the capital unless in the event of your marriage."

The light, easy manner in which this was said stung Eva beyond endurance. He seemed to regard the mental torture she was undergoing as a vivisector might regard the writhings of an unfortunate animal—something that might be slightly annoying, but not worthy of any serious consideration.

"It is strange to think that you, a gentleman, should descend to a baseness like this!" she exclaimed.

"Pardon?" he asked, gently lifting his eyebrows as though he had not quite caught her meaning.

"You need not pretend not to understand me. I think any man might be ashamed to force an unwilling girl to marry him by the threat that he would ruin her family if she did not."

Again Sir Rufus delicately raised his eyebrows.

"Believe me, my dear Miss Fitzgerald, you have an entirely false impression of the situation. Let me try to make it clear to you. If your brother has no right to inherit his father's title and estates, justice demands that he should renounce them."

"I am sure he would if he knew," cried Eva.

"And do you think Lady Roscommon would like that?" asked Sir Rufus quietly, and the girl dropped her eyes on the floor without answering. "You see, we have her to consider. It is not a pretty story—that Lady Roscommon is in reality the wife of James Reginald Bethune, a convicted felon. She would never be able to hold up her head again if the thing were known, and indeed she has more than once assured me that she would not live to face such a disgrace."

"Do you mean"— Eva asked, suddenly turning pale.

"That she would sooner commit suicide? Yes. So you see it is a very serious matter for her—almost, if not quite, as serious for her as it is for her son."

He stopped, and Eva was silent. She saw that her mother had not exaggerated the magnitude of the disaster that threatened them. And she was acute enough to see, under the mask of easy good manners assumed by Sir Rufus, an inflexible purpose. It seemed that the net was closing in around her. Eva sat quite still, thinking, thinking. Was there any way to escape from the gulf that yawned at her feet? She saw none.

Sir Rufus' silky tones fell on her ears and roused her.

"There is another little matter that I may find myself compelled to speak of. Sometimes I think that I ought to have spoken of it long ago. It affects your brother rather than your mother, though she, too, is indirectly involved."

Eva sat looking at him with grave eyes, but did not say a word. And, bad as he was, Sir Rufus hesitated to go on. He wished he had held his tongue. But Eva sat looking at him, expecting him to say more. So he said quietly and deliberately:

"This time the crime is not bigamy, but murder."

"I do not believe it."

"I did not expect that you would. But it is true."

The girl was trembling from head to foot, and she felt as if all the blood in her body had suddenly become cold. Her denial had been involuntary, but at her adversary's calm "It is true" her heart sank.

"Who was it that you say he killed?"

"A man named Molloy."

"Molloy? I don't know who you mean. I never heard him mention the name."

"I dare say not. But your mother knows it well. In some way that I can only guess at this man Molloy, who was at one time a farmer in Ireland, became possessed of the secret of your mother's former marriage. He used his knowledge basely, for his own ends, to extract money from Lady Roscommon."

A bitter smile flickered for a moment round the girl's lips. Base uses, indeed! What was the extraction of a few pounds from an overfull purse compared with the wrecking of her whole life's happiness? Yet it did not seem to strike the speaker that his own conduct was infinitely the more base of the two.

"Your mother was in the habit of meeting this man secretly at night and giving him the money that was the price of his silence. Your brother made a third at one meeting, the last meeting that ever took place between your mother and the man Molloy. There was a dispute or quarrel of some kind, and your brother shot the man with his revolver. The prosecution would say that he had taken it with him on purpose, and indeed it is hard to say what else he could have wanted it for. But whether the act was premeditated or not, the law will call it murder."

"Sir Rufus, I believe you are saying all this to frighten me."

"Indeed I am not. The fatal shot was fired in Bushey park, about a third of a mile from your house."

"What! That man!"

"Yes, I am speaking of the man who was shot in Bushey park. The verdict of the coroner's jury, you may remember, was one of willful murder. And if you still doubt my word you have only to put a few questions to your mother and you will find that I have told you the truth in every particular."

She doubted it no longer. The man's manner, calm and quiet, unaffected by her belief or disbelief, carried conviction with it.

"If further proof of your brother's guilt were wanting," said the baronet, "it will be found in the fact that the revolver with which the deed was done was picked up by—by some one—and handed to the police. I saw it myself at the inquest. It belongs to your brother. I recognized it as soon as I saw it."

"But surely you may be mistaken in a thing of that kind."

"To make sure I looked next day into the revolver case in your brother's room. It was empty. No wonder. The revolver itself is in the custody of the criminal investigation department at Scotland Yard."

"I don't think you need say any more," said the poor girl in a trembling voice. Truly the net was closing in now.

There was a pause, and then the man's voice was again heard.

"You can understand that it would be to me most painful to denounce to the police the son of an old friend as a murderer. Yet I fear I might have no other alternative."

"I don't see that our—that my marrying you would make the slightest difference."

"Oh, but it would! You can see for yourself that no one would be expected to denounce his mother-in-law or his brother-in-law."

"They will say that you ought to have spoken out at first."

"Ah, but then, you see, I always hoped to become one of the family." This was said with such an air of gratified, triumphant malice that Eva was stung into sudden anger.

PATERSON RESERVES DEFEAT Y.M.C.A. FIVE

The Y. M. C. A. basketball team finished its season Saturday night with a game fith the Paterson Reserves, one of the strongest teams in the State. The locals were defeated by the final score of 43 to 21. The game was fast from the start, but early in the contest it was evident that Paterson was much too fast for Plainfield. At the end of the first half the score was 17 to 10 in favor of the visitors.

Paterson was especially clever in passing and during the last half gave a fine exhibition of goal throwing. Occasionally, Plainfield would show flashes of brilliant work and Ricketts and Stine, each throwing four goals from the field, did good work. Stine also was credited with three goals from foul, while Naylor made one fine goal from the field.

R. Rose, one of the forwards for the visitors, was the star, throwing nine goals from the field, while every other member of the team had one or more field goals to their credit. At times the game was a little rough, especially in the last half, Plainfield making a desperate effort to bring up its score. The lineup:

Plainfield—Forwards, Ricketts, Stine; centre, Fritts; guards, Gavett, Naylor, Manley.

Paterson Reserves—Forwards, J. Rose, R. Rose; centre, Ash; guards, Greenway, Cobeson, Bustard.

Field goals—Ricketts 4, Stine 4, Naylor 1, J. Rose 3, R. Rose 9, Ash 2, Greenway 3, Cobeson 1, Bustard 2; goals from foul—Stine 3, Ash 3. Referee, T. G. Whittaker.

The preliminary game was between the Ajax and Holy Cross teams, and it proved almost as exciting as the other one. Holy Cross won out by the final score of 29 to 28, amid the wildest sort of cheering on the part of the supporters of both teams. The fives were evenly matched and it was a toss up as to the winner. The lineup:

Holy Cross—Forwards, Seals, Moran; centre, Bohan; guards, Little, Berse.

Ajax—Forwards, Peacock, Line; centre, Dunning; guards, Glover, Bryniaski, McNamee.

Field goals—Peacock 5, Line 1, Dunning 2, Bryniaski 4, McNamee 2, Seals 2, Moran 7, Bohan 4, Little 1; goals from foul—Bohan 1. Referee, F. W. Dunning.

PASTOR OPPOSED TO CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

"How to Get Everything You Want," was the subject of Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire's discourse at the Park Avenue Baptist church last night, and the congregation was so large that it was necessary to open the Sunday school room to accommodate the worshippers. Prior to his sermon, Mr. Maguire, according to his weekly custom, conducted a question box, answering several pertinent questions submitted to him in writing.

One of these questioners sought information regarding a recent statement by Rev. S. A. Perrine on "Christian Science," and the pastor advised him to seek the "Gospel according to The Daily Press," of a recent date, wherein Mr. Perrine set forth his views at some length.

Mr. Maguire again referred to capital punishment, suggested by a question and said that he firmly believed that this form of punishment would soon be a thing of the past. He said that there is not a single warrant in the New Testament for the law to exact a life for a life, that idea being taken from the Jewish law in the Old Testament.

Returning to his subject, Mr. Maguire gave a strong exposition of the Scriptures pertaining to peace, happiness and the assurance of a life hereafter, all of which he said were the only things worth having, and he declared that if a person is to have peace it must come from the Throne of God through the Cross on Calvary.

Mr. Maguire emphasized the Scriptural text, "What will it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul," by describing how worthless the world is from the viewpoint of geologists and astronomers, who declare that beneath the earth's crust there is a seething mass of flames and that during the past few years a dozen or more worlds have been consumed by fire.

"In view of all this," declared the preacher, "you ask me to exchange the world for my soul. What title can you give me for this old world? What insurance policies can you offer me that will protect my possession if I should gain the whole world?"

MARION TO BE HANGED.

Theatrical Man Who Killed Wife is Sentenced.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., March 6.—George L. Marion, a New York theatrical man, who was convicted of the murder of his wife in this city, was sentenced by Judge Garmon to be hanged. Governor Tener will fix the date for the execution. Marion's wife ran away from their home in Plainfield, N. J., eighteen months ago, with another man. Marion followed, finding her in this city, where she had been deserted, and at a conference with her in the office of the chief of police, shot her dead. Marion has had two trials and a third one was denied. His defense was that he was insane owing to jealously.

JAMES MULDOWNEY AGED 65 YRS. DEAD

James J. Muldowney, for more than forty years a resident of the West End, died last night at his home on West Second street. He had been ill for a long time with a pulmonary complaint and his condition had been hopeless for several months.

Mr. Muldowney was born in Ireland in 1846 and came to this country when a young man. He was employed by various building contractors until his health failed. He lived for many years on West Third street and his home was the social gathering place for friends from his native land for several decades. Not to know "Jim" Muldowney, as he was always called, meant that the person was a newcomer in that section of the city. He was geniality itself and his word went a great way in certain circles.

Mr. Muldowney was twice married. Beside his wife he is survived by three daughters and four sons. They are Mrs. Thomas Eganey, Mrs. Charles Paglinaca and Miss B. Muldowney; Thomas, Cormack and Domnick Muldowney, all of this city, and James Muldowney, of Wilmington, Del. He also leaves one sister, Mrs. John Winn, of Philadelphia, and four brothers: Thomas, of this city, Patrick and Dominick, of Philadelphia, and Michael, of Pittsburg.

The funeral will be held at his late home Wednesday morning at 8:30 and in St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock. Burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

BRYAN OUT FOR GOOD.

No Longer Seeking Office, but Still in Politics.

Chicago, March 6.—Replying to a humorous sally of the toastmaster at a press club luncheon here, William Jennings Bryan reiterated the statement that he would not be a candidate for office again.

Dr. G. Frank Lydston, the toastmaster, had remarked facetiously that the running for office of Colonel Bryan had become an institution rather than an instance.

Mr. Bryan in his reply declared that Roosevelt and Taft had borrowed Democratic doctrine, "so," said he, "why should I seek the hardships of the White House when I can get other men willing to carry out my policies? Do not think, however, that because I am not a candidate for any office that I am out of politics."

OLDFIELD ROBBED?

Racer Says $50,000 in Drafts Was Taken.

El Paso, Tex., March 6.—Barney Oldfield, the automobile speed racer, is in El Paso trying to find a grip which was stolen from him on the train between San Antonio and El Paso containing drafts for $50,000 which "the racing trust," to use his own words, paid him for his machines and an agreement to quit racing. The grip disappeared shortly after he placed it on a Pullman car at San Antonio, he says. He stoppe dover here to await efforts of Pullman and railroad officials to recover it.

"Only if a foreigner comes and takes the championship," he said, when asked if he would ever "come back" as a racer.

PATRICK NOT TO APPEAR.

Condemned Murderer In New Fight For Freedom.

New York, March 6.—Lawyer Albert T. Patrick, who is undergoing a life sentence in Sing Sing, was notified Saturday of a decision handed down by Chief Justice Cullen of the Court of Appeals denying him the right to appear in person before the highest court in the State when Lawyer George Francis O'Neill, of 5 Beekman street, his personal counsel, will, a week from today, make another attempt to secure his client liberation from behind prison bars.

The chief justice holds that since Patrick will be represented by very able counsel he is adverse to allowing him to appear personally, "as it would be establishing an undesirable precedent."

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Bailey, of 86 Duer street, quietly observed their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary on Saturday.

"CHILD WELFARE" TO BE DISCUSSED

In the interest of Child Welfare Work, a public meeting will be held under the auspices of the co-operation committee of the Charity Organization Society at the High School auditorium on Tuesday night, March 21.

The purpose is neither to "pass around the hat" nor to enact resolutions, but to enlighten the public on this important phase of charity work. Among the speakers will be Dr. William H. Allen, director of the New York Bureau of Research, a specialist in the study of the physical welfare of children; Joseph Byers, secretary of the State Charities and Prison Reform associations; Dr. Wilmit L. Coit, of Newark, an authority on infant feeding, and John Collier, of New York, secretary of the National Board of Censorship for Moving Pictures. Mr. Collier will illustrate his talk with wholesome moving pictures.

The committee of the Charities Organization Society consists of Hugh F. Fox, chairman; Dr. B. van D Hedges, Lindsey Best, Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, Mrs. John B. Dumont, J. E. Erickson, J. W. Gavett, Captain Hewitt, Mrs. F. W. Jones, H. C. Krebs, D. T. Kenney, Mrs. Anna Most, George P. Mellick, Mrs. J. Albert Lane and Mrs. Henry M. Maxson.

GAMBLERS FLED BEFORE POLICEMAN

"Cheese it, the cop," was heard by a crowd of gamblers yesterday afternoon when a posse headed by Detective Sergeant Flynn came on the run toward a group of dice throwers near the old dumping ground at DeKalb avenue. Heeding the sudden cry the group melted like snow before a rising sun and by the time the patrolmen got there no one was in sight.

Complaint had been telephoned to Mayor George W. V. Moy earlier in the day that a crap game was in progress and that the players were disturbing the neighborhood with their loud talk. His honor notified Chief Kiely and immediate action was taken to corral the bunch. The lookouts posted by the gang kept their eyes open and at the first sign of danger they gave the alarm.

COUNCIL'S ROUTINE

Many Minor Matters Are Discussed at Regular Monthly Session.

PETITIONS ARE NUMEROUS.

Objection to Extension of Kensington Avenue—Reports of City Officials and Other Doings at March Meeting.

Numerous petitions protesting against the proposed action of the Council to open Kensington avenue, and one or two in favor, were presented at the March meeting of the Common Council, last night. The weight of argument was overwhelmingly against the improvement.

Those who protested were E. B. Sovereign, Central Park Realty Company, C. M. Trowbridge, W. S. Maltbie, representing Estate of C. B. Maltbie; S. L. Maltbie, H. E. Phillips, F. A. Brunn, H. J. Storrs, L. M. Booth and H. H. Williams. T. M. Day was among those who argued for the improvement, claiming that it would afford a short cut to the Plainfield Country Club and that section of the city.

It is stated that the residents are not so much against the opening of the avenue as against the method of doing it. According to the original plans it would mean the loss of about 300 feet of valuable property on Park avenue, which could be avoided provided an angle was made in the extension. The petitions were all filed.

Many other petitions were received at this time, all being referred to the proper committees: Petition of residents for crosswalks on East Seventh street, between Richmond and Berckman streets; lights on Randolph road, between Central and Field avenues; also on Albert street; Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., requested the usual appropriation of $100 for the observance of Memorial Day; belated petition C. E. Society protesting against granting of liquor licenses; petition for eight-inch sewer Randolph and Laramie roads; petition residents Leland avenue and members Dutch Arms, Netherwood Reformed church for crosswalks and lights.

Horace G. Adams, clerk of the District court, reported receipts of $138.02 for the past month and disbursements of $42.50. Building Inspector Doane reported the granting of nineteen permits during the month. Overseer-of-the-Poor A. D. Ayers reported expenditures of $168.73.

Councilman Mygatt, acting chairman of the finance committee, offered the following resolutions, all of which were adopted:

Authorizing the return of an indemnity bond in view of the finding of two sewer coupon bonds; fixing the salary of each member of the Board of Assessors at $40 yearly; authorizing the printing of five thousand tax return bills for the Board of Assessors; transferring $5,000 from the general fund to the street fund; providing for the borrowing of $4,000 on account of sewer extension work; authorizing the Mayor and clerk to execute a lease with David T. Kenney, owner of the building for rooms Nos. 4, 5 and 6 for the use of city offices, at a yearly rental of $450.

Mr. Mygatt also presented an opinion from Judge William Newcorn, upon request, regarding a tax matter between Elston M. French and the city, the former claiming error in the assessment. The opinion was accompanied by a resolution drawn by Judge Newcorn, covering the points, which was adopted, executing a quit claim deed.

Mr. Gloak, chairman of the street committee, presented a deed for a small tract of land on Huntington avenue, upon which it is proposed to erect a second sewer pumping station, and moved that it be referred to the finance committee. The tract in question has been given to the city free of all cost by the Plainfield City Realty Company for the purposes stated.

The petition of the Public Service Corporation, through subsidiary companies, requesting that Church street, between East Fourth street and the railroad be vacated, was reported by Mr. Gloak and he offered an ordinance covering the point, which was adopted on first and second readings and ordered advertised. A public hearing will be granted on April 3.

The petition of owners of the Chelsea Park section in the Netherwood district, for permission to construct sewers in the tract, was acted upon favorably, it being provided that the work must be done under the direction of Street Commissioner Gavett.

On motion of Mr. Clay petitions for electric lights were granted on East Second street and Wylie avenue and Terrill road; on Woodland avenue, between Central street and

KNEW NOT UNIFORM. ERGO, NO FREE RIDE

Because he did not recognize the uniform and police badge worn by Health Officer William Addis yesterday, a conductor on a main line trolley car ejected Mr. Addis from a trolley car and thereby caused a mild rumpus. The outcome of which will probably be an apology to Mr. Addis.

According to Mr. Addis this is not the first time that he has had trouble with conductors on the line. Whether it is because they do not like the canary colored uniform or that they have a decided dislike to the health officer is not yet known, but certain it is that unless Mr. Addis is personally known to the conductor he invariably has trouble when travelling on the trolleys.

When spoken to this morning, Mr. Gettings, superintendent of the Elizabeth—Plainfield division said that the trouble was in all likelihood brought about by the fact that Mr. Addis does not expose to view his police badge and that his uniform was not the color and shape generally worn by officers.

RECRUITS WANTED TO FIGHT PLAGUE

Less lives were lost in the Spanish-American war than the Grim Reaper claims through the ravages of the Great White Plague in one single day in this country. To finance the war against King Alfonso, a stamp tax was imposed in the United States, but such means of revenue are not available for the campaign against tuberculosis. Yet this disease costs New York city alone more than 10,000 lives and $23,000,000 each year.

The great obstacle to the progress of the crusaders is the lack of funds—that's all. The spirit is willing, but the wherewithall is not what it should be.

There's a remedy at your command, however, if you will only take upon yourself a little burden. A task which will occupy your time a few minutes each day for a week or less than that. Join the army of dollars being organized to give battle to this dread disease. Enlist now by sending your name to The Daily Press and you will be assigned to duty on the firing line.

As told yesterday, this means the "year and a day" plan. It is not an "endless chain scheme" but a practical and satisfactory business method. This paper represents the year and will be glad to hear from volunteers to represent the twelve months, who will serve as generals. These twelve months each select four colonels to act as the four weeks. The colonels each appoint seven captains, representing the days in a week. Catch the idea?

BOROUGH SCHOOLS WILL NEED $24,700

According to the figures presented at a special meeting, last night, the borough Board of Education will require $24,760 for general purposes during the coming year. This amount will be asked for from the taxpayers at the yearly school election to be held on Tuesday, March 21.

The budget is made up as follows: current expenses, $20,325; manual training, $1,975; building and repairs, $2,400.

The report of clerk Albert Steiner was presented and shows that the balance on hand March 1, the close of the fiscal year, was $1,982.73. It was also stated that the borough's share of the railroad tax money for the coming year would be $6,600, half to be paid in April and the remainder in June.

The teachers' salary lists were gone over and the normal increase for each department was allowed. The amounts are in keeping with those of other years.

Four trustees are to be elected at the anual meeting to fill expired terms. No new names were suggested last night, and it is probable the present incumbents will remain.

CO. K. GETS FLAGS

National and State Emblems Presented by Some Local Women.

PRESENTED BY SWACKHAMER.

Colonel Patterson, Major Martin, Captain Kitchell and Others Make Speeches at Armory Meeting.

Company K, Second Regiment, N. G. N. J. can point with pride to the magnificent stand of colors presented to them last night and with ample justification say they have the most beautiful stand of colors of the State. The flags, one the National emblem the other the flag of the State, were presented to them last evening by Mrs. T. O. Doane and several of her public spirited friends, the presentation speech being delivered by former Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer. Others who made short speeches were Captain H. B. Kitchell, accepting the flag; Colonel Robert Patterson, assistant inspector general; Major W. B. Martin, of Elizabeth; Captain W. C. Smith, and Captain William Hand, of the local corps of the G. A. R. and Chief T. O. Doane.

The flags which are each 5½ by 4¾ feet are of solid silk, handsomely borded with a tassellated gold fringe. The State flag is hand painted and is a fine piece of work. It bears the coat of arms of New Jersey.

The securing of this gift to company K, which was a complete surprise, is due almost entirely to the efforts of Mrs. T. O. Doane. Two years ago when Chief Doane returned from a Camp Fire tendered the members of Winfield Scott Post in Co. K's armory, he told his wife that the company had no flags of their own and it was a pity that such should be the case. Mrs. Doane immediately got busy and in a short time fifty dollars was raised for the two flags. But this amount seemed to be the limit that could be raised for the purpose and as the flags would cost about three times that amount, Mrs. Doane despaired of ever getting together the full amount. However a little maneuvring and a little patient coaxing finally brought the subscription to the required figure and the flags were ordered.

Chief Doane acted as master of ceremonies and introduced Mr. Swackhamer to the company and invited guests who numbered about fifty. Mr. Swackhamer urged the men to remember what the flag stands for, appealing to their patriotism and their love of country. He rehearsed the history of the flag and recounted its glorious record. "When you receive the emblems," he said, "you are to protect them for both nation and State."

Captain Kitchell responded with warm appreciation of the honor done the company and said that as there were no rules preventing the carrying of the flags on parade he would see to it that the two emblems should always be used when the company was called out whether for duty or otherwise.

Major Martin rehearsed the history of the company from its inception in 1901 to the present time and declared that notwithstanding that it was only an infant so far as age is concerned it was one of the huskiest youngsters in the State, standing as it does head and shoulders above the best military organization with the highest percentage for general efficiency ever known.

Captain W. C. Smith said that the flag had cost 400.000 lives to preserve but that did not begin to show the actual cost and that therefore it was worth preserving at any cost.

Colonel Patterson and Captain Hand followed in short speeches the latter telling some of his recent experiences in the south. Company K came to attention and three ringing cheers were given for Mrs. Doane. A short drill followed which was admirably executed considering the poor floor conditions of the armory. Major Martin in his speech deplored the fact that the company had such a poor armory and said he would use whatever influence he had to procure better quarters as he believed the company fully deserved them.

The flags will be kept in glass cases when not in use and on these cases will be inscribed the names of the contributors to the fund. Among those present last night were Mrs. T. O. Doane, Mr. and Mrs. Thad Doane, Jr., J. R. Knowlton, Miss Sarah Gilligan, Mrs. H B. Kitchell, Lieut. and Mrs. A. I. Littell and Miss Grace Mendel. Several members of the G. A. R. were also present.

—Corporal James L. Niles, of Company K, concluded on February 26 ten years service as a member of the National Guard.

FRANK B. CLARK DIES OF BRIGHT'S DISEASE

Frank B. Clark, aged thirty-four years, son of Mrs Anna M. Clark and the late Bernard Clark, died at 9:35 o'clock this morning at his home, 434 West Foruth street, from Bright's disease and dropsy. He had been ill since October last. Mr. Clark was associated with his brother, John Clark in the hotel and saloon business at West Fourth and Liberty streets.

Mr. Clark was born in Boston and had been a resident of this city thirteen years. He was a member of Plainfield Aerie, No. 866, Fraternal Order Eagles. Beside a wife and one son, Charles, Mr. Clark is survived by his mother, two brothers, John and Joseph Clark, the latter being a member of the fire department and one sister, Miss Mamie Clark. Announcement of funeral will be made later.

FAIR HEIR MARRIED TO WEALTHY WIDOW

Frank P. Smith, of Kansas City, brother of the late Mrs. Charles L. Fair, who was formerly a cook in a restaurant and is now wealthy and Mrs. Ordelia R. Clark, widow of Henry D. Clark, capitalist and owner of the Orpheum theatre, Kansas City, were married a week ago last night in that city.

The marriage was performed at Mrs. Clark's home a few minutes before midnight and the couple announced that they intend leaving for the east. Mr. Smith is a brother to William Smith, formerly of New Market. He claims that through the death of an uncle on Staten Island he will inherit an additional fortune.

TO PAY $100 FOR BOX FOR COLLEGE BENEFIT

Since the announcement made in yesterday's Daily Press that a benefit entertainment would be given in the Plainfield theatre on St. Patrick's Day for Mount St. Mary College, David T. Kenney has received assurance that many of the boxes will be taken before the tickets are placed on sale tomorrow.

Among those who have signified their intentions of taking boxes are Charles W. McCutchen, Edwin S. Hooley, Congressman Thomas J. Sculley, of Perth Amboy, and Vice-president and General Manager William G. Besler.

Mr. McCutchen, a trustee of the First Baptist church, offers $100 for the box and if others follow this liberal contribution to a cause which is acknowledged to be a good one, the fund will exceed the expectations of the promoters.

Many voluntary offers have been received from artists of the first class for the entertainment and the committee, of which Mr. Kenney is the head will soon announce the program. Meantime it is announced that the box office will be open tomorrow for the sale of tickets for the benefit and those coming early will be able to secure the best seats.

This afternoon at 2 o'clock Bishop McFaul met with the insurance adjusters together with several of the sisters and friends of the bereft organization, the outcome of which will determine the exact amount the order will receive on the policies held. Details of this meeting will be published tomorrow.

Since yesterday enough donations have been received at their headquarters by the sisters to show that the appeal printed in this newspaper on Saturday has been widely read and a hearty response has followed. Mother Superior Gabriel and the other sisters of Mount St. Mary's are grateful for everything that hos been done.

WOMEN'S MISSION SOCIETY HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the First M. Randolph; recording secretary, Miss Minnie Sharp; corresponding secretary, Mrs. C. E. Prior; treasurer, Miss Susie Jackson.

The society raised $115 during the year, a portion of which went toward continuing the Grace Todd scholarship in China and the balance for a Bible reader in India. Luncheon was served at noon. The Women's Home Missionary Society will hold its annual meeting this afternoon at the same place.

OPPOSED TO SITE

Education Board Hears Objections to Proposed Location of New School.

AGREE TO A CONFERENCE.

Henry De Forest and Horace G. Phillips Don't Want Building at Kensington and Prospect Avenues.

Henry DeForest and Horace G. Phillips, representing residents in the vicinity of Kensington and Prospect avenues, appeared before the Plainfield Board of Education at the regular monthly meeting last night, to protest against the erection of the proposed new school on Kensington avenue. The claim was made that the property owners almost to unit are opposed to the building of a school in that section on the ground that it would tend to lower values and prove objectionable in other ways.

Mr. DeForest acted as spokesman and informed the board, stating that the people he represented would be willing to buy the property secured for the site and reimburse the city for any expense it has incurred. The ground is in the midst of a fine residental district that includes many homes with carefully kept premises, the occupants of which would rather move than have a school near them. Mr. Phillips said that he lived directly across the street from the site and was absolutely opposed to the erection of the building.

Mr. Tyler, occupying the president's chair in the absence of Mr. Lovell, who is ill, replied that the board does not wish to injure anyone in locating the school buildings. The members would certainly be willing to place the school somewhere else, provided the site be convenient for the pupils in that part of the city and that the present property be disposed of without expense. Messrs. DeForest and Phillips declared they would appreciate a conference of both sides and this will be done. In the meantime, the school board will discuss the matter in executive session.

In the course of routine business, Superintendent Maxson gave a detailed report of his recent attendance at the convention of the National Association of School Superintendents held in Mobile, Ala. While there he enjoyed the privilege of going through Tuskegee Institute, founded by Booker T. Washington, and related some interesting facts in connection with it. The report was received and filed.

Dr. Maxson also stated there are now in the city schools about 663 pupils not vaccinated. Of this number the parents of about 100 do not believe in preventative unless actual danger exists, consequently refusing to have it done. There were over 1,000 unvaccinated pupils when the work was started.

The custodian's report showed that the fiscal year ending February 28, left a balance to the board's credit of $40,840.13. The tax collections for February were $2,003.40. Bills to the amount of $1,000 were ordered paid.

A paper full of interest on "The Psychological Plays of Ibsen," was presented by Miss Mabelle C. Phillips, before the Monday Afternoon Club at the meeting held yesterday in the Hartridge Auditorium. The plays discussed were Peter Gynt, Little Eyolf and the Master Builder. The paper was preceded by a general discussion of current novels.

ONE DYING, ONE DEAD; R.R. ACCIDENT VICTIMS

By the sudden backing up of a tool train of the Lehigh Valley Railroad near Port Reading last night, John Zuolinski, aged 40, of Perth Amboy and John Zaremba, same age, also of Perth Amboy, were so severely injured that Smith died within an hour and Zaramba is lying in a critical condition at Muhlenberg Hospital.

So far as can be learned the two men were repairing a car and were working underneath it when the engine of the tool train backed down the siding without warning, pinning both men under the wheels. A frenzied shout from bystanders told the engineer that something was wrong and the locomotive was brought to an abrupt stop.

When Zuolinski was lifted from underneath the car it was seen that he was seriously injured and a hurry call was sent in for the Plainfield ambulance. It was found necessary to remove both men to Muhlenberg where Zuolinski died unconscious an hour later.

PROPOSED ORDINANCE FOR LAWYER TO CITY

An amendment to an ordinance providing for the appointment and duties of a corporation counsel was offered by Councilman F. L. Holt, at the March meeting of the Common Council last night. As explained by him the changes simply provide that there shall be a counsel to the corporation and that he shall perform the duties specified in the ordinance. At the same time Mr. Holt offered a proposed ordinance repealing another ordinance on the same subject, but which in the opinion of the committee is useless, as it is fully covered in the first-named ordinance. Both ordinances were adopted on two readings and ordered advertised.

The eleven bonds of the local liquor dealers were presented by City Clerk MacMurray and ordered filed, according to the annual custom.

The Public Service Corporation, through Col. E. S. Hine, petitioned the Common Council for permission to install a "Y" at West Front street and Grant avennue; also to install a siding on Richmond street between Fifth and Seventh streets. Both matters were referred to the street committee, but no action was taken. The company began this morning the work of laying new tracks on West Front street from Grant avenue west, and it wants to install the "Y" at the corner of Grant avenue and West Front street, while this work is underway.

PICTURE EXHIBITION AT BRYANT SCHOOL

The exhibition of pictures at the Bryant School loaned by an art company, includes over two hundred beautiful prints in sepia carbon and color, showing the masterpieces of the world's famous painters, ancient and modern.

These pictures have been chosen to interest everyone and the disscriptive card on each subject, makes it possible to read the brief comments and enjoy the artist's thought without the use of a catalogue. The pictures are to be seen in the auditorium of the school on the afternoons and evenings of Thursday and Friday, March 9 and 10 at 2:30 and 7:45.

An entertainment by the pupils of the school will be given at each exhibition. Charles L. Lewis, director of music in the Plainfield public schools, will sing at both of the evening entertainments. All proceeds are to be used for schoolroom decoration.

GLOEKLER FIGHTS

The Common Council Refuses, However to Reconsider Its Action.

BIG PETITION PRESENTED.

W. L. Hetfield, His Counsel, Pleads for a Hearing But the City Fathers Remain Firm.

Determined efforts were made at the March meeting of the Common Council, last night, to have the members reconsider the liquor license application of Christian Gloekler which was refused a week ago but there were not even a sufficient number of votes to reconsider the application to say nothing of taking favorable action.

The matter came before the Council through a petition signed by seventy-five business men and others in the central part of the city, asking that the application be reconsidered, that Mr. Gloekler always conducted an orderly place and that he should, at least, be given an opportunity to dispose of his large stock of liquors and cigars. The petition intimated that Mr. Gloekler had not had fair treatment and it was urged that his applicaion be taken up again with that end in view.

Later in the evening, Mr. Montgomery moved for a recess, as everyone knew, to consider the matter. While the members were in the committee room, Walter L. Hetfield, counsel for Mr. Gloekler, was invited to state his case, which he did. The members remained in caucus nearly one hour and thirty minutes, and then declined to take any further action on the application.

After the meeting one councilman said that he considered Mr. Gloekler's application a dead issue, but he was not so sure, but that he could make another application, if he desired to do so. One or two members have expressed the opinion that they would like to give Mr. Gloekler a hearing, but among the nine members present last night there were not enough votes to bring this about. It was the feeling among the majority that once having refused to grant the license on the grounds that Mr. Gloekler had sold to minors, reconsideration and favorable action, would be inconsistent.

The possibility that the application might be considered, attracted a large number of people to the meeting, including many friends of the applicant. Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire was among those present for awhile.

Those who signed the petition asking for the reconsideration of Mr. Gloekler's application were:

Henry Liefke, Liefke & Laing, Levy Brothers, Endress Company, J. K. Roundy, J. A. Smith, Edward A. Laing, John Wirth, Thomas P. Kolb, Daley Brothers, A. E. Force & Co., J. J. Varley, Charles P. Sebring, Harry Werner, Frank Rowley, Schwed Brothers, M. & A. Tepper, A. W. Billian, Roth & Co., Hyman Adelberg, L. B. VanCamp, J. F. W. Bamberger, Henry Eggerding, Schreiner Brothers, B. Schleif, Peter F. Delgyer, J. R. Blair, G. O. Keller, William Feiring, Alfred Seidel, M. Kunzman, Jacob Fass, E. A. Marsh, J. Heidloff, L. Scheelein, Louis Kadish, W. F. Walters, John J. A. Batruny.

After the Council returned from its long recess, Mr. Wilson, chairman of the license committee, simply moved that the above petition be filed, indicating that no action would be taken.

WASH THAT ITCH AWAY.

But you need not leave home for these distant springs. Relief is right here in your own home town.

A simple wash of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol and other ingredients as compounded only in D. D. D. Prescription will bring instant relief to that terrible burning itch, and leave the skin as smooth and healthy as that of a child.

BASEBALL.

Spring trips are always productive of something new in baseball. They pulled a brand new one on the Brooklyns down in Knoxville, Tenn., last season. Manager Dahlen had sent his second team over to Knoxville to play the team of the University of Tennesssee. The game was played on ground surrounded on all sides by trees.

When the Brooklyn players walked on the grounds they got their first surprise in the shape of a third baseman wearing spectacles. He came in for bunts without showing the least bit of fear and besides stood up to the plate in front of the pitching of Nap Rucker and George Bell without quivering.

It was long about the seventh inning that the piece de resistance of the day was pulled. The man with the spectacles sent up a high fourfly down toward third base. McElveen, who was playing third, galloped over after the ball. It went among the trees, but "Humpty" got under it. The ball in coming down through the branches brought down a couple of leaves with it, but McElveen managed to grab and hold on to the ball.

Naturally the Brooklyn players believed the batsman had been retired. The batsman thought so, too, but when he started back to the bench the umpire signaled him back to take up his position at the plate again. George Bell was pitching at the time and he came running in at the umpire.

"Hey, he's out," said "Big George."

"No, he isn't out either," was the umpire's calm reply.

"Why isn't he out? That ball was caught!"

"The ball hit a branch of that tree and it wasn't a fair catch."

"Oh, very well," said Bell, as he walked back to the box; "but if it isn't an out it is a strike anyhow."

"It isn't a strike, either. That was an interferred ball and they don't count down here," shouted the umpire after the big twirler.

The ruling floored Bell. He yelled for Rucker to come out. When Nap appeared on the scene "Big George" handed him the ball and said: "Nap, you go ahead and pitch this game. Why, I don't understand the rules of the game. You pitch and I will get the rule book and tip you off as to what is coming off next."

GOLF.

Professional golfers will open their competitive season today at Palm Beach in the Florida open championship, a thirty-six hole medal play contest that dates back to 1900. Only players stationed within the Florida golf zones, of the east and west coasts as a rule ever take part, yet the list of winners is as brilliant as to quality as the roll of national open championship victors. In the early days George Low of Baltusrol but then of Dyker Meadow had Miami as a winter green and twice gained the Florida tittle. Gil Nicholls had a notable success in 1904, scoring 138 to the 139 of Walter J. Travis. Two years later Travis became the first American amateur to gain an open championship by scooping the title from the crack professionals.

Travis had a 65 on one round, which was within a stroke of the record before by Arthur H. Fenn, the Palm Beach professional. Every year since the winner has been a national open champion—Aleck Smith, Will Anderson twice and Fred McLeod, the titleholder. Aleck Smith is at Bellair, on the west coast, and may try for the record only held by George Low and Will Anderson of a "double event." Young Tom Anderson is so busy at St. Augustine since the death of Will that he may not be able to play; if he does, Tom, Jr., should be in the money.

Except the United North and South open tournament at Pinehurst on March 27, the only competitions now arranged for the professionals are the two important ones in the West, the national open at Chicago Golf Club on June 23-24, and the Western open at the Kent Country Club on June 27-29. No arrangements have been completed for the open championship of the Metropolitan Golf Association, but it is evident that the club that steps into the breach for a late July or August tournament should have a great success. There is no limit on entries and the field should be equal to the national in every aspect. In the early days of the M. G. A. open to hold it compelled self-sacrifice, for the club had to finance it, as the Fox Hills and Hollywood clubs did, but nothing need be sacrificed now save generosity. The M. G. A. now foots the bills including the $500 in prizes.

The M. G. A. open was an interesting and sportsmanlike affair at the Deal Golf and Country Club last year, and the Rumson Country Club, which needs a good tournament to let the public know how good its course is, might make a similar go of it this season. It is rather an inaccessible place for a tournament, however, that carries a gallery. The Shinnecock Hills Golf Club would score and add variety to its annual golf week by giving the M. G. A. open on the Tuesday and Wednesday before its three day invitation tournament, which always begins on a Thursday. After hiding its light under its own bushel for some years the Oakland Golf Club would give to outsiders an opportunity to look over the course by running off the M. G. A. open; St. Andrews, Fox Hills, the extended course of the Richmond County Country Club, Greenwich and many other links would be fine for the contest.

We WANT COMPETITION
of the Right Sort, Not the Following Kind!

A Mrs. S—— after selecting her outfit and learning the total cost from our plainly marked price tags, said she preferred to make comparisons elsewhere before ordering, to which we readily agreed, for it's a thing we always URGE!

On getting another store's prices where they were marked in private signs, she found ours were far less, and SAID so. The salesman promptly dropped to our figures—AND GOT THE ORDER.

Here, where there's but ONE PLAINLY MARKED PRICE ON EVERY ITEM, such an "accommodating" and sudden price drop would be impossible—here, when you read the price tag, you KNOW it's already at lowest point, for ALL prices are made and REMAIN on the SAME UNIFORMLY SMALL PROFIT BASIS. We don't HAVE to run a "leader" here and there for an hour, or a day, to catch trade, as ALL lines are equally good values EVERY day in the year!

All we want is HONEST competition that meet OUR plainly marked prices WITH prices you can READ!

54 CENTS A WORD WAS PEOPLE'S CONGRESS BILL.

Anybody who says talk is cheap is respectfully referred today to the Congressional Record. At the session just closed, the people of this country paid in salaries just fifty-four cents for every word uttered during Congressional debate by Senators and Representatives.

The Record approximates 4,500 pages of 1,500 words each, or 6,750,000 words of debate. A session of Congress is supposed to represent a year's work. Senators and Representatives draw salaries of $7,500 per annum and the total yearly payroll is $3,615,000.

A member who merely yelled: "I object!" could figure on drawing $1.08 for wear and tear on his throat.

THE FORUM.

Replies to Rev. Mr. Perrine.

Editor, The Daily Press:—

An individual signing himself S. A. Perrine states in your issue of February 27 why he thinks "Christian Science is in essence from Hinduism." His form of reasoning follows, but grossly misrepresents Christian Science teaching.

First, our critic says he "met a babu native gentlemen in the city of Bombay who stated that the essence of Hinduism is to cease to know and realize the difference between right and wrong, good and evil." Our critic then erroneously concludes that Christian Science teaches the same thing. Be it known to your readers that Mrs. Eddy never taught that there is no difference between good and evil and we challenge our critic to find any declaration in any of Mrs. Eddy's writings to the effect that "there is no difference between good and evil;" moreover the lives of those who follow the teachings of Christian Science do not bear out the charge for the reason that Christian Scientists differentiate between good and evil in their own lives by endeavoring to resist the belief in evil in every form. Christian Science does not make men cease to realize the difference between right and wrong, but draws the line between good and evil even more sharply than anything else, and determines the question whether wrong is real by considering its nature and origin.

Hinduism is rank pantheism. It teaches that man is a part of God even as a drop of water is a part of the ocean. Science teaches that man has his individuality as God's image and that the image is forever distinct from God. The statement "God is good" is, I hope the doctrine of all Christianity. It certainly is the teaching of Christ. Mrs. Eddy has stated on page 447 and 448 of Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, lines 31-2, "To assume that there are no claims of evil and yet to indulge them is a moral offense." So when our critic states in his second proposition that "both Hinduism and Christian Science make men to cease to know and realize that there is a difference between right and wrong, good and evil," he absolutely mis-states the teachings of Mrs. Eddy and Christian Science.

If as he says the young lady in charge of a Christian Science church stated that those high in authority in Christian Science would stand by what she said of Christian Science, I should say, that would depend a great upon what the young lady said. In this particular case the statement that "God is good," should be followed by the further explanation that evil is unreal, and, not of God, and therefore must not be practised or indulged in. Since evil is delusive and unreal, one would naturally turn from it having the true understanding of Good.

The further quotation from Pundita Ramabai and the gentlemen from India regarding the teachings of what they term Christian Science does not prove anything, since the critics in question cannot claim a thorough knowledge of Christian Science and have not demonstrated its principles and rules as set forth in the Christian Science text book. Their opinion of Christian Science is no more worthy of consideration than would be an opinion of mathematics by one who had not read a mathematical text book or demonstrated its rules. It may seem to the representatives of Hinduism that Christian Science is like their religion, and this is perhaps because they assume that the statement "God is all" which is made in Christian Science, might be diverted to read "All is God." It would not be proper Christian Science to state "All is God," but rather "All is infinite Mind and its infinite manifestations." Ibid, page 468, lines 8 and 9. Man and the universe are the creation of God, but God is not confined within what he creates, therefore Christian Science is not pantheistic.

Mrs. Eddy did not borrow any of the beliefs of Hinduism when she discovered Christian Science. She has said on page 126, lines 26-31 of Science and Health, "I have found nothing ancient or modern systems on which to found my own, except the teachings and demonstrations of our great Master and the lives of prophets and apostles. The Bible has been my only authority. I have had no other guide in "the straight and narrow way of Truth."

In closing let me commend to your readers the authorized text books of Christian Science rather than the book recommended by our critic. "For of thorns men do not gather figs, nor of a bramble bush gather they grapes." Luke 6: 44.

DRY CLEANING TALK

Number 2

WHAT IS DRY CLEANING?

Many people have erroneous ideas about what Dry Cleaning really is—believing that their clothes are actually cleaned dry—as if by magic method we pass our hands over the Garment and say "Presto!" It is clean.

Dry is a misnomer. "Chemical" cleaning would be a more intelligent name, but people might confuse "Chemical," thinking of acids, alkalies, etc., not used in Dry Cleaning.

The truth is we depend largely upon gasolene, naphtha, benzine—there's a difference—and other petroleum and coal tar products, for our cleansing bath instead of water as do the launderers.

The secret and successful operations in Dry Cleaning are learned only by hard experience and study, coupled with proper equipment. These are what enable us to do superior work.

We know our business thoroughly and are properly equipped in plant, collection and delivery.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS.

Not Very Neighborly.

The plan of North Plainfield borough to dump its sewage at the very doors of Bound Brook seems unneighborly and unfair and we do not wonder at the indignation which it has stirred up in the latter place. North Plainfield township is long and narrow and it joins Bridgewater, Warren and Piscataway at its western extremity, on the borders of Bound Brook. There is no reason why the present disposal beds used by Plainfield should not be used by the borough unless the ugly rumors are true that some one is interested in a real estate deal which might make the site of the present beds more valuable for another purpose.

As a matter of fact it will cost many thousands of dollars more to carry the sewer pipes through to Bound Brook than to put the plant nearer the borough. Yet the borough is making a desperate fight to prevent the State Board of Health from taking a hand in the matter, which it undoubtedly will if the bill now pending in the Senate is passed.

It has been the contention many times that these disposal plants were not objectionable, but we notice that every municipality that desires to establish such a plant is willing to pay the expense of getting it as far as possible from the town. The Bound Brook people say that there are a number of sites adapted to the purpose not far from North Plainfield and not so near Bound Brook. If this is true, and the evidence certainly indicates its truth, the North Plainfield authorities are unreasonable in adopting such extreme measures.

There are some who are mean enough to say that North Plainfield is only awaiting to get this sewer matter settled before making another move to get out of the county by an annexation law. If there can be found to be any truth in this rumor the location of the sewer beds so far in the centre of the county should be resisted to the last.—Unionist-Gazette, Somerville.

Want Sanitary Brook.

The borough Board of Health at the regular monthly meeting last night, appointed A. E. Kenney a committee of one to confer with A. E. Force, of the city board, relative to improving the sanitary condition of Green brook. The two will make a full investigation and report to their respective organizations for action. It was stated at the meeting that North Plainfield at the present time is entirely free from contagious disease.

STOPPING FEE SYSTEM PROFITABLE TO STATE

By abolishing the fee system and paying State officials fixed salaries for their services, New Jersey has already saved upwards of $400,000 in the administration of the Supreme Court clerk's office alone. By the time that Supreme Court Clerk William Riker, Jr., concludes his fifteen years of service in that office, November 2, 1912, the saving to the State, it is estimated, will have reached the handsome total of nearly $500,000.

Under the old fee system the Supreme Court clerk, like the clerk in chancery, secretary of State and some other officials, was entitled to take all the money coming into his office, less so much as he expended for its operating expenses. Under this system the State received no revenue from the office, although its net profits may have been anywhere from $20,000 to $30,000 a year, or even more.

During the first year that the salary system was in effect under Mr. Riker, the net profits of the office amounted to $20,289. Last year they were $45,726. The gross receipts of his first year were $43,903 and these increased $72,020. The expenses of running the office were $23,613 the first year of Mr. Riker's administration, and $26,293 last year. The percentage of expenses to gross receipts has decreased from .537 per cent. the first year to .365 last year.

Father of Twenty-five.

Blessed at the age of sixty-six years by the birth of his twenty-fifth child, Samuel W. Dansbury, Trenton's oldest expressman, insists that he is still a young man and that babies never prove a burden, no matter how many of them there may be. Dansbury has been twice married. Eleven of his children are living. Four of them are blind, an affliction inherited from a generation twice removed. One of the deceased children was scalded to death at the age of six years, and another about as old died as the result of being run down by an automobile. Dansbury's father was killed by the explosion of a cannon in the celebration of the election of President Pierce.

LITERARY.

Lippincott's Magazine seems determined to outdo itself during 1911 for the general excellence of its contents. Following the wholly admirable issues for January and February, with their complete novels by Zona Gale and George Randolph Chester, comes the March number, no whit behind. The complete novel is "The Little Brown Shoe," by Ella Middleton Tybout, who has "The Smuggler," "The Wife of the Secretary of State," and other well liked books to her credit. The plot is an unusual one, with a cleverly sustained mystery, the clue to which is "the little brown shoe." The scenes are laid in a Southern mountain region, some of the leading characters being society folk, others humble mountaineers.

The Red Book Magazine for March is a really notable issue of this best of all fiction magazines, containing, as it does, stories by Alfred Henry Lewis, Richard Washburn Child, Seumas Mac Manus, Mary Heaton Vorse, Jack London, Samuel Hopkins Adams, Frances A. Ludwig and George Hibbard.

MAY HAVE COMMISSION RULE IN ATLANTIC CITY.

Political leaders in Atlantic City are said to favor a commission plan of government proposition. Senator Edge has promised to introduce a bill and work for its passage. Such a measure is being drafted and Clinton Rogers Woodruff and E. Spencer Miller, of Philadelphia, it is said, have been called in as experts on framing commission government bills.

The bill will give all the cities of the State a chance to adopt commission government. The form of government is about the same for the different classes of cities, but the range of salaries will differ. Atlantic City will be in the cities of the third class.

STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Builders have plans out for the construction of more houses than have ever been known in Gloucester in one season.

Millville Elks are forming a marching club to participate in the parade of the grand lodge reunion at Atlantic City in July.

Rev. Lawrenson Correll, of Woodstown, has been called to the Wenonah M. E. church, subject to the approval of conference.

A broom factory is being erected on the Rosenhayn turnpike, near Millville, and farmers of that section will raise considerable broom corn the coming summer.

Falling down stairs, Stephen Cusak, forty-two years old, of 1118 Van Hook street, Camden, sustained a fracture of the skull and was taken to Cooper Hospital Sunday.

One of the interesting features of the service at the First M. E. church, Millville, Sunday evening, was the singing of Sankey's famous hymn, "The Ninety and Nine," by ninety-nine men.

Since the Woodbury Lodge of Moose has been taking in new members by the score, the 500 mark having been reached last week, other organizations of that city have taken a hustle.

A public hearing upon the pending local option bill will be given in the Ocean County Courthouse, Toms River, next Saturday, at which Senator Low and Assemblyman Newman will be present to hear the views of the people on both sides.

During a quarrel at Fourth and Cherry streets, Camden, Sunday, Samuel Savanna, twenty-nine years old, of 826 Spruce street, was stabbed in the arm and Lewis Seventi, thirty years old, of 1912 South Fourth street, was cut across the head with a blackjack. The men's injuries were dressed at Cooper Hospital.

Hans Somer, the Lakewood boy, who disappeared from his home Sunday week, causing searching parties to beat the woods for several days around his home, using bloodhounds to pick up his trail, was found Sunday by the Children's Aid Society of New York. He was penniless and had been walking the streets for hours. He said he had left home because he did not like the country.

Because of numerous accidents recently on avenues of Atlantic City, in which several children were run down by automobiles and other vehicles, stringent orders have been issued by Chief of Police Woodruff to the police to arrest all children found playing baseball and roller-skating in the streets. The first arrest in the crusade was made Sunday, when George Mitchell, eighteen years old, was caught playing baseball on Arctic avenue.

George Husted, president of the Seashore and Husted Express companies, of Atlantic City, was directing workmen on the fifth floor of his own warehouse, at 9 Mississippi avenue, Sunday, when a box fell from the top of a pile of freight. Mr. Husted stepped aside into the elevator shaft and fell fifty feet to the first floor. Fortunately a load of corn at the bottom of the shaft softened the fall to some extent, but as Husted struck his head on the side of the shaft he was injured so that it was necessary to take him to the City Hospital. It was at first thought that his skull was fractured, but the doctors are now agreed that there is no crack in the bone and no blood clot.

NURSE DISCOVERS FIRE AT MONTCLAIR HOSPITAL.

Caused, it is thought, from an overheated furnace, fire did about $1,200 damage to the nurses' home of the St. Vincent's Babies Home and Nursery in Washington street, Montclair, late Sunday afternoon.

The fire was discovered by a nurse who was sleeping in the building at the time. She smelled the smoke and gave the alarm. Members of Hose Company No. 3, a short distance away, answered the call. The flames were confined to the cellar and the first floor.

"Farmerettes" Start In.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont opened her first class in farming for girls Sunday. Twenty young women "farmerettes," she calls them, garbed in blue bloomers, broad-brimmed hats and boys' shoes, are comfortably ensconced today in the farmhouse at Brockholt, Mrs. Belmont's 1,000-acre estate on Long Island. The young women were selected from 600 applicants from New York factories. They will first be instructed thoroughly in household duties upon a farm, and with the arrival of "planting time" in the spring will take up plowing, planting and poultry raising. Not a man will be on the premises, even to chop wood or tend the horses. The girls will receive $4 a week during their two months' course of instruction, and thereafter may purchase small farms from their benefactress, if they wish to do so, upon agreement to till the soil themselves.

The Democratic members of the Committee on Ways and Means yesterday selected the majority representatives on the Committee on Rules, which will keep legislation moving in the House of Representatives.

A Desperate Game

By JOHN K. LEYS,

Author of "The Lindsays," "The Lawyer's Secret," "The Black Terror," Etc.

Copyright, 1905, by John K. Leys.

"Don't say a thing of that kind again!" she cried, speaking rapidly, her fingers twisting and twisting round each other, her cheeks blazing. "Don't provoke me too far, or you may find that with all your cunning you have overreached yourself!"

Sir Rufus looked at her admiringly.

"I like your pluck," he said. "And I like your pluck in coming here all by yourself."

"I am tired now, and it is very late," said Eva, interrupting him. "I think I shall go upstairs."

"Certainly," said Sir Rufus, rising to make way for her. "But I hope that you now recognize that our marriage must be celebrated as soon as possible."

"I don't see that at all. I shall take some time to think it over. I shall leave for Castle Dare tomorrow."

"Pardon me, but if I were in your place I should not be too sure of my reception there unless you go as my wife. I doubt whether Lady Roscommon could or would receive you until after the ceremony. Then she might explain that we had eloped together and so avoid the awkward questions that would be asked on all sides."

The girl for the first time saw the madness of the thing she had done. She turned red and was only able to stammer out something about writing to her mother.

"I should think that a very good and sensible thing to do," said the baronet gravely. "Write and tell her everything—where you are, why you came here, what you have learned since you came and all about it. That will be much the best thing to do."

Certainly it sounded like good and disinterested advice. It was what any man or woman of sense would have recommended. But the mere fact that it came from Sir Rufus Deverll was for Eva a ground for suspicion. She paused a moment and then felt sure that if she did write to her mother at that juncture Lady Roscommon would lose no time in joining her and that she would not leave her till she saw her Lady Deverll.

"I will see about it tomorrow," said the girl wearily, as she crept slowly in the direction of the door.

"Pardon me—there is one thing we ought to settle first. I suppose you will give up masquerading as a servant?"

She thought for a moment, and it struck her that if it was awkward to be living in Sir Rufus' house in the capacity of a parlor maid it would be a thousand times more awkward to make a change. And if the one situation was compromising the other would be ten times more so.

"Thank you, I think it would be better to make no change," she said. "And I hope you will keep my secret."

"For the present I will, and"— he paused, hesitating, then went on. "I will tell the housekeeper that I don't care to have you about in the dining room, and that her husband had better bring in the meals, and so on."

"Thank you," said Eva. It was the only good or kind action of his that she could remember in after years.

Eva had scarcely crept beneath the bedclothes than she fell into a deep, dreamless slumber. She slept late and woke with a fixed and definite purpose in her mind. She would not write to Lady Roscommon, as she had half intended doing the night before. To do that would be only to precipitate the hateful marriage. She would write to Mr. Foscombe. He was a lawyer, and had even got her to promise that she would apply to him if ever she were to find herself in a situation of distress or difficulty. Surely if ever a poor girl was in trouble it was she! Yes, she would write to him and say that she was in a difficult and distressing position and beg him to come and advise her.

In the afternoon she wrote her letter, so as to be ready for the postman when he called for the letter bag. She addressed it to the lawyer's office, and thus it was that Guy Lorimer found, to his amazement, that his lost sweetheart was in correspondence with the man he had trusted and confided in from the beginning.

CHAPTER XXVII.

MR. FOSCOMBE'S OFFER.

Arthur Foscombe, though still a young man, was a man of great experience in the ways of the world, and he had that aptitude for affairs, that alertness and resource in moments of difficulty, that only residence in a great city can teach. More than once in his life he had been in what is called a tight place, but never in so tight a place as he was in during those seconds when he assured Guy Lorimer that the letter he knew had been written by Eva was not in her handwriting.

For a moment or two, indeed, he thought the game was up, but his ingenuity and audacity came to his aid. He saw by the set of Guy's mouth that no excuses or talk about professional honor would be of any use. The only possible way of avoiding detection was to bolt at once, and, without pausing to consider whether this line of action could in the long run avail him aught,

LOUIS KADESH

tunity," he took the way that his quick cunning pointed out to him. Once in a hansom, he pulled out Eva's letter and began to read it.

He was considerably surprised to see the address at the top. Ravenscrag, which he knew to be Sir Rufus' country place, and he was still more surprised when he learned the circumstances under which the daughter of Lord Roscommon had gone to the castle. As he read on his admiration of the girl's courage and cleverness increased till, when he came to the end and understood that she was appealing to him for help in the trap in which she found herself caught, he struck his fist on his knee and swore that she should have it.

He felt certain that if he could, by hook or by crook, set Eva free of the tie that bound her to Sir Rufus she would not refuse to marry him. In less than five minutes he had mastered the route to Ravenscrag, and he reached there about dusk. Sir Rufus was not at home. He was dining with a neighboring squire, a rare event with him. Foscombe was shown into the dining room, and Jorrocks said that he would ask his wife to get ready a dinner of some kind as soon as possible.

"You are very good," said Foscombe, "and I shall be glad of anything there may be to give me, for I am very hungry. I ought to have telegraphed to say that I was coming."

The butler went away to give directions to his wife, and a few minutes later Eva came into the room.

Foscombe sprang to his feet and held out both his hands, and the girl seized them eagerly.

"It is so very, very kind of you to come so far, and at once!" she exclaimed, the tears of gratitude standing in her eyes.

"I was only too glad to come! It is the greatest pleasure to think that I can do anything for you. But first let me say that I don't know how to express my admiration for your pluck. And I understand from your letter that you have succeeded."

"Yes," said the girl, with a sigh, "and I am often tempted to wish that I had not. But my business at present is to lay the cloth for your dinner. When I bring in the dinner I will stay in the room to wait on you, and we shall have time for a little talk then."

"Oh, we can't talk like that!" said Foscombe impatiently. "Try to think of a better plan."

"Sir Rufus won't be home till near 11," said Eva after a pause. "Say that you will sit here after dinner, but about half past 9 go into the library. I will show you the room. If Jorrocks comes in you can say that you came for a book. I have to wait on Sir Rufus at meals. I can easily go off to bed at half past 9, and I will come and see you then in the library. There is a fire there, and we shall not need alight."

"That will do splendidly," said the lawyer.

At the hour Eva had named he went to the library and stirred the fire into a blaze. Before he had waited five minutes she came in. He seated her in a chair at the hearth and himself took one near her.

MISS FLEMING WINS IN TENNIS TOURNEY

Spirited lawn tennis play brought eight of the women experts up to the round before the semi-finals of the fifth national indoor championship tournament on the courts of the 7th Regiment Armory, New York, yesterday. In narrowing the field of twenty-five aspirants, Miss Barbara Fleming, of the Plainfield Country Club, placed on record the one reversal of form by her defeat of Miss Elizabeth C. Bunch, a former Hudson River champion, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2.

Throughout the twenty-eight games of the match, Miss Fleming, who is a protege of Mrs. S. F. Weaver, worked her shots in a way that baffled Miss Bunch, despite the fact that the latter was on her game.

SUPPLY CONTRACTS MADE BY THE CITY

Prior to the March meeting of the Common Council, last night under a suspension of the regular order of business, bids were received from the Watchung Stone Company, J. Y. Wilson and N. B. Smalley & Co., for furnishing crushed stone; J. W. Manhattan for furnishing crosswalks and culverts; also for coal, hay, straw and oats for the fire department houses. The Watchung Stone Company also submitted bids for culverts and crosswalks, and it being the lowest, was awarded to that concern. The combined bid of the Watchung Stone company, J. Y. Wilson and N. B. Smalley & Co., for crushed stone was also accepted.

The bids for coal, hay, straw and oats were not awarded last night. They are as follows:

HEARD GLEE CLUB

Fourth Annual Recital of Y.W. C. A. Singers at the Y.M.C.A. Auditorium.

FOR MT. ST. MARY COLLEGE.

Timothy McMahon Freely Gives Services of His Best Vaudeville Headliners for the Performance.

Undoubtedly the fourth annual concert of the Y. W. C. A. Glee Club given at the Y. M. C. A., last night, under the direction of S. Frederick Smith, organist and choirmaster of Grace church, was the most notable achievment of this ambitious organization, and the large audience present greatly enjoyed the exceptionally fine program. Not only did the glee club sing well, but the assisting artists afforded music lovers a rare treat. They were Mrs. Edward Caldwell Moore, of Boston, pianist, and Bart Wirtz, of the Peabody Institute Baltimore, 'cellist. Joseph McIntyre was the accompanist for the assisting artists and Miss Helen Brown the club accompanist.

The club presented eight numbers in all and the women showed a marked improvement over their work of past seasons. There was pleasing harmony in every selection, which was of light character, and the rendition was such as to call forth hearty applause. The selections were as follows:

Voices of the Woods, Wanderer's Night Song, Rubenstein-Lyness; To the Dance, Denza; Boat Song, Abt; Serenade, Schubert; Snow Flakes, Cowen-Lyness; What the Chimney Sang, Griswold; Doan ye Cry, Nol.

The work of the assisting artists was of a very high order. Mrs. Moore, who is a sister of Mrs. H. L. DeForest, of this city, has appeared here before and her selections last night, as well as the perfect execution, delighted everyone. Her first two numbers were Prelude and Ballade in A Flat, by Chopin and they charmed the audience.

Mrs. Moore's concluding numbers were Gavotte, Gluck-Brahms; Nocturne for the left hand, Scriabine and La Campanella, Paganini-Liszt, in which the artist displayed unusual talent as a pianist. Especially noteworthy was the second number for the left hand. This was truly a wonderful rendition.

Mr. Wirtz, who is not so well-known here, made many friends by his fine work. His executions of difficult numbers was perfect throughout, the selections being of a sort that appealed strongly to the audience. The work of Joseph McIntyre was of the usual high order and greatly pleased the audience.

The first three numbers by Mr. Wirtz were Larghetto, Mozart; Traumerei, Schuman and Gavotte, Padre Martine, and his last numbers were Kol Nidrei, Max Bruch, an "Elegy," and Tarantella, Squire. The assisting artists, as well as every member of the glee club were generously remembered with flowers at the close of the concert.

The members of the glee club are as follows.

The Misses Clara Allen, Alice Bell, Nadene Ball, E. J. Calver, Emily Corlell, Katherine Ditmar, Margaret Falkinberg, Elva M. Force, Sarah Head, Paula Hansen, Nellie Lake, Harriet Mattison, Emma Ryno, Myra Stebbins, Ada Stark, Justina Smith, Eva Southard, Florence Scriven, Mabel Trenbath, Wilhelmina Vroom, Annie Whitehouse; Mrs. Alfred Seidel and Mrs. J. H. Cubberly.

YOUNG WOMEN SEE ELLIS ISLAND SIGHTS

Members of the Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church to the number of about twenty-five, accompanied by Rev. J. Y. Broek, the pastor, visited Ellis Island yesterday. They made a tour of inspection, under the direction of Miss Matthews, a missionary located there, of the landing place for immigrants. All were much interested in what they saw, particularly in the arrival of hundreds of future citizens.

Miss Matthews personally conducted the party about the place showing and explaining the important details of the great work in handling the thousands of newly arrived foreigners. The trip proved instructive, giving the members of the band a clearer insight into important home mission work.

REAPPORTIONMENT OF ASSEMBLYMEN

Based on the certified census returns filed in the Secretary of State's office yesterday, Assemblyman James introduced a bill providing for a reapportionment of members of Assembly to the 21 counties of the State in proportion to the present population. Under the reapportionment scheme, Essex, Hudson and Bergen will gain one Assemblyman each. Cumberland, Burlington and Monmouth will lose one. The reapportionment will not affect the total membership of the House which is limited, under the constitution to 50.

The James Bill fixes the apportionment of Assemblymen by counties as follows: Atlantic, 1; Bergen, 3; Burlington, 1; Camden, 3; Cape May, 1; Cumberland, 1; Essex, 12; Gloucester, 1; Hudson, 13; Hunterdon, 1; Mercer, 3; Middlesex, 3; Monmouth, 2; Morris, 2; Ocean, 1; Passaic, 5; Salem, 1; Somerset, 1; Sussex, 1; Union, 3; Warren, 1.

BRODHEAD OBJECTS TO SAVE EXPENSES

When Assemblyman Ford's bill to give an eight hour day for employes and inmates of the State penal institutions was brought up for third reading in the Asembly at Trenton yesterday the measure was opposed by Assemblyman Calvin E. Brodhead, of Plainfield, as a member of the appropriations committee. Mr. Brodhead thought the bill a bad one at this time when the object is to practice economy in State expenditures. At the State Prison at Trenton, Mr. Brodhead asserted, there would be an increase in expenses of $40,000 by the measure and a proportionate advance in the other penal institutions. When the objection was stated, Mr. Ford asked that the bill be held over as he was not ready to refute the assertions. He did not want to risk a vote on the measure at that ime.

UNION COUNTY [illegible] RALLY AT WESTFIELD.

A rally meeting of the Union County C. E. Union will be held in the Westfield Congregational church on Friday evening, at 8 o'clock. It is expected that the Plainfield societies will be well represented. S. D. Riddle, superintendent of the fresh air department of the State C. E. Union and Samuel MacIlvray, who had charge of the fresh air camp at Netherwood last season, will be the speakers. The topic for discussion on Friday evening will be "Plans for the Coming Season."

Miss Ruth Waldorf, daughter of Mrs. Alice Waldorf, of Crescent avenue, is critically ill with a combined attack of typhoid fever, pneumonia and Bright's disease. Dr. P. J. Zeglio and consulting physicians are in charge and three trained nurses have been in constant attendance. Her death was momentarily expected the past two nights but she was somewhat better today.

Funeral of Mrs. S. M. Giles.

The funeral service of Mrs. Samuel M. Giles was held yesterday afternoon at the late home on West Front street, and was largely attended by relatives and friends. Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, of which Mrs. Giles was a member, officiated. The burial was in Hillside cemetery.

LOCAL KENNEL CLUB BENCH SHOW, JUNE 17

The Plainfield Kennel Club will hold its third annual bench show at the horse show grounds, Saturday, June 17. At the meeting of the board of governors this week several new members were elected and plans for the show were discussed. It was decided to have a judging of local dogs which have never been exhibited. As there are many valuable dogs in this city and vicinity this should prove a strong class.

This arrangement will obviate the trouble heretofore experienced whereby local exhibitors were obliged to compete against the best dogs in the country. All of the old exhibitors have promised to return, together with many new ones.

HE DARE NOT DO HIS OWN PLUMBING

Frank Scaraffo, an Italian, living in the West End, who was yesterday accused of violating a health ordinance, was arraigned this morning before Judge William G. DeMeza in the City court, charged with violating three sections of the plumbing regulations. He pleaded guilty to the charges, but said he was absolutely ignorant of the requirements.

Judge DeMeza explained the ordinances relating to plumbing contracts and why it was wrong for a mason to usurp the privileges of a plumber and finally suspended sentence. Scaraffo promised to have the plumbing torn out and replaced by a duly licensed mechanic.

BLAZE IN GARAGE CAUSES $150 DAMAGE

An exposed can of gasolene left on a work bench at the garage of Nischwitz and Bellis at Watchung avenue and Race street, caught fire in some unknown way at 8:30 last night, causing an explosion. One end of the building was set ablaze and for a short time serious consequences were threatened. A large number of automobiles were in the place and the first efforts of the proprietors and employees were devoted to getting them to a place of safety. It was accomplished with only the hood of one car being slightly scorched.

The borough fire department responded and did excellent work in putting out the flames. One tank of the chemical engine was used. Mr. Bellis had put a garden hose at work and it kept the fire confined to the original corner. The work bench, a door and the adjacent casing were burned. The damage is placed at $150, covered by insurance.

Raymond Smith, a member of the fire department, was severely burned about the hands while at work. He attempted to carry out a can of balzing machine oil. He was given first aid treatment at headquarters.

Chief McCullough conducted an investigation but was unable to learn how the gasolene caught fire. It had been used to clean auto parts and was left open tmeporarily. The men were all in the centre part of the building and no exposed lights were about.

Mr. Pope Surprised.

Charles B. Pope, of Summit avenue, was given a surprise party by about twenty friends at his home last night. Prize euchre was a feature of the affair and four tables were used in the play. The awards were made as follows: Women's first, Mrs. F. C. Burner; second, Mrs. C. B. Pope, men's Mrs. J. H. Snyder, playing on the men's side; second, L. B. Townley. Music and refreshments were enjoyed in conclusion. The affair was arranged by Mrs. F. C. Burner and Mrs. B. R. Waldron.

Address all communications to Manager William Perry, 48 Harrison avenue, North Plainfield.

ANNOUNCE TALENT

Maggie Kline, Andrew Mack, and Ross and Fenton to Appear at Big Benefit.

EXCEPTIONAL PERFORMANCE.

Mrs. Edward Caldwell Moore, Bart Wirts, Miss Helen Brown and Joseph McIntyre Assisting Artists.

That the entertainment for the benefit of Mount St. Mary College will be one of the best given here in a long time is assured from the galaxy of first class artists who through the agency of Timothy McMahon, of New York, who is a friend of the institution, have been secured. Such headliners as Andrew Mack, Maggie Cline, Charles J. Ross and Mabel Fenton have volunteered and the affair will be worth a full attendance.

The work of securing Andrew Mack and Miss Cline was done by Mr. McMahon because of the feeling of sympathy he has for the sufferers by the recent calamity. Mr. McMahon has used his best endeavors to supply a bill which will meet with the approval of all classes. Andrew Mack's reputation is second to none as a tenor singer of Irish ballads. He has appeared in Plainfield and always to crowded houses. Maggie Cline, she of the "smile that lasts," is too well known to require comment here. Charles J. Ross, Mabel Fenton and Hill and Sylvania are headliners in one of the big circuits and are leaders in their specialties.

Mlle. Mathilde Bruguiere, whose repertoire includes Wagnerian and other roles, has consented to sing, but has not yet made known the selection she will render. The whole entertainment will be above the average and will undoubtedly call out a great gathering of people.

T. D. Harrington will be in charge of the box office and the prices of seats will range from $2 down to 50 cents. The box office at the Plainfield theatre, where the entertainment is to be held on March 17, is now open. The other concert which it was thought to have arranged for the 15th has been abandoned.

ARTHUR SPICER WEDS MISS LINDA MORRISON

Miss Linda V. Morrison, daughter of Mrs. George D. Morrison, of 113 Plainfield avenue, and Arthur J. Spicer, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Spicer, of 125 West Fifth street, were married at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's mother. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Edwin Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, in the presence of the families of the bride and groom and a few intimate friends.

The bride wore a handsome white embroidered gown and carried a bouquet of lillies of the valley and the bridesmaid, Miss Josephine Morrison, a sister of the bride, was gowned in white embroidery over pink silk and she carried pink carnations. The best man was George Morrison, a brother of the bride.

As the bridal party entered the parlor, the Lohengrin wedding march was played on the piano by Miss Mabel A. Maxson, who also rendered an attractive program of music during the evening. During the congratulations of the friends, a letter of hearty congratulations was received from the Potter Printing Press Works signed by the members of the firm and others in the office, where Mr. Spicer has held a position of trust for many years.

Among the valued gifts were gold, cut-glass and silver; also a check from the Potter Printing Press Works. A wedding supper was served during the reception by Demolli, the caterer, after which Mr. and Mrs. Spicer left for a wedding trip to Washington, Richmond and neighboring cities. On their return they will reside in their new home on West Front street.

Dance at Truell Hall.

Under the auspices of the basketball team of the Plainfield High School, a dance will be held at Truell Hall, Saturday night. The affair will be given under the following patronage: Mr. and Mrs. R. H. McCready, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Petit, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Woolley, Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Howe, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Titsworth, Mr. and Mrs. Henry R. Hubbard.

At the reuglar prayer meeting in Grace M. E. church this evening, Rev. Orro J. Shoop, the pastor, will conduct the meeting. The topic will be "A Lenten Meditation of the Human Element in Redemption."

ADMITS HIS GUILT TO ANOTHER CHARGE

John Consoli, who has had several days in which to think over the plea entered by him when arraigned on charges of permitting gambling in his store on Somerset street, changed the original plea this morning, not guilty, to one of guilty. Judge DeMeza deferred sentencing Consoli for two weeks.

This makes two charges upon which Consoli has pleaded guilty. He acknowledged on Monday that he was guilty of breaking the Sunday closing ordinances and the sentence in that conviction was deferred for two weeks. This means that he will have to stand for two sentences two weeks hence for separate violations of the city ordinances.

RESERVES DECISION ON RETRIAL OF CASE

Owing to the fact that Judge William Newcorn will attend the annual convention of the A. O. U. W., at Atlantic City tomorrow a District court session was held this morning.

Through the efforts of Counsellor J. Henry Crane, attorney for Asa Collier, the case of Collier against DeBrigard on a claim for $73 for wages and money loaned, was reopened by order of the Supreme court. Harry C. Runyon, representing Arthur DeBrigard, and Mr. Crane again went over the case and brought out evidence similar in character to that of the first trial, held on December 2, 1909.

Judge Newcorn reserved decision.

HEAD SPLIT OPEN BY FALL FROM POLE

Fred Withers, aged thirty-four years, a lineman employed by the New York Telephone Company, was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital at noon today suffering from serious injuries received in an accident at Fanwood shortly after 10 o'clock.

Withers was up a pole aiding men below to raise a heavy cross arm. It slipped from its fastening and fell on the lineman, causing him to lose his balance and fall. He dropped headforemost to the ground a distance of twenty-five feet. His head was split open by coming in contact with a curb and he may have received possible internal injuries.

He was brought to the local exchange where Dr. Dundon gave first treatment, afterwards taking him to the hospital. Withers came here from Newburgh, N. Y., last week and boarded on Park avenue.

SENATOR'S CONDITION IS MUCH IMPROVED.

United States Senator James E. Martine, who has been detained at home with a relapse of his ear trouble, is greatly improved today and it is thought that he will be out again within a short time. The deafness has almost disappeared, the recent operation by Dr. H. V. Hubbard having afforded the much desired relief.

Mr. Martine had a comfortable night and awoke this morning feeling rested and more like himself. He is now able to be about his room and anticipates an early and complete recovery.

ANOTHER BUILDING FOR NORTH AVENUE

David T. Kenney, owner of the old structure on North avenue, now occupied by the Postal Telegraph Company, E. H. Cleveley's restaurant and Harry Lister, is planning to make extensive improvements in the property at an early date. There is a total frontage there of 72 feet.

The new building will be constructed along the same style of architecture as Mr. Kenney's other structure known as the Smalley building, with buff brick front and sides. A feature in construction will be a court, sixteen feet wide running through the centre from North avenue where provision will be made for three stores with offices above fronting on the court and on North avenue. The new building will be three stories and will have a depth of about 80 feet.

MOVING PICTURES OF CRIME SCENES BARRED

The Senate at Trenton yesterday passed a bill which will practically result in a censorship for moving picture places. The bill (Senate 143) prohibits the exhibition of moving pictures that reproduces crimes against the State and federal law. When this bill was being considered Senator Osborne, of Essex county, made an impassioned plea in behalf of the youth of the land. "Why should these places" he said, "produce for their subjects highway robberies and crimes of all kinds; why should they go down into the depths of degradation to get a few nickles out of the pockets of the children of the land?"

Senator Bradley declared that these places ought to teach a moral lesson, and Senator Edge, in supporting the bill, declared with emphasis, that he wanted the amusements kept of a clean type. The bill was passed without objection.

TO PREVENT PUBLIC FROM BEING CHEATED

Senator Prince of Passaic, called up his bill in the State Senate at Trenton yesterday, to establish a uniform system of weights and measures. Numerous amendments were proposed and adopted after being explained by Mr. Prince. Among other things these amendments defined size of a bushel of oats to be 32 pounds; a barrel of cranberries to be 100 quarts, and 32 quarts of cranberries for a bushel; and specifically defining the size of the measures tnd vaious packages.

It also provides for a proper force for the carrying out of the provisions of the bill, designating the persons, naming their salaries and requiring that they shall pass the civil service examination. The bill is a comprehensive measure.

MISSION BAND TO GIVE RESCUE OF PRINCESS WINSOME.

The Sunshine Mission Band of the Crescent Avenue church will give a fairy play in the chapel of the church edifice on Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock and again at 8:15 at night. The scene opens in an orchard where the witch and ogre are plotting trouble for the princess and her brother. The witch hews a charm to turn him into a dog, but can't change the princess because she is guarded by fairy spell. A fierce frog comes in dragging the two children into the ogre's tower. The poor king and queen are much distressed till a brave knight comes to their help and rescues the princess through the aid of Titania and her flower fairies. The mission band hopes that all the children and grown-ups, too, who like fairy stories will come. The proceeds are to go to the support of two little famine orphans in India, a mission station in Canton, China, and a school in Tripoli, Syria. There will be candy for sale.

Conductor Orlick and Frank Blumberg Held in $500 Bonds as Witnesses—Charge is Manslaughter.

As a result of being struck by a main line trolley car at 1 o'clock this morning Frank Wood, 59 years old, of 459 West Grove street, Westfield, lies dead at Cole's undertaking rooms, where an autopsy will be held at 4 o'clock this afternoon to determine the exact cause of death. Richard Lewis, motorman of the car that struck Wood is held without bail to await the action of the grand jury. He is charged with manslaughter. Leo B. Orlick, of 229 Prescott place, conductor, and Frank Blumberg, of Westfield, a companion of the man who was killed, are held in $500 bonds each as material witnesses of the accident.

According to the reports furnished by the police, Wood and Blumberg were on their way to Westfield from Somerville, where they had gone to deliver a load of shoes and leather findings for their employer, Daniel Silverstein, of Westfield. The wagon was empty and the team of horses which were young and valued at $800 were skittish. As the car approached DeKalb avenue Motorman Lewis saw the team ahead of him and at the moment, so he says, there was ample room for the car to pass without striking either the horses or the driver. However, just as the car arrived opposite the animals they gave a sudden jump to the side nearest the track pushing Wood up against the front part of the trolley which struck him with enough force to throw him ten feet away.

The car was brought to a stop and the trolley crew assisted by several residents of the neighborhood who had been awakened by the crash went to the assistance of the fallen man. It was seen at a glance that Wood was badly hurt and Patrolman O'Keefe, who was on duty at the spot called up headquarters and Dr. C. F. Lufburrow was called. He pronounced Wood dead. There was an abrasion of the right eye and his left arm was broken, but only an autopsy will determine the exact cause of death.

Neither Lewis nor Conductor Orlick can give clear statements of just how the accident occurred, but the horse jumping theory is believed to be the correct one.

When the car struck the outfit the team broke away from the wagon and ran a distance of 150 feet before a tree in the road brought them to a sudden standstill. Neither animal was injured.

Among those who helped to catch the team and rehamess them to the wagon were Anthony McDonough, Harry Pound and Henry Overland. On instruction from Chief Kiely given through Captain Chris Frederickson Patrolman O'Keefe took into custody the mortorman and conductor as well as Blumberg who was Wood's companion, and all three were brought to police headquarters, where the hearing was held this morning.

Assistant Prosecutor Walter Hetfield, Jr., representing the State, asked Judge DeMeza to fix bail in the cases of Orlick and Blumberg. Joseph Whelan, claim agent for the Public Service Corporation, was the only representative of the company present to look after the interests of the accused motorman and the witnesses. He asked that the men be paroled in the custody of the company without bail. This proceedure was strenuously fought against by Mr. Hetfield and Mr. Whelan was given until 4 o'clock this afternoon to secure bail for the men.

It was alleged by an employee of the P. S. C. that both Wood and Blumberg were seen drinking from a bottle just outside the Dunellen limits and that the conclusion was drawn that both men were under the influence of liquor when the accident occurred. Blumberg was mum on this subject and only the autopsy will reveal whether the allegation is true.

Coroner E. W. Westcott heard the story of the accident from Chief Kiely this morning and immediately ordered the autopsy. It will depend upon the findings of Dr. Lufburrow and the coroner's assistant whether an inquest will be held.

When arraigned before Judge Atwater at Elizabeth this afternoon Lewis was admitted to bail in the sum of $2,000, the company for which he worked signing the bond.

Wood, the man who was killed, leaves a wife and five children, the latter nearly all adults. J. Henry Crane represented the family this morning at the hearing and will continue to act as counsel for Mrs. Wood and the children.

BURDENS LIFTED.

From Plainfield Backs — Relief Proved by Lapse of Time.

Backache is a heavy burden;
Nervousness wears one out;
Rheumatic pain; urinary ills;
All are kidney burdens—
Daily effects of kidney weakness.
No use to cure the symptoms,
Relief is but temporary if the cause remains.

Cure the kidneys and you cure the cause.

Relief comes quickly—comes to stay.

Doan's Kidney Pills help the kidneys.

Here's proof that you can verify.

A. K. Mattis, 127 West Fourth street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I gave Doan's Kidney Pills my endorsement five years ago after receiving a cure through their use and today I confirm all I then said in their praise. My cure has been permanent." (Statement given January 20, 1911.)

On Aug. 28, 1905, Mr. Mattis said: "I was troubled for years by a dull backache and pains in my head. I believe that my trouble was due in a great measure to a bad fall I had. Nothing seemed to help me and when I read of the good work Doan's Kidney Pills were doing in similar cases, I got a supply at Randolph's Drug Store. Their use drove away my aches and pains and my experience gave proof of their merits."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

WOULD BLOT OUT THE PARTY LABEL

It will cost a man $1,000 in cash and a year's imprisonment at hard labor to call himself a Democrat or a Republican if a "bill" introduced in the House by Assemblyman Hand becomes a law—which is doubtful. The Speaker referred the "bill" to the Committee on Riparian Rights, which is expected to drown the measure.

The bill is admittedly not of a serious character, and was introduced by request.

The text of the measure follows:

"All political parties by whatever name known, and particularly the Democratic and Republican parties, be and the same are hereby abolished. Any person over the age of twenty-one years who declares himself to be a member of any political party, and particularly the Democratic or Republican party, shall, for the first offense be subject to a fine of not less than $1,000 or imprisonment at hard labor for not less than two years, or both.

"No organization known or designated as a political organization shall hereafter be permitted to exist in the State of New Jersey, unless such organization shall be known by the name of an individual, it being the intention of this act to eliminate entirely party politics, and to establish in lieu thereof political organizations which shall have been created in the interest of some particular person. All political organizations shall not only bear the name of the individual organizing the same, but shall have on their stationery, banners, placards and advertisements a photograph of such person, duly signed by the founder of said political organization in his own handwriting."

CUISINE NOTES.

When trimming celery for the table save the tips and stalks. Wash and dry in a maderate oven and keep it by you in a tightly-corked bottle for flavoring soups and gravies.

Bread Sauce—Use stale breadcrumbs for this, otherwise have fresh bread crumbs dried in the oven.

Mutton Shallops and Tomato Sauce—Cut some rather thick slices of cold mutton, season with pepper and salt and let them stand in a small quantity of olive oil. Boil over a clear fire and serve on mashed potatoes with tomato sauce.

The Difference.

Why is it that a girl whom a woman would describe either as "rather plain" or "nothing much to look at" may be in a man's eyes "pretty?" Just because a man judges by the general effect, and discounts such—to him—unimportant trifles as perfect regularity of feature and fashionable attire. A sweet expression and a clear skin—both of which are within the reach of ninety-nine girls out of a hundred—can carry off successfully the snubbiest of snub noses, and a low, soft voice is, in man's estimation, one of the most infallible charms a woman can have.

Her Scrapbook.

"Do you keep a scrap book, Mrs. Rowdy?" asked her friend, Mrs. McGuffey, apropos of nothing in particular.

"Well, in a sort of a way," said Mrs. Rowdy. "I keep a diary, and whenever Mr. Rowdy and I have a tiff I make a note of it.—Judge.

Club Talk

"What's doing at the Terjanned Club?"

"Quite a discussion going on about Plymouth Rock. Some say the Pilgrims brought the rock over with them; others say not."

--OLF.

Another addition has been made to the schedule of nearby golf fixtures since W. D. Vanderpool, secretary of the Metropolitan Golf Association, issued his annual list last week. The Shinnecock Hills Golf Club has been assigned August 3, 4 and 5. This is about the usual time selected by the Southampton cottage colony. Thus far no inkling has been received with regards to a tournament from the National Golf Club, whose new course almost flanks the one at Shinnecock. Probably, after the clubhouse is finished, Charles B. Macdonald and his millionaire associates will have something to say.

According to present indications, there seems to be a good chance of the metropolitan open championship being held in July. As has previously been published, the attraction goes to the Englewood Country Club this year, but thus far no date has been set. H. V. Keep, one of the officials of the club, said last night that July 5, 6 and 7 were being considered. The tournament proper, always seventy-two holes medal play, lasts for two days, but it is customary for the entertaining club to precede the main event with a four-ball competition,amateurs and professionals playing together as partners. At present there is an open week in June, but it follows right after the New Jersey championship and will not be desirable for the metropolitan.

Number 2

WHAT IS DRY CLEANING?

Many people have erroneous ideas about what Dry Cleaning really is—believing that their clothes are actually cleaned dry—as if by magic method we pass our hands over the Garment and say "Presto!" It is clean.

Dry is a misnomer. "Chemical" cleaning would be a more intelligent name, but people might confuse "Chemical," thinking of acids, alkalies, etc., not used in Dry Cleaning.

The truth is we depend largely upon gasolepe, naphtha, benzine—there's a difference—and other petroleum and coal tar products, for our cleansing bath instead of water as do the launderers.

The secret and successful operations in Dry Cleaning are learned only by hard experience and study, coupled with proper equipment. These are what enable us to do superior work.

We know our business thoroughly and are properly equipped in plant, collection and delivery.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The Dunellen Board of Education held the monthly meeting last night, at which the budget for the coming year was made up. The taxpayers will be asked for an appropriation of $7,500, divided as follows: current expenses, $6,500; building and repairs, $500; industrial education, $500. This is an increase of $1,200 and is due to natural growth of school attendance. In the last ten years the number of pupils has increased 62 per cent, and in the past five years 48 per cent. SHERIFF'S DECISION IN REPLEVIN SUIT.

Sheriff Frank Mobus acted as judge at Somerville this morning, in the replivin case of Julius DuPlusis against Peter Moyne, both of Warren township. So far as known it is the first time in nine years that the sheriff has acted as judge and the case attracted unusual attention.

The complainant and defendant were in partnership in the poultry business, which proved a failure, and the former's clothing and personal effects were seized. The goods were replevned and a suit for damages brought against Moyne. This was tried today, when a jury awarded the complainant $200 damages.

COMBINGING SILK AND LINEN.

In the shops there are displayed suits and dresses of linen that are decidedly attractive in design and ornamentation. There are some features that are dominant on many of the distinctive models. One means of trimming is new and effective. It is silk or satin.

It is used as girdles on many little one-piece frocks. Slots, buttonholed and of considerable width, are worked at the sides of the front. Through these the silk sash can be passed and conveniently removed before washing.

Many of these silk girdles have ends that hang half way down the skirt. These may be at the side, the front or the back.

Rosettes of silk are used on many linen frocks. They are easily removed and give a very easy trimming for a little dress of plain-colored linen.

Buttons of black silk or satin are effective little ways of trimming a dress of linen. It is a matter of a few minutes to remove them or to replace them. They are undeniably worth the trouble.

The extra sailor collars are quite evident on imported frocks of linen, and can be incorporated with the blouse if the color of the suit or dress be of the unsoilable kind.

These square collars are of foulard, of black silk or satin and of colored silk deeper in shade than the material of which the dress is made. They are frequently trimmed with narrow collars of fine linen or lace laid upon them and softening the line at the neck.

Cuffs of silk or satin are the natural continuation of the collar idea. They, too, need not be alone in their glory.

As for the simple little bows and sailor knots of silk, they are used with much effect and convincing beauty on many linen frocks and suits.

The introduction of silk on linen is an important one this season. Do not neglect the idea, for it contributes much to the attractiveness of a gown.

CHILDREN BARRED FROM DANCE HALLS

Mayor G. W. V. Moy has been making a study of conditions in public dance halls of the city, and as a result he has given warning to the proprietors and others who have been conducting dances that they must not admit persons sixteen years of age or younger. If the order is violated he will refuse to grant a license for future dances.

It having been brought to Mr. Moy's attention that young girls are frequent patrons of these dances, he decided to put a stop to the practice. He gave his orders through the police department and will expect a strict enforcement of the same under penatly of losing the right to a license.

LITERARY.

The missionary is the introducer of current Western standards. He instructs his schoolboys respecting bathing, spitting, the use of the handkerchief, neatness of garb, the care of one's room, modesty in personal habits. He teaches the people to clean house and yard, to whitewash the walls of the home, to scour the floors of the schoolroom or church. He enforces the duty of being humane to dumb animals, or rearing defective children, of educating daughters and consulting the wife. —From Prof. Edward Alsworth Ross' "Christianity in China," in the March Century.

In each copy of the March number of Woman's Home Companion will be emboided a copy of the painting "Auburn and White," by Hilda Belcher, which won highest distinction in the exhibits of the New York Water-Color Club, the Philadelphia Water-Color Club and other exhibitions.

The March number of Scribner's Magazine has a very striking series of pictures in color, entitled "On the Highways of the Sky," from paintings by William Harnden Foster. These show episodes in the aeroplane history of the near future such as "The Scout Cruiser," "Catching the Limited," etc. No American writer had abetter inside view of the social life of the Confederacy than Mrs. Burton Harrison, who belonged to a prominent Southern family and knew the intimate life at Richmond during the war. At the end of the war she married President Davis' private secretary. Mrs. Harrison begins in this number her "Recollections Grave and Gay," a series of fascinating papers reproducing those stirring times with vivacity and picturesqueness.

The editors of the American Magazine, who have been with The Phillips Publishing Company, will continue both as editors of and exclusive writers for The Crowell Publishing Co. This group consists of John S. Phillips, Editor-in-Chief, who now becomes an officer and director of The Crowell Publishing Company; Ida M. Tarbell; F. P. Dunne, creator of "Mr. Dooley;" Ray Stannard Baker; Albert A. Boyden, and John M. Siddall. Mr. William Allen White and other writers who have been closely allied with The American Magazine will continue as contributors.

The National Magazine, realizing the importance of the revival of farming interests in the eastern states, began in the March number a series of articles dealing with this subject. Interest is already aroused in many sections and the coming year will no doubt see an increased demand for farm lands which for some years have been selling at only a fraction of their real value.

In the March Wide World there is an extraordinary article descriptive of how whales are caught with nets near the Bay of Islands, New Zealand. The photographs are no less remarkable that the text, and the sport possesses elements which probably make it the most exciting in the world. In the same issue are fully illustrated articles dealing with the Cave-dwellers of the Grand Canary the Beachcombers of the Pacific Coast, the Dancers of Yaquiland and the Cannibals of the Congo.

The Strand Magazine for March contains an interesting and exhaustive article on the Associated Press and gives in detail many astounding facts as to how the news of the world is gathered. Mr. Melville E. Stone, the General Manager, declares that the "A. P." is writing the history of all nations through its dispatches. Sir Henry W. Lucy commences a new series of "From Behind the Speaker's Chair," which is amusingly illustrated by the Punch cartoonist, E. T. Reed.

ONE-SIDED FASHION.

The song of the wandering minstrel who proclaimed himself to be a thing of shreds and patches is almost applicable to the gowns of the moment. Especially the patches! It is made possible by the one-sided style that prevails.

Have you noticed how many bodices on afternoon and evening gowns are made of two materials? On the right will be Irish lace brought down to the girdle, while balancing it will be folded satin or draped cloth.

A tunic will be draped over one side of the skirt, allowing the other to remain uncovered. Buttons, braid or embroidery need not be applied with the balanced idea. One line of buttons will be used down a blouse or skirt; braid will drop at one side of a coat.

Sashes need not hang down the middle of the back. Indeed, they are more frequently adjusted at one side of the front or back. Drapery is more often at one side than in any balanced dispostition and the favorite patches of embroidery are generally used to decorate one side of jackets, skirts and blouses.

Sleeves do not have to match each other in wraps or gowns, and scarfs most certainly are not decorated similarly on each end.

And as for hats! The question is one that would lead you into endless discussion.

It is a one-sided aspect that gives the artistic contrast for which so many have striven and finally attained.

We WANT COMPETITION
of the Right Sort, Not the Following Kind!

A Mrs. S—— after selecting her outfit and learning the total cost from our plainly marked price tags, said she preferred to make comparisons elsewhere before ordering, to which we readily agreed, for it's a thing we always URGE!

On getting another store's prices (where they were marked in private signs) she found ours were far less, and SAID so. The salesman promptly dropped to our figures—AND GOT THE ORDER.

Here, where there's but ONE PLAINLY MARKED PRICE ON EVERY ITEM, such an "accommodating" and sudden price drop would be impossible—here, when you read the price tag, you KNOW it's already at lowest point, for ALL prices are made and REMAIN on the SAME UNIFORMLY SMALL PROFIT BASIS. We don't HAVE to run a "leader" here and there for an hour, or a day, to catch trade, as ALL lines are equally good values EVERY day in the year!

All we want is HONEST competition that meet OUR plainly marked prices WITH prices you can READ!

ISN'T THAT FAIR?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning March 12, 1911.

Topic.—First aid for the tempted.—Heb. ii, 14-18. Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

One of our great artists has painted a picture of a knight on the verge of a dark wood through which he has to pass. The wood contains all manner of lurking perils and stealthy enemies, and before entering it the young knight has taken off his helmet and is pouring out his soul in prayer. And the legend at the bottom of the picture is "Into Thy Hands, O Lord!"

That picture teaches a great truth—a truth which every young Christian especially needs to know. It declares that if one hopes to make his way safely, victoriously, through life, each day and many times each day he must commit himself into the keeping of the almighty and gracious Lord. The odds against us are too great for us to hope to win the battle with temptation if we trust solely in our own strength. We are too weak and frail. We are too prone to do evil. We are too ignorant of Satan's devices. What chance have such as we to overcome the forces which array themselves against us? What match are such as we for the principalities and powers of evil?

"Alas, my master, how shall we do?" cries the servant of Elisha as he rushes into the prophet's chamber, his face pale with terror. The host of the enemy encompass the city like a wall, and the terrified man has seen the morning sun glitter on swords and spears and the awful array of war. Calm and self possessed, his master answers, "Fear not, for they that be with us are more than they that be with them." "With us?" the servant might ask. "Who are with us? Where are they?" The prophet prays, and in answer to his prayer the Lord opens the servant's eyes. And as if every bush and every tree had suddenly changed into a celestial form, "Behold, the mountain was full of horses and chariots round about Elisha!" In our every time of temptation, when Satan and his hosts, issuing from the pit and drawn up in battle array against us, seem to have cut off every way of escape, and we are ready to cry, "Alas, alas, how shall I do?" we, too, need to have our eyes opened. We need to see Jesus. He is our defense. He is our shield. He is our refuge. He is our ever present helper.

Jesus can deliver us out of temptation, for He has shared this life of ours, with all its struggle, against temptation and sin. He has been tempted in all points, like as we are. He has met Satan and all his legions, and He has overcome them. He overcame them decisively in the wilderness. He mastered them in the garden of Gethsemene. He utterly defeated them by His death and resurrection. All through His life as He trod our earth He was tempted, and from every temptation He came forth the victor. Because our Lord is a victorious Lord, who knows Satan through and through and who knows us through and through, He is able to succor them that are tempted.

This succor is our great, our deadly need. Like Peter upon the water when temptations assail our only hope is to cry out at once, "Save, Lord, or I perish." And He will save. Every moment of every day He is doing it. All around us young people are winning splendid moral victories. Trusting in His strength, they are overcoming dark and terrible temptations. And we also may be more than conquerors through Him that loved us, for Jesus is our Saviour not only because He saves us from our past sin, but also because He is a very present help in every time of trouble. And He will show His saving power to every heart that cries to Him in the hour of its temptation. In your hour of temptation He will save you.

A Sunshine Task.

Youth forgets age until the spirit of the Sunshine committee gets into the hearts of the young people and awakens sympathy.

The experience of a young Australian girl might well be taken to heart. The Christian Endeavor News tells the story:

"You're not as good a gal as you might be," said the old age pensioner to one of the Sunshiners who went to see him.

"Why?" she inquired.

"Waal, you go to church and endeavor a lot, I know, but you don't come often to see us old folk."

"Why do you not come to church?" she replied.

"Oh, I don't know. You ought to come and hold your Endeavor here."

"All right," said the visitor. "We'll come."

And they went.

The roads were bad, but a company got together and held bright Christian Endeavor meetings with the old man and in several other homes. The most sunshiny Endeavorers were always selected for leaders; the cloudy ones were reserved for the church meetings.

We do too little of this kind of Sunshine work.

A Year of Progress.

With gratitude to Almighty God I record that the past year has been one of unexampled progress and prosperity in the Christian Endeavor movement throughout the world.—Francis E. Clark.

A Desperate Game

By JOHN K. LEYS,

Author of "The Lindsays," "The Lawyer's Secret," "The Black Terror," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, by John K. Leys.

"Now, first of all, tell me exactly what you have discovered," he said, feasting his eyes meantime on the face of the girl he loved. She did so, saying in conclusion, "And Sir Rufus says that if I do not marry him he will make the story public."

"Good heavens, what a scoundrel! What an infamy!" cried Foscombe, and in a lower tone he added, "I had no idea of this."

"Hush!" said Eva, with a sad smile. "Remember that you are speaking of the man who may be my husband, who will be my husband unless you can find a way to save me from marrying a man I detest."

The lawyer's heart beat fast when he heard these words. Here, at any rate, was a point in his favor.

"But you would not marry him if you detest him!"

"Yes. I have thought of it a long time, day and night, and I would rather marry him than bring so much misery to my father and mother and Terence. I am only one, and there are three of them. Besides, there is worse than that."

"What do you mean?"

"I don't know whether he is speaking the truth or not, but he says that somebody got to know this sad secret of my mother's, and that in order to prevent his telling it Terence killed him—murdered him. He says he knows enough to prove my brother guilty, and threatens"—

She stopped, afraid that she might break down.

"You don't mean to say that Sir Rufus Deveril held that threat over you as a means to coerce you into marrying him?" asked the lawyer, speaking very slowly.

"He hinted that he would—would bring my brother to the scaffold."

"This is a revelation to me," said Foscombe. "I had no idea he was such a man."

"No. To hear him speak you would think that he was the most gentle and chivalrous man that ever lived."

"I think you may make your mind quite easy about that last point," said the lawyer after a pause. "What could he gain by denouncing your brother to the police? Nothing, and worse than nothing. Every one would say, Why did you not say all this at the time? And if it were known—and I would take good care that it should be known—that he had denounced your brother in order to revenge himself upon you for refusing to marry him, he could never hold up his head afterward in English society. No, he never would stir in that matter. He may use it as a threat, but the threat is an empty one. It could never be carried out."

"Oh, Mr. Foscombe, you don't know how much you relieve my mind by what you have said!"

"That is a good thing," answered the lawyer, with a smile. "And now let us consider the other matter. It is there that the real danger lies. I suppose there is no doubt that Lady Roscommon's first husband was alive at the time of her marriage with Lord Roscommon?"

"Mamma says in one of her letters that she had seen him."

"Then we must do our best to fight the case. I suppose you know"— He stopped himself and remained silent for some seconds. "Would any great pecuniary advantage come to Sir Rufus if he were to succeed in marrying you?" he asked.

"I have a large fortune coming to me on my marriage from my great-uncle's will."

"I thought there might be something of that kind involved, and I think it possible that some part of this fortune may have to go. In other words, we may have to buy him off."

"But I offered that, and he said it was impossible—that he could only get the money by marrying me."

"That shows that he might be content with the money," said Foscombe, and again he sat silent for a time, Eva watching his face with deep anxiety.

When he at length looked up to speak to her there was a new expression in his look, almost one of triumph.

"I think it is possible that I may succeed in setting you free from Sir Rufus' clutches," he said, "but there are difficulties in the way, great difficulties. What I fear is that Sir Rufus may simply say to me, 'Mind your own business,' and refuse to discuss the matter with me at all. If he took that position I should be helpless. The only thing is for you to give me the right to protect you, the right of your affianced husband. Stop one moment, please, before you condemn me!" he cried, for Eva had drawn back in alarm, blushing painfully. "Please hear me for one moment. You remember when you first came to my house, Miss Fitzgerald. I appeal to you whether all the time you were there I betrayed by so much as a tone or a look that I loved you."

"No."

"I could not, for you belonged to another—to my friend. I looked upon you as one beyond my reach. Then afterward I thought it was no time to speak to you of what was in my heart when your own was wounded and bleeding. But I looked forward to a time, years distant, perhaps, when I might tell you of the love you had inspired in me. Surely there was no harm in that. And now that chance has made it possible for me to speak. I cannot hide the truth from you. I love you, Eva, with every breath I draw, every thought of my mind, every wish of my heart. I know that if Sir Rufus wins I must lose you forever. I will do my best in any case—don't imagine anything else for one moment. But how different would it be if I were fighting for my own bride! How unanswerable would be my right to interfere if I could say, 'Miss Fitzgerald has done me the honor to promise to marry me.'"

There was a long silence, Eva sitting with her eyes fixed on the carpet and Foscombe patiently waiting for her to speak.

At length she raised her sweet and candid eyes and looked at him.

"You have been very kind to me," she said gravely, and just then, when the prize was apparently within reach, the inward tormentor bade him remember. He did remember and shuddered, but kept his face unchanged.

"You have been almost the only friend I have ever known," went on the girl. "Would it make you very happy if I were to marry you?"

"So happy that I should not be able to contain myself for happiness. I should think myself the most blessed and happy of all men in the world."

"Then, Mr. Foscombe, if my mother's honor can be saved, and my brother's—if you can make Sir Rufus powerless to hurt them I will marry you. I would much rather marry no one," she said simply, "for I shall never love any one as I loved Guy. But I like you very much better than Sir Rufus, and if you can prevent him carrying out his threats I will marry you next year."

He made no reply in words, but took her hand and kissed it. Scarcely had he done so than a stir and noise were heard in the hall. It was Sir Rufus returning. Eva fled by a door that led to the back of the house, while Foscombe picked up a book—the first that came to hand—and entered the dining room by one door just as the master of the castle came in by the other.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

A DUEL WITHOUT SWORDS.

"What, you here, Foscombe!" was the not very hospitable greeting that Sir Rufus vouchsafed his guest. "I could scarcely believe my ears when Jorrocks told me that you were in the dining room. Has anything turned up—anything fresh?" He spoke with a note of anxiety in his tone.

"No; not in the sense you mean. I came down to have a chat with you—on business matters."

"Come into the library then. It's more snug there than here, and it's raining cats and dogs outside. We can have our talk there. Well, what is it?" said the baronet sharply when the two men were left alone together. "I suppose you have come down to tell me something."

Mr. Foscombe was in the act of lighting a cigar. He calmly completed the process before answering, and then, expelling a cloud of smoke, "No," said he. "The fact is, I came down primarily to see Miss Fitzgerald."

Sir Rufus had seized the poker with the intention of raising some of the coals that the butler had placed on the fire. When the lawyer's words fell on his ears he did not start, but the motion of his hand ceased as if he had been a machine from which the motive power had suddenly been withdrawn. Still holding the bar of steel poised in his hand, he slowly turned round and faced the speaker. There was such a look of cold, restrained ferocity in the eyes of the older man that the other felt nervous. It seemed to him that with a very little more provocation and never stopping to count the cost Sir Rufus might scatter his brains on the carpet. But he tried hard not to show that he was afraid, and he succeeded pretty well.

"I saw her tonight before you came in," he said, steadily regarding the lighted tip of his cigar. "She wishes me to take her home tomorrow."

This was a lie. But it was Foscombe's great object for the present to get himself and Eva out of the house, and this excuse was the readiest he could find.

"You need not take the trouble," said Sir Rufus shortly. "I will be Miss Fitzgerald's escort myself. Probably we shall be married before we undertake the journey."

"Won't it look better if she is married from her father's house?" suggested the lawyer, only to receive the fierce retort:

"Surely I am the best judge of that. What business is it of yours?"

Foscombe did not reply for a moment or two. He wished to conceal if possible, at least for a little longer, the extent of his treachery—treachery to the pact the baronet and he had made in London. He was, to tell the truth, a little afraid to say in so many words to Sir Rufus' face that he intended to steal away his bride from him—the very bride he had engaged to secure for him.

"I think," he said slowly, "that, with all deference to you, the best way will be to allow me to carry out Miss Fitzgerald's wishes—best for all parties."

Sir Rufus flew into a terrible passion. The veins in his face and neck swelled till they seemed near bursting. His blue eyes seemed to flash lightning. With a horrible oath he struck the table at his side so that the glasses jumped and rang. "The girl does not leave this house," he cried, "except as my bride."

"You will scarcely try to detain us by force, I hope?" said Foscombe lightly with a smile.

The baronet made no reply at first, but sat studying his enemy with clear, unwinking eyes.

"I don't understand what has come to you," he said at length. "You are not the same man I had a deal with in town a few months ago. We agreed then that you were to help me to marry a certain young lady, and that out of her fortune I should repay you an old debt which I owed to your father, of sainted memory, of I don't know how many thousand pounds, and pay you in addition £10,000 as a solatium for the part you had to play."

"I beg to say that I hold that agreement as canceled," said the solicitor quickly. "It was not an agreement any honorable man could make. I must have made it in a fit of mental aberration. At any rate, I cannot keep it."

"Oh, ho!" said the baronet softly. "So that's how the land lies? Perhaps you would like to marry the heiress yourself?"

The sneer with which this was said was more than Foscombe could stand. The taunt broke down the defense of his prudence, and he answered with outward calmness, though inwardly quaking:

"That is precisely what I propose to do."

The cigar which the baronet held in his hand did not tremble by so much as a hair's breadth. Outwardly he was quite unmoved by what he had heard, but there was a steely glitter in his eyes that should have told the lawyer the truth.

"He is taking it very quietly," Foscombe said to himself. If he had known his host a little better he would not have felt so comfortable.

"So you choose to play the traitor," said the baronet at length.

"You may call it that if you like," said the other, with affected indifference. "And I may say that I would never have entered into the scheme if I had known the infamous means you were using to terrorize her mother and the young lady herself into doing what you wished."

A slight smile played round the corners of the baronet's mouth as the virtuous lawyer delivered himself of this sentiment. He leaned forward and said gently: "And the lady? I presume you have asked her consent?"

"Yes, and got it too."

"I am afraid that is a lie," said Sir Rufus calmly. "She cannot give her consent to be your wife, knowing as she does the consequences that would result to Lady Roscommon and her son."

"You are quite mistaken," said the lawyer airily. "We talked the whole matter over, she and I, and I succeeded in satisfying her that as far as regards her brother, at all events, your threats are quite empty. I don't believe you would dare to come forward now and denounce Captain Fitzgerald and face a cross examination as to your motives for remaining silent so long. And as to the mother, as to Lady Roscommon, there we are in exactly the same position. We both know the facts, and I will make them public if Miss Fitzgerald marries you, so that marriage with you will be no sort of safeguard for her mother. We are in exactly the same position only the girl has the bad taste to prefer me to you."

"And you imagine that because you have learned this secret you and I are on a level?"

"Sufficiently near it for all practical purposes," said Mr. Foscombe, emitting a beautiful smoke ring from his lips. "And there is also this in my favor—that if you were to marry Miss Fitzgerald and the circumstances under which the marriage took place were to become known—and I should take very good care that they did become known—you would be expelled from every club in London. Your life would be ruined, because the only society you know or care about would have cut you, whereas if you were to play me the same trick I would leave London for some more agreeable place of residence with scarcely a regret. I don't care about London society because I don't belong to it. You do, and its judgment would be a sentence of death for you. That's where I have the advantage."

"But the object of Miss Fitzgerald's marrying and bestowing her immense fortune upon her husband would be lost if she married you."

OLD-TIME POLISHES.

Grandmothers kept recipes for cleaning in precious notebooks. The recipes in their manuscript books kept as punctiliously as their dairies were always to the point. Polishes were home-made. Creams and plate powder were mixed and matured in the pantry. Plumbing and repairing bills had to be kept from the door by sheer industry. Mistress and maids willingly acted the part of "handy men."

Instead of cleaning silver with polishing paste they used to make a soap powder. An ounce and a half of coacoanut soap mixed with sufficient water to make a thick paste was the foundation. To this they added seventy-five grains of rouge and twenty-two grains of carbonate of ammonia, working both into the other ingredients and shutting the paste away in a tin box fitted with a lid until it was required.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

James Forbes' four-act comedy, "The Traveling Salesman," comes to the Plainfield theatre tomorrow night. In this play the author has provided Frank J. McIntyre, who makes his first appearance in Plainfield, the traveling salesman, with a vehicle just suited to his style of acting. As Bob Blake, the jolly drummer, whose specialty is women's apparel, McIntyre is said to conform in every particular to the popular conception of a traveling salesman.

Have you ever stood before a superb oil painting—a masterpiece—and unconsciously said to yourself, "if it was only animated?" Or have you, perhaps, gazed upon a splendid moving picture—photographically perfect—and then thought, "if it only reproduced the colors of nature, instead of merely black and white?" If you have, you will find both your wishes and ideals realized in Lyman H. Howe's Travel Festival at the Plainfield theatre next Tuesday night the 14th.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Zimmerman, of Bound Brook, have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. George Rockefeller, of Willever street.

Burns Were Severe.

Mrs. T. Frank Sykes, of "The Red Cottage," Scotch Plains, was burned much worse than first supposed a few days ago when an exploding alcohol lamp in a percolator threw blazing fluid about her, igniting her clothing. The flames enveloped the entire upper part of her body and for several days she has been in a critical condition. Inquiry at the home today elicited the information that she had improved considerably and prospects for recovery are good.

WATCHUNG HUNT'S CLUBHOUSE CLOSING

The board of stewards of the Watchung Hunt Club has decided to close the clubhouse temporarily. Probably smaller quarters will be secured at an early date. Meanwhile the hounds, in charge of Huntsman Henry Watkins, will be kept at the kennels and horses may be hired or boarded as usual. The only important change will be that the services of the club steward and chef will be dispensed with for the present. At this season of the year, it is said, there is not the great demand for such service.

On June 13 last the club had an indebtedness of about $4,000, and all of that indebtedness has been liquidated with the exception of a few small accounts. The additional amount of $3,800 has been expended within the time mentioned for maintenance and upkeep of the club, including the steward, huntsman and hounds, which amount was raised by subscription and otherwise by the board of stewards. At present there is owing the club from house charges and dues $1,381.15. The club is on a sound financial basis and arrangements are being made for the annual spring steeplechase meet to be held on May 27 and 29, and it is proposed to make it best meet in the history of the club. Assurances have been received that the entry list will be bigger than ever before. The spring hunting season, weather permitting will commence on or about March 25, due notice of which will be given. The clubhouse will be closed on March 15 and notice will be given of the resumption of service there. The members of the board of stewards who signed the circular letter are Henry L. Finch, C. W. Holland, Edwin S. Hooley, J. Hartley Mellick, Arthur L. Otterson, C. E. S. Bellows, Henry E. Butler, W. J. Buttfield, Hart S. Farlee, Robert A. Fairbairn and T. R. Van Boskerck.

President R. I. Tolles, of the Common Council, continues to improve from injuries the result of a recent accident and hopes to be out soon.

SEES HER CHILD FATALLY BURNED

Little Matthew T. Foxten Lives Hours After Mother Finds Him Enveloped in Flames.

After lingering in agony for nearly two hours, Matthew H. Foxten, the four-year-old-son of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Foxten, of Steiner place, died shortly before 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, from frightful burns received in an accident at the parents' home. The little fellow's body almost burned to a crisp, even to the eyes which were left charred and sightless before the end came. Dr. Albert Pittis gave what treatment would tend to relieve the child's sufferings but he retained consciousness until a few minutes previous to death.

The fatal affair occurred at 2:45 yesterday afternoon and has aroused the sympathy of the entire city and borough. Mrs. Foxten had just started a new fire in the kitchen stove, leaving it a few moments to bring a pail a water from a yard pump. The little boy was in the room playing with some papers. He evidently attempted to light them as the papers and his clothing were ablaze when Mrs. Foxten returned.

The mother was frantic by the awful sight and without stopping to think of consequences, caught the child in her arms, running with him to the yard. There she tried to tear the clothing away with her bare hands, all the while screaming for aid. Her cries attracted two neighbors, Mrs. Rupert and Mrs. Taynor, and workmen from the McCullough mill. The latter carried extinguishers, with which they put out several small fires that had started in the kitchen while the other volunteers sought to assist the mother.

When the clothing had all been removed from the child's body, the sight proved too much for several of the spectators. Fireman William Hogan, who came with the apparatus in response to a still alarm, and Miss Mary McCullough, proved themselves equal to the emergency by bathing the blackened form with cooling oils and doing all possible to relieve the painwracked frame. The little fellow cried pitiously for his mother and brother and begged to have his eyes opened, not understanding that they had been destroyed. Attempts were made by telephone and by Howard Woolston, in his rig for half an hour to secure a physician before Dr. Pittis arrived. The ambulance was also summoned but the physician said it was no use sending the sufferer to the hospital. Mrs. Foxten was severely burned about the hands and today was almost prostrated by the shock.

Matthew Foxten, the father of the boy, has been a victim of circumstance for a long time. He contracted blood poisoning in one arm a year ago and has only recently secured partial use of it. He was in Muhlenberg Hospital for several months. He was out of employment until recently when he got a place as driver of a stone wagon. There is one other boy in the family, John, aged seven.

The funeral of the unfortunate child will be held at the parent's home tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Photos of County Officials.

Handsome sepia photographs of Prosecutor C. Addison Swift and his assistant, Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., of this city, have been placed in the prosecutor's office in the Court House, Elizabeth, by County Detective John Galatian. The photograph of Mr. Hetfield was taken by P. Frank Stone, the local photographer, and is a fine piece of work.

LICENSE REFUSAL, PASTORS' DISCUSSION

The recent action of seventy-five business men and others in signing a petition presented to the Common Council asking that body to reconsider the liquor application of Christian Gloekler, seems to have aroused the members of the Plainfield Ministers' Association.

Proposing to show their disapproval of the action of residents signing Mr. Gloekler's petition, many of whom, they say, are members and officers of churches, and at the same time show their approval and support of Mayor Moy and the Common Council in refusing to grant Mr. Gloekler's license or to even reconsider it, the ministers' association will meet at the Y. M. C. A. tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock.

Suitable resolutions, it is reported, will be adopted at that meeting putting the ministers on record and it is also said that those who signed the petition in question will be critised for trying to defeat the efforts of the ministers and temperance advocates.

'TRAVELING SALESMAN' A REAL LIVE COMEDY

Henry B. Harris will present "The Traveling Salesman," James Forbes' comedy success at the Plainfield theatre tonight. The first act of "The Taveling Salesman" shows the interior of a railroad depot at Grand Crossing, a little town in the middle West. It is here that Bob Blake, the traveling salesman, makes the acquaintance of Beth Elliott, the pretty telegraph operator and ticket agent. Beth is possessed of a barren and untillable piece of land, which suddenly becomes of immense value, because it is necessary to a scheme of improvement the railway company desires to carry out.

Martin Drury, who is Blake's employer, becomes possessed of the knowledge, that the railroad company is to make the improvements, and attempts to defraud the girl of the property through a perversion of laws governing the sale of land for unpaid taxes. It is Blake's aim to defeat the scheme, and the predicament in which he finds himself through his impetuous and misguided efforts furnishes the necessary dramatic thread for Mr. Forbes' comedy, which aims chiefly at a humorous exposition of the characteristics of "the knight of the grip." The second act, which takes place in Blakes' room in the village hotel, is said to be the funniest ever staged. It represents a poker game.

INTER-DENOMINATIONAL MISSIONARY MEETING.

The committee of arrangements for the Women's National Foreign Missionary Jubilee, inter-denominational, has planned an interesting program for the meeting to be held in Trinity Reformed church on Friday, March 24.

Good speakers have been secured for both afternoon and evening sessions. Mrs. Helen M. Montgomery, Dr. Mary Carleton, of China; Rev. Dr. Lewis R. Scudder, of India; and others are among the number. An excellent musical program has been prepared.

Will Overhaul Big Press.

Mr. and Mrs. William Newmiller, of Vine street, North Plainfield, left this week on the Steamship Mexico for Havana, Cuba, where Mr. Newmiller will overhaul and repair a four-tiered Scott rotary newspaper press. The machine was formally erected in New York city by Mr. Newmiller's father and printed the New York Times for a number of years, but was afterward sold to the El Mundo newspaper at Havana.

Freeholders Visit Glen Gardner.

Freeholders Doane, Krause, Grunder, Wilbur, together with Director Cady of the board and Jesse Oakley, the architect, of Elizabeth, went to Glen Gardner today, to inspect the State hospital for the care and treatment of tuberculosis. The trip is made with a view of getting points which will be of use in the construction of the county tuberculosis camp back of Scotch Plains.

Horse and Buggy Stolen.

The police of Bernardsville reported to the local police last night that a horse and buggy had been stolen from E. H. Muse, of that place, and asked that a lookout be kept for the rig. The horse is a dark bay and was recently clipped. The buggy is a black top with rubber tires and is in first class condition. Nothing had been seen of the rig this morning.

TO STOP GAMBLING

Mayor to Close up Bucket Shops Where They May be Found Here.

TO STAMP OUT THE EVIL.

His Honor, Also Will Investigate Some Information Received as to Baseball "Pools" in This City.

It has been brought to the attention of the Mayor that the charge is made that there are a number of bucket shops operating in this city. If he finds this to be correct, he said today that he would take steps to close up such places. It is also said that there are places here where books are made on horse races, and the Mayor will give his attention to that, also, and will take proper action in case of continued violation of the law.

The recent discussion by baseball magnates deprecating the practice of making "baseball pools," as injurious to the national game, has brought to the knowledge of Mayor G. W. V. Moy that the practice is carried on in this city to a large extent during the summer season and as it has been decided to be a form of gambling and chance, he proposes to take steps to stop it. His has decided upon this action because he has learned that there are many young men and boys who frequently lose the greater part of their week's earnings by participating in such pools.

It is estimated that during the baseball season there are hundreds of pools going in this city both young and old taking a chance in all sorts of ways. Some of the pools are made up on the number of hits made by players during a week, month or season, while other pools are made on the basis of the number of runs made during a week by a team. The pools are made up with from a half dozen or a dozen or more people, ranging from ten cents to $1 contributed by each member. The lucky man takes the pool. There have been instances where several members of the pool failed to win a pool for weeks, while others more lucky have been known to make as high as $10 and $15 a week.

AUTOPSY ON WOOD; WIDOW GETS LAWYER

The autopsy ordered by County Physician F. W. Westcott to be performed on the body of Frank Wood, who was killed by being struck by a main line trolley car early yesterday morning, was completed by City Physician C. F. Lufburrow yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock. Doctors Ray T. Munger, representing Dr. Westcott and Albert H. Pittis, were present and took notes on the subject.

Dr. Lufburrow said this morning that death was caused by a fracture at the base of the skull. Other minor injuries were found on the body including a broken bone in the right arm. The report has been sent to Dr. Westcott.

J. Henry Crane, who has been retained by Wood's widow to look after the interests of the family, said today that no action will be taken, looking to the recovery of monetary damages at this time. After the funeral Mrs. Wood will consult with Mr. Crane as to the best method of procedure.

Yesterday afternoon Chief of Police Kiely accompanied by Joseph Whalen, claim agent of the Public Service Railway Company, went by trolley to the scene of the accident near Clinton avenue.

Wood's funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at the undertaking parlors of W. S. Brown, in Westfield. Rev. C. J. Greenwood, pastor of the Baptist church, being in charge. The interment will be in Fairview cemetery.

PAPA-IN-LAW WON

Wm. McNair Threw Kettle of Scalding Water on His Son-in-Law.

F. RYNO CONFINED TO BED.

The Aged Man Got Much the Better of Husky One in a Family Row in Peaceful Fanwood.

Frazee Ryno's shoulders are smarting and his general feelings are shocked because his father-in-law, William McNair, it is alleged, didn't like some of the conversation Frazee was throwing out and is said to have emptied a pot of boiling water on him. Ryno and his father-in-law live together on Woodlawn avenue, Fanwood. On Tuesday evening, so it is related, Ryno started a "wordfest" with his wife's father and finally when the argument became overheated "landed" on Mr. McNair who is 65 years old.

Mr. McNair did not take kindly to this alleged insubordination and finding no other weapon handy seized the tea kettle from a nearby stove, poured its boiling contents, it is alleged, over the shoulders and down the back of his recalcitrant son-in-law.

So far as known no complaint has been made to the authorities and it is unlikely that a formal action will be taken, but it is certain that Ryno, who is only twenty-five years old and husky, will be confined to his bed for a week or ten days nursing his wounds. His back and shoulders are badly scalded.

THROUGH 5 OFFICES WITHOUT POST MARKS

How a letter can pass through three postoffices abroad and two in this country and still escape the despatching and receiving post marks is a mystery. Yet this is what happened to a letter received yesterday afternoon by Dirk de Haas, of Watchung.

Mr. de Haas exhibited a letter to a reporter for The Daily Press this morning which was mailed in Holland three weeks ago. According to the mail routes the letter must have passed through the postoffice in London, England, after going through two offices in the country from which it was sent. It went through the New York postoffice and finally through the hands of stamping clerks here and yet the envelope does not contain a mark to show its trip. The stamps are not even cancelled.

MISSIONARY SOCIETIES HOLD ANNUAL SESSION

The annual meeting of the Foreign Missionary Societies of the First Presbyterian church was held yesterday, occupying the whole day with an intermision at noon for luncheon. The morning session was devoted to the Domestic Mission Society and these officers were elected: President, Mrs. E. W. Poinier; first vice-president, Mrs. T. C. Bodine; second vice-president Mrs. Howard A. Pope; secretary, Mrs. A. E. Hoagland; secretary of literature, Mrs. John Johnston; treasurer, Mrs. W. E. Hyatt.

Mrs. Gabriel Reid Maguire spoke at the morning session on "Systematic Giving," showing by contrast with the spasmodic efforts to collect funds for the purposees of missions how much better results can be obtained by regular offerings for the purpose.

In the afternoon the election of officers of the Foreign Missionary Society resulted as follows: President, Miss J. J. Noll; first vice-president, Mrs. J. H. Manning; second vice-president, Miss Barnes; secretary, Miss Jennie Abbott; secretary of literature, Mrs. H. A. Pope; treasurer, Miss Addie Dietrich.

This society reported that all its pledges had been met and that there was a balance in the treasury. Both societies are in flourishing condition, in fact better than ever before. In the afternoon Rev. Dr. C. R. Richardson, of India, gave an interesting address on missionary work there. Among other things he said that during the past decade the Christians had grown in numbers from 14,000 to 76,000 and that there is a continual growth which is spreading gradually to all parts of that vast country.

The meetings were held in the parlors of the church and were attended by a large number of women interested in the work.

A DARING HOLD-UP

Bold Highwaymen Throw Victim From Trolley and Rifle His Pockets.

GOT CONSIDERABLE BOOTY.

Affair Occurred on Grade Near Old Galvin Park Property—Charles Marra the Assailed Party.

Charles Marra, the twenty year old son of Tony Marra, of East Front street, was made the victim of a daring hold-up on a main line trolley east of Scotch Plains at 6:30 last evening. Two men threw him bodily from the back platform of the car as it was climbing the steep grade near the old Galvin park place and then dragged him into the woods. The conductor was inside near the front end of the car at the time and did not notice the occurrence.

Marra put up a stiff fight but all to no purpose. The highwaymen rifled his pockets, securing $25 in bills, he was taking to an Elizabeth building loan for his father, thirty-cents in change and a few small trinkets. When his assailants made certain nothing had been overlooked, they ran away in the direction of Westfield.

Marra made his way back to Scotch Plains, where he telephoned the local police. His appearance bore out the story of the struggle, as his clothing was covered with mud and his face was scratched and bleeding. Assistant County Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., reveived his statement, immediately afterward placing County Detective Galatian on the case. The latter was in town this morning conducting an investigation.

Marra stated to the officials that the two men were middle-aged and roughly dressed. One was of slender build and evidently an Italian. The other was stockier with a bushy crop of carroty hair. His companion called him "Red." The pair boarded the car at Scotch Plains and stood on the rear platform alongside of Marra. No one else was near at hand when the car began climbing the grade, thus giving the opportunity desired. The car proceeded on after the victim had been hurled to the ground, the crew being totally unconscious of what was transpiring in the rear. Detective Galatian declared to a reporter it was one of the boldest jobs he had come in contact with in a long time.

Following the initiation the visiting brothers were entertained at a collation in the club rooms. During the evening Mr. David took occasion to compliment his Plainfield brethren upon the splendid condition in which he found the lodge. He wished for it continued prosperity and suggested that the innovation of inter-lodge visits be continued from now on. LOCAL PASTOR DIES SUDDENLY

Rev. John T. Diggs Expires After Complaining to Wife "Oh, I Feel So Badly."

Rev. John T. Diggs, pastor of the Mount Zion A. M. E. church, died suddenly at 11:30 this morning presumably of heart disease. The actual cause of death will not be known until after County Physician F. W. Westcott has made an examination.

Rev. Mr. Diggs came to Plainfield as the pastor of Mt. Zion church four years ago next April and during his incumbency the church has grown greatly in numbers and prosperity. His sudden death has caused consternation among his flock and his wife is prostrated with grief at her sudden bereavement. He is survived besides his wife by one son John C. Diggs, a letter carrier, of Camden, and a daughter, Mrs. Juanita Woolsey, of New Brunswick. A sister living at King and Queen, Virginia, has been notified of the pastor's demise.

According to Mrs. A. J. Maynard, who is the wife of the assistant pastor at Mt. Zion, Mr. Diggs was working in the garden this morning and had returned to the house for a little rest and to prepare for the mid-day meal. He took his usual cosey seat in the dining room of the parsonage, 523 West Fourth street, and asked his wife to help him get off his overshoes.

While Mrs. Diggs was performing this task her husband suddenly exclaimed, "Oh, I feel so badly, I think I must lie down.' He fell back in the chair and expired without another murmur. Dr. J. F. Lawson was immediately called and declared the pastor dead. County Physician Westcott was notified at once. Dr. Lawson was of the opinion that heart trouble was the cause of death. Besides Mrs. Diggs Mrs. John Scudder was in the dining room when Mr. Diggs expired. Neither heard any other word from the sick man except that quoted above.

The dead pastor was in his sixty-first year and although he had never complained of being seriously ill had recently decided that he was going to be afflicted with asthma although it was believed to be merely a sympathetic feeling he had for a member of the church who was so afflicted. On Monday in conversation with his assistant, Mr. Diggs said: "When I die I want my funeral held in the church and I want whoever preaches at the service to use the text, 'I've fought the Good Fight.'" These were practically the realization of a feeling of approaching dissolution although no premonitory signs had been seen by the immediate family or friends.

There is widespread sorrow among the colored population over the sudden calamity and hosts of friends of the pastor and his wife are extending sympathy and material help in the hour of trial.

Announcement of the funeral arrangements will be made tomorrow.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

The 206th performance on Broadway of Geo. M. Cohan's laugh compelling, blues-dispelling comedy, "Get Rich Quick Wallingford," will occur at Geo. M. Cohan's theatre on Monday night, where the piece has settled down for a continuance of its run with no signs of abating interest from the laughter loving audiences that nightly pack this newest Broadway playhouse. Like every play to which the name of Cohan has been attached, "Get Rich Quick Wallingford" is clean and wholesome. It offers a delightful evening's relaxation to the tired business man, who in an atmosphere of hilarious merriment may view the strenuous methods employed by a financial bucaneer in his efforts to unload a parcel of visionary schemes on the residents of a provincial village. That the financial flurries of "Wallingford" eventually turn out big paying investments which make him a respectable citizen and a millionaire at one and the same time is left for the story of the play to unfold.

AWAKE AFTER SLEEPING THIRTY-TWO YEARS.

After a unbroken sleep extending over thirty-two years Caroline Kronboeck has awakened to find the world changed considerably. This extraordinary case of somnolence has occurred at Oknoe, a village near Moensteras, Sweden, and is described by Dr. Frederstroem, of the Stockholm Hospital, states an exchange. Caroline Kronboeck fell asleep when she was fourteen, in the winter of 1877-78, and remained until recently in a comatose condition. Consciousness returned to her suddenly.

She did not know where she was; didn't recognize her father or the room where she had lain for thirty-two years. Presently she felt hungry and asked for a baked herring—her favorite dish when she was a young girl. She said she felt tired and somewhat dazed.

Her memory came back by degrees how she walked half a mile to school the name of the teacher and those of her school friends and what the local parson looked like. She remembered having a tootache, but could not say whether she had hurt her head.

As to her long period of suspended consciousness her mind is a complete blank. It took her a month to learn to walk again and her eyes remain very sensitive to light, but her appetite was excellent from the time of her awakening and she has since slept normally every night.

Strange to say she has forgotten nothing of what she learned at school and at once wanted to go on with her lessons. She showed good mental aptitude and has just been confirmed by her Lutheran pastor.

SPORTS

News and Notes

BASEBALL.

In a full nine-inning battle at the Athletics' camp, at Savanah, Ga., the team of Captain Jack McInnes downed that of Captain Earl Mack Tuesday afternoon by the score of 16 to 11. It was far from a pitchers' combat, but the reason was that Connie Mack told the whipsters to float them over for flogging and the slayers hit the ball to all parts of the field. Derrick led, pounding out four hits, one of them a home run, and he played the star game of the day in the field. Pitcher Krause joined the team yesterday and he is twenty-two pounds overweight, which is really a fine condition for him, as he naturally runs lean under the summer heat.

So far Manager Mack has sorted out two men—Hogan, the California outfielder, and Derrick, the utility infielder—as permanent men for the second string of the regulars.

President Ban Johnson, of the American Baseball League, has returned to Chicago from Cincinnati, where he had a conference with Garry Herrmann, chairman of the National Commission, relative to action that should be taken to prevent Kentucky bookmakers from making a slate on American and National League pennant races. "There is no need for our acting," said President Johnson, "for the newspapers virtually have killed the plan with their criticism. If the promoters of the gambling syndicate should attempt to carry out their plans, we surely will stop them."

So many objections were offered to the McGrath Sunday baseball bill, which was on the Assembly calendar at Albany Tuesday, that it was made a special order for next Tuesday. Assemblyman Lensing was the principal opponent. The Wagner bill, reducing the time in which an action may be brought for a violation of the excise law from two years to six months after the expiration of the license, passed the Senate.

In a midwinter atmosphere, the Yankee recruits who are in Athens, Ga., under the care of Peerless Scout Arthur Irwin, put in about two hours of work yesterday morning. The afternoon turned out to be rainy and all hands remained indoors. The work Tuesday was fast, and some of the youngsters are going along at a midseason clip.

Harry Steinfeldt, who signed his contract Tuesday, and Clarence Beaumont, are lost to the Chicago Cubs. The Cubs have been asked waivers on both. The waivers were asked more than a week ago and, so far no club has attempted to get them. Doyle or Zimmerman is expected to play third for the Cubs.

The regulars of the Brooklyn National League at Hot Springs, Ark., Tuesday defeated the younger members of the same team, 10 to 3. The hitting of McElveen and Zimmerman were features, the former getting a home run and two doubles and the latter three singles.

Harvard undergraduates were overjoyed yesterday by the anouncement made yesterday morning that Dr. Frank Sexton had been engaged for a two-year term as coach of the Harvard baseball team.

Second base was a hoodooed sack in the American League in 1910. What ball player call the "jinx" roosted regularly on second—every where but in Philadelphia.

Eddie Collins was the only man in the league who escaped. That brilliant young player had the best season of his career, and is one of the few star players in the major who ever engaged in a world series without injuring his reputation.

Collins played above his form in the series with the Cubs. But while Collins was the star of the team that won the world's championship, Johnny Evers, second baseman and star of the Cub outfit, was walking on crutches. Evers had his ankle fractured in Cincinnati a few weeks before the season ended.

Jim Delehanty, of Detroit, did not finish the season. In a game in Cleveland, Delehanty wrenched his ankle and hurt his kneecap; he was forced to quit. It required several months of careful attention and nursing to bring the ankle back to condition.

Nap Lajoie had a big year, finished one point behind Ty Cobb in the official batting average, but could not escape the hoodoo. On the last day of the season, Lajoie became mixed in a scandal that for a time threatened to do a heap of damage to baseball.

McConnell, of Boston, found himself in a few scraps and the final outcome of his trouble was a trade to Chicago, in which he was one of the principals.

Herman Schaefer was the man at second base in Washington, but Herman injured his arm and had to quit second. Wade Killefer was also played there, but Wade's showing was of such nature that Washington is now planning to sell or trade him.

Gardner and LaPorte played second for New York. LaPorte will try to make good with the St. Louis Browns.

Rolla Zeider started out like a whirlwind for Chicago at second, but was replaced by McConnell, and will have to fight with seven or eight recruits for the position of shortstop this year.

St. Louis tried several men on second. The "jinx" got every one of them until Frankie Truesdale came along.

GOLF.

After an absence of four years the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association has decided to return to the hills of Westchester county for its next championship tournament. At a meeting of the executive committee recently the association voted to hold the tournament over the links of the Scarsdale Golf Club, at Hartsdale. The competition will start either on Monday, May 22, or the following day.

There is some uncertainty as yet as to the program. Custom for several years past has been to qualify in eights, but it may be deemed advisable to increase the number to sixteen. In any case the tournament is sure to extend over a period of at least four days. That will make the usual conflict in dates with the men's metropolitan championship, to begin at Garden City on May 24. The last time the women gathered in Westchester was at Knollwood, in 1907. They also met at Apawamis in 1904.

Last year the women's metropolitan was decided over the links of the Montclair Golf Club, where Miss Lillian B. Hyde won the title. Only the other day Miss Hyde won the Florida championship.

So far as Scarsdale is concerned, it may be said that the women will be put to a severe test, for the hills are steep and often. The visitors will be well taken care of, however, as Scarsdale is now able to boast of a new and modern clubhouse. The only other tournament of championship proportions held there was when the Eastern Professional Golfers' Association had their meeting at Scarsdale two years ago.

Another action taken by the women is to appoint Mrs. F. E. Donohoe, of Montclair, chairman of the handicap committee. This is a departure from custom, as heretofore the labors of handicapping have been borne by the president and secretary. Mrs. Donohoe will be allowed to select her associates to co-operate in the work.

THE FORUM.

Factory or Commuters Town?

Editor, The Daily Press:—

After reading in the colums of The Daily Press of the efforts of our Chamber of Commerce to induce manufacturers to locate in Plainfield, I asked myself the question, "Do we want to support and encourage the chamber in this matter?" In other words, do we want to make Plainfield a factory town?

Our schools are already overcrowded, although two new ones have just been completed, land has been purchased for another and other buildings are comtemplated. Our streets are not made for heavy trucking, so we would have to lay heavier pavements. We have few paid officials and the expenses of administration are comparatively light. With a large population our administrative and other expenses would rapidly increase and the tax rate would go up, as it does in all large cities. Of course, bringing facories here would increase the individual profits of our real estate brokers and perhaps, of the merchants, but for the majority of our people, the residents who have largely made the city what is it, I cannot see anything desirable in it after allowing for the amount the new factories would pay in taxes.

Many of us selected Plainfield as a place for residence because of its being a quiet residential town. We were crowded out of the larger city, where we have to go to business by the great influx of foreigners, by solid rows of flats and business blocks that have invaded all sections until there are practically no detached houses left and because we wanted to live where our families could see sunlight and grass and trees, and breath fresh air. There are already too few such places as Plainfield accessible to New York. Why should we invite the latest applicant to locate its plant here when there are hundreds of towns nearer Chicago not situated as we are, that would be benefitted by its locating within their boundaries.

Plainfield, March 7, 1911.

Number 2

WHAT IS DRY CLEANING?

Many people have erroneous ideas about what Dry Cleaning really is—believing that their clothes are actually cleaned dry—as if by magic method we pass our hands over the Garment and say "Presto!" It is clean.

Dry is a misnomer. "Chemical" cleaning would be a more intelligent name, but people might confuse "Chemical," thinking of acids, alkalies, etc., not used in Dry Cleaning.

The truth is we depend largely upon gasolene, naphtha, benzine—there's a difference—and other petroleum and coal tar products, for our cleansing bath instead of water as do the launderers.

The secret and successful operations in Dry Cleaning are learned only by hard experience and study, coupled with proper equipment. These are what enable us to do superior work.

We know our business thoroughly and are properly equipped in plant, collection and delivery.

Election of officers and reports for the past year made the annual meeting of the Plainfield Branch of the McAll Auxiliary, held at the public library, yesterday, one of unusual interest. A letter was received and read from M. Canet, the auxiliary's resident pastor in Limoges, France, where the Plainfield branch supports a station. MANIA TO BE A MAN, SUBJECT OF LECTURE

Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews will deliver the second of the series of five talks to mothers of boys in Y. M. C. A. Hall tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. His subject will be: "The Mania to Be a Man," or "Building Upon the Basis for Obedience."

A synopsis follows:

First. While the boy is not a man, he offers good material to make a man out of; our primary asset the mania in the boy to be a man; manikin, mannishness and fake manliness; God's way with the boy's soul—what is natural, right and best; the call of the wild—the instincts of children to be studied, known and utilized.

Second. Why so many "bad boys" turn out good men, the meaning of "sowing wild oats," out-growing faults the method by which primitive instinct feelings are refined into moral and spiritual characteristics; the conceit of civilization; savage and barbarous cultures may teach us much; the "Boy Scout Movement."

All mothers of boys and teachers are invited to be present and hear the subject discussed.

AMBASSADOR BRYCE MEETS LEGISLATORS.

James Bryce, British Ambassador to the United States, was the guest of the House of Assembly late Tuesday afternoon. He went to Trenton to speak at a banquet given by the Trenton Chamber of Commerce Tuesday night, and took the occasion to visit Governor Wilson, and to see part of the New Jersey Legislature in session. He expressed interest in the proceedings during his brief visit. Mr. Bryce was requested to address the legislators, but begged off, and instead held a reception, at which the members individually were introduced to him. To afford this opportunity the Assembly formally took a recess

Mr. Bryce was escorted to the State House by Adjutant-General Sadler. Governor Wilson was at the session of the Inland Waterways Commission, in the Senate chamber, at the time. He was informed of Mr. Bryce's presence, but was unable to meet him at the time.

General Sadler then took the Ambassador to the Assembly chamber. There he introduced him to the Democratic leader, Mr. Matthews, and the Republican leader, Mr. McCran. Following this, Mr. Matthews moved the recess, and Mr. Bryce was escorted to the Speaker's desk, where he was introduced to Speaker Kenney. He was invited to take a seat beside the Speaker, but declined

REFINISHING A TABLE TOP.

Here is something that you will want to know sometimes and want to know it very badly, so if you clip it out and put it in your scrapbook you will have occasion to congratulate yourself for having done so.

How often we hear the laments of those whose round top dining-room tables have been injured beyond repair by incessant card playing.

This condition should not be allowed to remain so from one season to another when a few hours' work will put the article of furniture in a presentable condition for the remainder of the year.

"I will tell you how to do this," says the sister of a cabinet-maker, who from childhood was a constant onlooker to her father's and her brother's methods in the workshop, "and you will be surprised how simple it will appear to you after I have described how I do up my own table each year.

"Firstly secure some sandpaper, numbers, one, two and three, as well as some of the finest that there is to be procured, and with the roughest that you have rub the old varnish off the table, but be careful not to scratch the wood.

"Always rub with the grain, because if you rub across the grain it will mar the appearance. This applies to quartered or golden oak only.

"When the top portion of the varnish is well rubbed off, use the next number of sandpaper, which is finer, as also the next as you get closer to the wood, but the finest sandpaper should be reserved for the later work.

"The bare wood having presented its appearance a coat of the hardest varnish procurable should be applied and allowed to dry.

"When this has dried so that it does not adhere to the hand when rubbed over it, take the finest sandpaper and go over the whole surface carefully, wearing it down sufficiently to take off the gloss and so preparing it for the adhering of the second coat.

"Work the varnish well in with the brush in this first and second coat, so that there will be no fear of blistering. Do not spare the brush, the varnish or the elbow grease.

"Go over the second coat as you did the first, with the finest sandpaper after it is thoroughly dried and then you are ready for the final touch.

"For the third and final coat of varnish make sure that you have an even brush and use the varnish sparingly, administering it with unsparing vigor, and lo! when the varnish has dried you have achieved the effect wanted and have placed in your pocket from three to five dollars that you would have given to the cabinet-maker or the professional finisher, who could have done no more than you have done."

Not His.

A tall, nervous-looking man entered the department in the railroad station where lost articles are kept.

"Anything turned in here today?" he shouted to the man at the desk.

There was no reply.

"I say, has anything been turned in here today?" he repeated in a louder tone of voice.

"Yes, sir," calmly replied the man at the desk, without raising his eyes.

"Well, why couldn't you say so? I've lost an umbrella."

There was no reply.

"I say I've lost an umbrella."

"I heard you, sir."

"You heard me? Well, why can't you tell me what was turned in?"

"Well, sir, a man was in here this morning who turned his toes in. They wouldn't happen to be yours, sir, would they?"—Yonkers Statesman.

HOW THE BLUE LAWS GOT THEIR ANCIENT NAME.

It was blue Monday at the office. Further than that, it was the 13th. And if more was needed, it was Lincoln's Birthday, twenty-four hours late, to be sure, but none the less a legal holiday in Newark.

"Might have given us the day off," muttered Sweeps, the office boy. "Nothing doing here, anyway, when half the town's closed down." He gave the boss's desk a vicious cuff with his feather duster.

"Wait till old Brownley gets here," siad the pert little stenographer. "He's late; that's what's wrong. He'll jolly the whole bunch of us along as he always does." Brownley was the head office man, reputed never to have lost his temper.

At that moment he hurried in, puffing from the extra exertion his two hundred pounds of avoirdupois had suffered. "Spent Sunday in Plainfield," he panted, red in the face, " and the train was late."

"Have a god time there?"

"If you can call a New England Sunday of a hundred years ago a good time, then I had it. Feel blue yet."

The pert little stenographer giggled. "What went wrong?" she asked

"Why, the new Mayor is enforcing the old blue laws, against Sunday sales, you know. We wanted a good smoke in the afternoon, but as we could scarcely get a doctor's perscription for it, our only course was to hunt up a Seventh Day Baptist who had shut up his shop on his particular Sabbath Day. At last we found one, but all this time I felt as if I were breaking some law and might get pinched. The Grove isn't in it any more, for there a fellow can stroll along the boardwalk into Asbury Park and find whatever he wants, at least in the temperance line, and it's all above board.

"Later on my hostess wanted some candy. Of course, she wouldn't have given it a second thought any other day of the week, but the prohibition just whetted her appetite, like the toper who wants his drink most when it can be obtained only by way of the side door. Well, we solved the difficulty by having a molasses candy pull. The stuff was all right eventually, but I got a lot of it over my best clothes, and in digging it off the nap came, too. Looks as if last summer's moths had got into it." He stopped with a wry face to rub the damaged spots.

"Do any of you know how they came to be called the blue laws?" asked a bookkeeper who was studiously inclined.

"Because they were so blue, you ninny," one rejoined.

"Because they give one the blues." guesed another.

"But blue is a favorite in most respects. For clothing its variations are probably used more than any other color. As for the heroines, two-thirds of them have blue eyes, you will find. And, finally, who would want to see anything more joyous than a brilliant blue sky?"

"A holiday would be a good sight more joyous to my way of thinking," retorted Sweeps, on whom the peotry of life had no strong hold. "But if you've the reason up your cuff, out with it. There's no work to do, anyhow, and the boss is late."

"There isn't much to tell. Blue just chanced to be the color that was used in binding the first laws passed by the Puritan settlers in Connecticut about 1650, so it is said. The measure was so strict that they met all manner of ridicule in England, where they were dubbed the blue laws, just from the cover."

"And to think if that binding had chanced to be pink, we might all have been having a pink funk here at this very minute," guffawed the head office man, doubling up with laughter. "Gee, but that's funny. Wait till I spring that on my friends from Plainfield next time they are feeling blue!"—Newark Call.

Mrs. Joseph Brown, the treasurer, reported that the society raised last year $123.64, contributing $104.54 for home missions and $7 for foreign missions. Harrison in Arabia. Mrs. Mary Winter spoke for the societies of the First M. E. church and Mrs. J. M. Whiton for the Congregational church societies, was unable to attend.

Miss Eunice Eckert, contralto soloist, sang a solo, "Compassion," by Blowers. S. B. Howe, Jr., was the accompanist. Rev. Frederick L. Greene, pastor of the chapel, offered prayer during the service and pronounced the benediction. After the meeting all adjourned to the Sunday school rooms, where a social hour was enjoyed and tea and cake were served.

Mrs. William S. Terry was the general chairman. Those who poured tea were Mrs. John Heron, Mrs. Walter Bradford, Mrs. William Jones, Mrs. Orra Eckert and Mrs. Gertrude Rittenhouse. The waitresses were Mrs. Henry Keen, Mrs. F. Dencklau, Mrs. Aaron Snyder, Mrs. George Leighs, Mrs. William Doig, Mrs. Charles Vincent, Mrs. Thomas Brown, Mrs. Alfred Aitkens, Mrs. Willard H. MEN AND RELIGIONS TOWARD MOVEMENT

A dinner in the interest of the "Men and Religious Forward Movement," will be held at the Continental hotel, Newark tomorrow evening. Preparations will be begun then for campaigns, to be held next fall in Newark and other principal cities of northern New Jersey. Representing the Young Men's Christian Association and the Brotherhoods of their churches, W. D. Murray, G. M. Rittenhouse, Albert B. Beers, Philip S. Suffren, J. H. Manning and H. E. Parker, all of Plainfield will be present.

The "Men and Religious Forward Movement" is considered one of the greatest movements for men and boys ever contemplated in the history of Christianity. The purpose of the nation-wide campaign planned by its leaders is to put into the heads and hearts of the men and boys of North America more old-fashioned gospel religion, as they term it, during the next eighteen months. Eighty-four of the principal cities of the United States and Canada have been decided upon as convention points. In many of the cities committees representing all Protestant bodies have agreed to get to work on convention details and in fully half the cases similar conventions are planned in smaller cities of which the one named is a central point.

Of the 100,000,000 of Americans and Canadians 60,000,000 belong to no churches, and even more, say the promoters of this campaign, fail to take real part in religion. The alarming prevalance of divorce, jobbery in affairs of business combines, graft in public contracts, disputes between capital and labor, with attendant strikes, corruption in politics—these and othes widerpread sins cry for cure. This cure, say these promoters, lies in personal religion. With all its faults, the Christianity of North America, with its hustle, its gifts, its missionary zeal, and its remarkable strides, is looked upon by the rest of the Christian world as a leader. Hence it must not fail, but lead, and such leadership implies knowledge of the Bible, faith in God and work for other men. Help to avert national disaster and downfall is the plea. There are said to be 3,000,000 fewer men in the churches than women. Cities are to be searched for these missing men to swing them into life and line.

The methods to be employed in this campaign have been previously summarized in this column, but it will do no harm to repeat them. They are both economic and up to date. Speakers will go as teams, losing little time between cities. Luncheons with men at noonday, dinners at night when men come direct from work, Bible study in shops parlor conferences with leading men—all are covered, and the teams will be in effect colleges with travelling faculties. There will be experts in Bible teaching, evangelism, shop addresses, street preaching, social service and work for boys. Billboards, restaurant bills of fare, laundry lists, newspaper display advertising—all these proper schemes for publicity are to be made use of. Getting ready work is to be done between now and next September. Then the real campaign is to cover September of this year to May, 1812, but churches are now being enrolled in a list of those pledged to a five-year campaign with no let-up.

Results sought include greatly increased memberships in Bible classes one hundred thousand men and boys on church rolls of membership, new missionary enterprises at home and abroad, organized efforts for civic and social betterment, and possibly the foundation of a real college whose faculty may go about the country all of the time, reaching numbers compared with which the college located in one place is small.

Sharing the Royalties.

"Let one man stand at my right hand," Horatius quoth, quoth he. "Let one abide at my left side and hold the bridge with me."

The foe they smote, and them they wrote a book and shared the gold. The Romans were like brothers in the brave days of old.—Pittsburg Post.

HOW CONGREGATION SURPRISED PASTOR

Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, was disappointed at his mid-week prayer meeting last night, when there were not more than a dozen persons present. While the few were trying to sing a hymn George E. Hall, the Sunday school superintendent walked in with about 200 people, all of whom had met at his request at the home of Rev. F. St. John Fitch, opposite the church. The pastor's face was a study while the delegation was being seated. He stopped the hymn which he had announced before the arrival of his flock, to ask where they had come from and what was the meaning of it all. Nobody answered, but everybody laughed and the pastor was obliged to proceed with the meeting with the mystery unsolved.

A service of song followed and never in the history of the church prayer meeting did the people sing with such enthusiasm; it was a great volume of song, full of inspiration to every one. Rev. Dr. Blakemore, of Bellefontaine, Ohio, a personal friend of Mr. Maguire, was present and gave an eloquent talk on "Gifts and the Return for the Giving." The speaker enlarged upon the Scripture text "With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again," and every one present was helped by the practical words. Passages of Scripture, prayer and testimony, combined to make the meeting unusually impressive and uplifting.

At the close of the meeting, a short reehearsal of the Easter carols was held, assisted by the school orchestra, which had accompanied the singing throughout the evening. Mr. Hall gave each one present an attractively prepared notice of the orchestral concert to be given at the church, Friday evening, March 31, under the auspices of the orchestra.

A Desperate Game

By JOHN K. LEYS,

Author of "The Lindsays," "The Lawyer's Secret," "The Black Terror," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, by John K. Leys.

"Exactly in the same way that it would be lost if she married you. The secret is known to us both, and she can't marry both of us, so she must make her choice. That is only reasonable."

"That's how it appears to you, is it?"

"Certainly. When Miss Fitzgerald and I are made man and wife I shall have great pleasure in presenting you with a receipt in full for the large sum you owe to my father's executors, and if you choose to throw no obstacles in our way and to respect Lady Roscommon's secret, why, I have no objection to offer you the same terms that you offered me a little while ago—£10,000 to be paid within six months of the marriage."

The lawyer had surely lost his head or he would not have tempted Sir Rufus in this way. Those who knew the old roue used to say to each other that it was always when he was most quiet that he was most dangerous. And now he was quiet enough, listening, with half closed eyes, to the lawyer's generous offers.

"I shall be allowed, I may hope, to bid adieu to the lady who has been, unknown to me, my guest for some weeks?" he asked in a mocking tone.

"I see no objection to that, so long as the interview takes place in my presence."

"Oh, by all means," said Sir Rufus, still in the same tone of mockery. "I wouldn't miss you for anything. The adieus would be quite incomplete if you were not there."

"What the devil do you mean?"

"You must be more obtuse even than usual, my good man, not to see that I mean that I shall take excellent good care that before she leaves this place Miss Fitzgerald shall know that her own lover is still alive, and know, too, who invented and palmed off on her a false report of his death. Yes, I have considerable respect for Miss Fitzgerald, and I shall not allow her to mate with a scoundrel"—

"Except yourself."

—"without knowing something of his character. I am under the impression, too, that when the young lady knows that her former lover is still alive she will not be in a hurry to wed with any one else, even if he be a pettifogging lawyer, trading on his knowledge of her family's secrets."

"The less said about that the better, I think," said Foscombe, but the tone in which he said it showed that he knew that he was beaten. As he sat moody and silent a loud laugh sounded in his ears.

Sir Rufus, still laughing, rose and, opening a drawer in the table at his side, took out a pack of cards.

"Look here," he said, with an assumption of frank bonhomie that sat very well upon him. "We are pretty much in the same position, as you remarked a little while ago. Neither of us can do anything with the other fighting against him. Unfortunately, the prize must go to one only. She cannot be divided. We both wish to have her. Let chance decide. Let us play a game of ecarte, with Miss Fitzgerald and £80,000 for the stakes."

"I would with pleasure," said the lawyer, with a sickly smile, "only I don't happen to know ecarte. But any game would do as well—Nap, for instance."

"That would be an insult to the lady—a shop boy's game!" said the baronet, with a curl of the lip.

"Bezique, then."

"A nursery pastime."

"Or cribbage."

"My good Foscombe, we are not two old women. Do you happen to know piquet?"

"No, I don't," said the lawyer shortly. He strongly objected to being called "my good Foscombe," but he did not see his way to make an effective retort to his host's insolence.

There was a short pause.

"I'll tell you what," said Sir Rufus suddenly. "You play chess, of course?"

"I know the game," said Foscombe in a hesitating way, "but I am not a good player."

"Nor am I, and we are totally unacquainted with each other's form. So much the better. Let us play a fixed number of games—say seven—and stake the whole matter in dispute on the result. Stop! We may as well make the thing complete. I will put up the whole of what is left of my possessions—the lease of my chambers in town and my furniture there, what money I have left, this castle (subject to the mortgages, about which, I fancy, you know more than I do), with the furniture and all it contains—against that old debt I owe you on your father's account and the sum you were to have over this affair. There, that's what I call a good sporting offer. If you win you gain a residence such as very few peers possess, a beautiful bride and £80,000 as her fortune. If you lose you are no worse off than you were this time last year. If I win I keep the castle and the lady with her money. If I lose I am stripped as naked as the day I came into the world. The advantage, you see, is all with you. Yet I prefer it so. What say you?"

The Most Industrious Store in Newark---The City of Industry

PICK YOUR PIANO FROM MAKES THAT ARE KNOWN

The market is flooded with pianos made under names that carry with them no guarantee of quality, mechanical or artistic excellence—many of them stenciled to the order of any concern desiring a piano named by them or for them—pianos which, after a little usage, go to rack and lose whatever little musical qualities they had, involving a tremendous waste of money on the part of the public.

The wise course to pursue in buying a piano is to select from makes that have been on the market long enough to be rightly tested—pianos bearing names that one can be proud of and that are a guarantee of the excellence of the instrument, making you safe in paying the fair price asked for them.

Here we present for selection an unrivaled collection of makes, every one of which we are glad to couple our name with, and to guarantee to the limit, assuring you that they are the best that the money will buy and that they will give the fullest satisfaction both as ornaments in the home and as musical instruments.

We represent exclusively in this teritory—

Hardman, Kranich & Bach, H. & S. G. Lindeman, Hazelton, Harrington, Hensel, Spencer

Prices ranging from $185 to $1,050.

We also represent in this vicinty—

Hardman Autotone, Harrington Autotone, Kranich & Bach Player-Pianos, Universal Self-Player, Boudoir Player-Pianos.

Prices ranging from $350 to $950.

Any of the above may be bought on the easiest terms—a little bit at the time of purchase and a little each month as suits you best.

Pianos tuned by experts. Charges reasonable.

Our library of Music Rolls for self-playing pianos is very complete.

PIANO MOVING A SPECIALTY.

After what had passed, Foscombe could not refuse this offer. He had always rather fancied himself as a chess player, though he knew he was not an expert. He thought he had a good chance of winning, and he closed with the proposal. It was settled that play was to begin after breakfast on the following day and go on without interruption until the seven games were finished. Then Sir Rufus himself showed the lawyer to his room and bade him good night as pleasantly as though, instead of being a treacherous enemy, he were his dearest friend.

CHAPTER XXIX.

ON THE TRACK.

"My dear Lorimer, is this you? But what is the matter? What has happened? You look very strange!"

"I want to find that man and kill him," said Guy Lorimer. He spoke quietly, but looked about him with a wild expression in his eyes, as if he hoped to see his enemy somewhere near.

"Come up to my chambers and tell me all about it," said Ashton Brooke, linking his arm in Guy's.

"I can't, my dear fellow. I must find him—I must find him at once!" cried Guy, attempting to free himself.

"Find whom?"

"The man who has deceived and robbed me—robbed me of what was dearer to me than life. Brooke, old man, I shall go mad if I don't find him soon. Don't detain me; there's a good fellow."

"Very good. But where are you going?"

"He has had too long a start for me to run him down," Guy muttered to himself.

"My dear Lorimer," said Ashton Brooke, laying a firm hand on his friend's arm, "I don't know what you are talking about, but I can see that you are frightfully upset about something. You can do no good by hunting for a man about the streets of London. Come with me and tell me what all this means. Then we will put our heads together, and it will be an odd thing if between us we don't find a way out of the difficulty."

Guy allowed Brooke to have his own way. They were soon at the door of Brooke's chambers, and Pepperday admitted them and opened the door of the sitting room for them. He then closed the outer door and made his way to the bedroom, which communicated with it. A thick portiere masked the door of the bedroom, so that it was the easiest thing in the world for the clerk to open the door between the two rooms, and then, by slightly moving the portiere to overhear every word the two friends said to each other.

It was not without many an inward qualm and prick of conscience that he had consented to play the spy. He loathed the task and despised himself as with cautious fingers he drew aside the curtain and bent his head to listen. Not a word escaped the eavesdropper as Guy told of his love for Eva, of Lady Roscommon's opposition and Sir Rufus Deveril's plotting, of the frustrated elopement and Eva's mysterious disappearance and of his relations with Foscombe.

"It is a strange story, is it not?" said Guy. "But the strangest part of it is to come. Brooke, I discovered this morning, just before you met me, that she, the girl I love, is in correspondence with my own friend, Foscombe!"

"No!"

The exclamation was followed by a long, low whistle.

"Were they acquainted, this man Foscombe and the girl?"

"Not so far as I know. Yet they must have been."

"My dear Lorimer," said Ashton Brooke, after a pause, "you are a man of the world. You know what odds would be laid by any man here in the Temple, or anywhere, that the facts are capable of but one interpretation?"

"That Eva preferred my friend to myself—threw me over at the last moment and is ashamed to appear and acknowledge the truth. It is what I would say myself in the case of almost any other girl. But, my dear Brooke, you may put that idea quite out of your head in connection with Eva Fitzgerald. I would gladly, cheerfully, stake my life on her sincerity."

"Very good. Then we must have a private quarter of an hour with this solicitor friend of yours."

"I ask nothing better," said Guy, with a grim smile. "But he will take care to keep out of my way. I saw the letter addressed to him in her handwriting, but he denied to my face that it was from Eva at all—talked of professional confidences and so on. But I showed him that I meant to see that letter, or the signature, at all events, and he bolted. But I must find him, Brooke." There was a sound of a chair being pushed back, and Pepperday was aware that the speaker had started to his feet. "I feel as if I were wasting time talking to you. I must find that scoundrel and force him to tell me what has become of Eva. I fancy he has managed in some way to persuade her that I was either dead or had willfully deserted her. I can't account for her not writing to me in any other way. If I had only followed him at the time he might have led me straight to the place where he has concealed her!"

"My dear Lorimer, you are taking a very great deal for granted. You have really no ground for believing that he has the lady concealed anywhere. You leave it to me, and I will go to a firm of detectives and place the matter in their hands. They will track down Foscombe in no time."

"I believe you are right," said Guy after a short pause. "But you must let me come with you. I feel as if I must be doing something."

EDGES LIABILITY MEASURE DRASTIC

An acrimonious debate raged for an hour in the State Senate yesterday morning when Senator Gebhardt made a bitter attack on the Edge employers' liability bill.

After the long discussion, consideration of amendments to the measure were made a special order for business next Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

That Senator Gebhardt intended to make a strong attack on the bill had been known for some time.

Accordingly, the friends of the measure were completely prepared. There was no exhibition of partisanship, Senator Osborne joining with Senator Edge in warding off the Huntedron Senator's attack and sharing with the Atlantic Senator the castigation meted by Gebhardt. Mr. Gebhardt opened the debate by proposing an amendment that would have wiped out the compulsory feature of the compensation act. He gave a brief history of the public movement to bring about better protection for injured working men.

He held up as an example which should be followed, the passage of an act by a Republican Congress in 1898, of a law wiping out the obnoxious defenses in cases of all injured persons employed in interstate commerce.

"The people in their clamor for better protection for the workingmen, he declared, "did not ask for a miserable makeshift piece of legislation, such as this we are considering. It is the worst in the history of the country. Nothing so bad has ever been introduced anywhere. I am moderate in my views. I don't believe in abolishing the doctrine of contributary negligence.

"As far as I would go, and I am not sure it would go that far, is to adopt the doctrine of comparative negligence and let the jury decide whether the employer is more negligent than an employe, and make settlement accordingly.

"But this act absolutely prevents a workingman collecting a dollar, except as provided in this act. If a man, earning $40 or $50 a week has an arm taken off, the most he can collect is $1,500, and he has to wait three years to get it.

"This bill, as it stands, absolutely destroys the trial by jury. It gives the Court of Common Pleas the right to decide absolutely whether the employe was guilty of neglect, the extent of the injury and the amount of damages to be paid."

"Those questions ought to be decided by a jury."

Mr. Osborne demanded where there was any such provision. Mr. Gebhardt in reply read Section 18, providing that in case of dispute over compensation the case was to be decided by a judge of the Court of Common Pleas.

SMALL INCREASE IN BOROUGH SCHOOL BUDGET.

In connection with the borough Board of Education announcement that $24,700 would be needed for the coming year's budget, the figures for previous years are given for comparison. They are as follows: 1905, $19,840; 1906, $21,830; 1907, $24,900; 1908, $14,200; 1909, $24,625; 1910, $20,000.

In 1908 two installments of railroad taxes were received. The 1911 budget included $1,325 due on a note.

It is believed that few school districts in the state can show so small a percentage of increase in the budget in seven years as the borough schools, and at the same time maintain them in a state of efficiency.

Only One Acquittal.

The fact that out of fifty-eight indictments returned at the last term of the Union county court, and twenty-four cases tried by Assistant Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., there was only one acquittal, which speaks well for the work of Mr. Hetfield during a very busy term of court.

SELF DENIAL PLAN

How the True Spirit of the Lenten Season May be Observed Here.

TO SAVE HUMAN LIVES.

An Urgent Appeal for a Worthy Cause in Which All Plainfielders are Surely Interested.

The Lenten season is one for self-denial. To forego pleasure and devote one's time for man's welfare is an accepted spirit of observance To get down to the point, why not give up a few minutes each day for a week in helping to prolong precious lives by raising funds for the Plainfield Anti-Tuberculosis Society? Here's the plan in a nutshell:

Give one dollar to the fund and then get four of your friends to do likewise. Ask each one of these four to persuade seven others to assist the cause in like fashion. Simple, isn't it? Yet, do you know that it means over $400 for the splendid work You see, it's this way: This paper represents the year in the "Year and the Day' scheme. Twelve well disposed persons represent as many months and each of these twelve appoints four representing the weeks and each of the four appoints seven representing the days in the week. Each gives a dollar.

Deny yourself one dollar's worth of luxury and also a little time to get others to do likewise. Isn't this all in keeping with the true spirit of the Lenten season? If the idea appeals to you, let us know.

"When it is recalled that tuberculosis causes about one-third of the deaths that occur between the ages of twenty and fifty years," says Dr. Simon Flexner, "it becomes at once apparent what an enormous influence the suppression of this one disease must exercise upon the development and progress of society. The eradication of tuberculosis is among the chief ends to be accomplished by all the agencies which are striving to uplift human society and to make its individual units more efficient and self sustaining. Hence the conquest of tuberculosis becomes the proper field of endeavor for the statesman, legislator, physician and layman."

Dr. Norman H. Probasco gave the final of a series of confidential talks to the boys yesterday at noon. These lectures have been well attended and have proved highly interesting. The final lecture for the girls will be given tomorrow by Dr. Clara Krans.

James Lindsay has been elected acting captain of the football team for next season. Lindsay is now captain of the newly organized track team and is doing some great work. Dixon Phillips will manage the football team next season and has already booked some games.

ROAD and FARM IMPROVEMENT

IMPROVED ROADS.

Their Importance For the Prosperity and Social Betterment of the Farmer.

Next after the preservation of the productive power of the soil there is no material aid to the farming population so important as the creation and maintenance of good roads. What the telegraph is to general information and the railroad to commerce the country highway is to the agricultural interest. The roads of any community are like the nervous system of a human body. Upon their condition depend its health and growth.

There are more than 2,000,000 miles of roads in the United States. We spend on these from $80,000,000 to $100,000,000 a year. Less than 10 per cent of the road surface has been permanently improved in any way. It has been estimated conservatively that a moderate improvement which would permit of four bales of cotton to be hauled at one load instead of three and seventy-five bushels of wheat instead of fifty-five would effect a saving of $10,000,000 on the cost of hauling these two crops alone to market.

The enormous volume of commodities that finds either its origin or its final destination on the farm or in the village must be transported over the dirt road and pay toll to the obstructions which that offers to traffic. The average country highroad makes country life more lonely and less profitable than it would be, wastes time, wastes labor, wastes money, wastes life. It helps to make the farm unattractive, promotes the drift of population cityward, disturbs still further the balance of employment, aggravates almost every evil that we have come to associate with modern civilization. The two subjects upon which it is easiest to arouse public interest today are regulation of freight rates and improvement of waterways. Were all that is desired in either direction accomplished the result could not be compared in cash value or in its social effect upon country life with the substantial improvement of the country road.

Good roads are expensive, but it costs more money to do without them than to build them. The attempt to improve the highways by the old system of local supervision, small appropriations, taxes worked out instead of paid in cash and petty political control wastes every dollar so expended Improved highways must be built under the direction of state commissions by the orders of state engineers according to scientific methods. It is a bit of technical engineering where results will always be measured by the amount of money appropriated and the methods employed.

Any one can have for the asking the information on which the state of Washington is proceeding to create probably the most extensive and valuable system of improved highways to be found in any of the states. Never was a problem simpler than that which the good roads movement offers. It consists in the provision and apportionment of resources and the enforcement of rules that will exclude politics from this work and make it as strictly a business affair as if it were construction done for an individual or a corporation.

Graded Values of Manure.

The plant value of a ton of manure varies somewhat with the kind of live stock. Thus young, growing animals and animals giving milk will retain a larger proportion of the nitrogen and phosphorus than fattening stock, work horses or other manure animals. On the other hand, it is well to understand that the difference in value frequently considered, as, for example, between sheep manure and cattle manure, is due almost entirely to differences in water content.

As a matter of fact, manure from work horses or from fattening steers fed on clover hay and heavy grain ration is fully as rich and valuable as sheep manure if both are reduced to the same percentage of dry matter. Of course sheep manure containing only 60 per cent of water is twice as rich as cattle manure containing 80 per cent of water.

Handling Breachy Cow.

Watch the cows when they become restless for any cause at this season and make the fences so tight that they cannot possibly break through them. Some of the cows may not be at all breachy, but when one cow manages to get through the fence the rest will soon learn the trick and give a lot of trouble with maturing crops. Get ahead of the cows on the fence question and do not let them get ahead of you.

INCOME FOR P.C.C.

Members to be Asked to Ratify Scheme Which Increases Revenue $2,000.

ANNOUNCE PLANS FOR SEASON.

Coburn Players Performance June 5; Field Day in May; Independence Day Event and Big Junior Tournament.

Following the decision of the Plainfield Country Club at its annual meeting in February to increase the club dues, so as to provide a margin above income for needed improvements, including enlargements of the men's locker room and women's dressing room, which are imperative, and at some future time to increase the capacity of the water plant and extend the piazzas, the trustees have been directed to formulate a schedule of dues and call a special meeting of the club for the purpose of changing the rules so as to produce such additional revenue.

The matter was throughly discussed at a meeting of a large committee this week and a committee unanimously recommended a plan by which about $2,000 additional income can be produced without raising the active dues more than $5. The house members will pay $12 a year, but will also have the privilege of the grounds, the same as the associate members. Children under fourteen years of age will pay only $6 as at present. A meeting of the club will be held to ratify this plan.

These are the new officers: President, Leighton Calkins; vice-president, J. M. Shellabarger; secretary, George S. Clay; treasurer, S. Durell Lounsbury. The chairman of committees are: House, J. P. Murray; green, J. E. Erickson; golf, R. S. Rowland; tennis, S. W. Merrihew; buildings and grounds, J. P. Stevens.

Another out-of-door Shakespeare play will be given by the Coburn players on Monday evening, June 5. It is also likely that baseball will be added to the sports this spring. The trustees are also considering running a stage from the trolley terminal to the clubhouse, on a specified schedule. An opening field day will probably be held early in May. There will be music and a reception in the afternoon, and a dance in the evening. There will also be the regular Saturday evening dances for members. It is expected to repeat the Fourth of July celebration this year.

In September there will be a tournament, under the auspices of the Metropolitan Golf Association, for the Junior championship, open to boys of seventeen and under. This tournament is the first event of its kind in the country. Many fine prizes will be offered. Four new sheds are being built, which will be reserved solely for horses and carriages. The driveways are being resurfaced, and the caddie house has been thoroughly repaired and repainted. A high fence has been built back of the stable, enclosing a large yard which will provide a place for rubbish.

PLAINFIELD TO MEET EUREKAS IN GREAT GAME OF SOCCER.

The postponed game of soccer football between the Plainfield Association Football Club and the Eureka A. A., of Kearney, will be played tomorrow afternoon on the Clinton avenue grounds, weather permitting. The game was to have been played last Saturday, but a snow storm interfered. The contest will be started promptly at 3 o'clock.

This game is of special interest as the Eurekas are in first place in the league series, while Plainfield is second. The local club will present its strongest lineup tomorrow and hope to give the Eurekas their first defeat of the season in soccer. The visitors will be accompanied by a large crowd of rooters.

Maurice Coyle.

Maurice Coyle, aged forty-five years, died yesterday morning at his home on Prospect avenue, Dunellen, after a long illness due to pulmonary trouble. He was a native of Pennsylvania and an ironworker by trade having been employed at the Levering & Garrigues plant at West Dunellen, of which his brother, John H. Coyle, of Waynewood place and West Front street, is superintendent. He is survived by his wife, who was Mrs. Loughlin, nee Hill. The funeral will be held in St. Jhn's church, Dunellen, tomorrow morning and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery, this city.

LOCAL MOOSE GIVE BOWLERS A BANQUET

Plainfield lodge, No. 310, Loyal Order of Moose, gave a banquet at the Hotel Waldorf, last night in honor of its bowling team in the Fraternal League. The affair followed the regular business meeting during which two candidates were initiated.

Eighty members and special guests enjoyed the dinner which was one of the best Proprietor Windham could arrange. At its conclusion a social time was enjoyed with Dictator John J. Carroll presiding. The latter gave a splendid address and others were made by Joseph Harrigan, Charles L. Kling, and various officers. "Johnny" Campbell played the piano and sang several songs that were heartily encored. John Varden, James McCarthy and Charles L. Holstein also contributed several pleasing vocal selections. Altogether the gathering was one of the pleasantest the Moose have yet held.

The committee of arrangements was composed of John Varden and James McCarthy.

COURT CONFIRMS THE CLARK DIVORCE

The Court of Errors and Appeals at Trenton today confirmed the decision of Vice Chancellor Howell in advising an absolute divorce for George W. Clark, of East Front street, who brought suit against his wife, Mrs. Maggie Clark on statutory grounds, naming the corespondent.

The matter has been in the higher court since more than a year ago when Mrs. Clark appealed from the decree of the vice chancellor.

Argument was presented in briefs filed at the November term of the Appeals court. Sensational testimony had been taken in the Chancery court at the trial in Newark.

Former City Judge William A. Coddington was counsel for Clark while George W. V. Moy represented the wife.

BILL OF VAUDEVILLE FOR COLLEGE BENEFIT

The program announced for the coming benefit for Mount St. Mary College, which will be held in the Plainfield theatre on Friday evening, March 17, includes the following specialists:

Tim McMahon and Edythe Chapelle in their famous sketch "Why Hubby Missed the Train;" Maggie Cline in "Throw Him Down, McClusky;" Ross and Fenton, of Weber & Fields, in specialties; Macy and Hall in a sketch entitled "A Timely Awakening;" Mlle. Mathilde Bruguiere, in operatic selections, and the Florence Family in gymnastic stunts which have proved to be the marvel of all Europe.

The box office has been besieged for seats since the announcement of the benefit was made and it behooves those who intend buying tickets to get in line before the capacity of the auditorium is exhausted.

An added artist, Harry Jolson, who is known as a "near Caruso" will finish the program. Mr. McMahon, who has been instrumental in securing this array of talent, will personally attend to the details of the various productions, which is a guarantee of public approval.

NETHERWOOD CHURCH C. E. SOCIETY'S MEETING.

At the business meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Netherwood Reformed church last evening at the home of Miss Anna Smith on Netherwood avenue, it was decided to build a tennis court and a committee, with Miss Smith as chairman was appointed with power to secure the necessary ground and appliances. It was also decided by the young women of the society to give a play on April 27 or 28, details of which will be given later.

Following the business meeting a social time was enjoyed by those present, vocal and instrumental music and refreshments taking up the balance of the evening.

Fine Singers at Proctor's.

"The Four Southern Singers," appearing at Proctor's theatre, this week, are making a big hit with their popular songs and old-time ballads. Adolph Zink, in impersonations of stage favorites, illustrates his changes and makeup by the use of moving pictures. "All a Mistake," is the title of a fine sketch, full of comedy and Davis and Bogard in "The Grocery Boy's Pal," present an excellent singing and talking act sure to please.

'A PAIR OF IDIOTS' TONIGHT'S OFFERING

"A Pair of Idiots" will be presented at Hope chapel, this evening under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society, and the direction of Mrs. G. Stuart Simons, dramatic coach. The cast, which has shown remarkable talent in amateur theatricals, is as follows:

Col. Archibald Bradley, a hot tempered Virginia gentlemen, Frank Rimmer; Peter Jennings from Arkansas, C. Howard Firstbrook; Dr. George Gunther, Peter's friend, Harold H. Brownell; Miss Lucretia Bradley, the colonel's maiden sister, Miss Mary N. Mortimer; Miss Jean Bradley, the colonel's daughter, Miss Edna Eckert; Miss Winifred Lester, the colonel's niece and ward, Miss Eliazbeth Slorah.

The comedy is in two acts and affords many amusing situations. The committee of arrangements comprises the Misses Eunice Eckert, Elizabeth Slorah, Clara Hunter and Melville Roseberry and Donald Mortimer. Lester N. Sutton is the business manager and David Wardrop, stage manager.

STUDENTS ATTAIN HIGH RECORDS

The principal of the State Normal School at Trenton has just sent to each high school a transcript of the record made at that institution by the students from that high school for he first half year 1910-1911.

The North Plainfield High School is represented at the Trenton Normal School by five students who were graduated from the high school last June; namely: Edythe Schenck, Anna Louise Layton, Henrietta Winn, Henrietta Englehardt, and Mabel Townley. The marks assigned to students in their studies are poor, fair, good and excellent. Of the thirty-four marks received by the five students mentioned, ten were excellent, twenty-two good, two fair, none poor. This is a very creditable record for a group of students to attain during the first half year of their course.

WILL CELEBRATE ST. PATRIC'KS DAY

Frank Bergen, of Elizabeth, will be the toastmaster at the seventeenth annual banquet of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, to be held on Saturday evening, March 18, at the Y. M C. L. A. Hall, Elizabeth.

General Dennis F. Collins, president of the organization, announced this morning that the demand for seats was much larger than it had been in previous years, and that the committee would be forced to close the sale earlier than usual.

The banquet this year promises to be especially entertaining. The speakers and their toasts follow: "Our Country," Attorney-General Edmund Wilson; "The Day We Celebrate," the Rev. James Murphy, of Jersey City; "New Jersey," Dr. Britton D. Evans, of Morristown; "The Irish Character as Reflected in American History," Peter Francis Daly, of New Brunswick, and "Friendly Sons,' by Joseph M. Noonan, of Jersey City.

The menu will be in charge of Purcell, the well-known Orange caterer, who has served the banquets for the organization for the past ten years.

The music will be in charge of Prof. Harry Wetton, and vocal selections will be rendered by Arthur P. Baker, of New York.

The floral decorations will be by Leahy, and the color decorations by Laggren Brothers.

General Collins, as president, will make a short address following the dinner, and will introduce the toastmaster, Mr. Bergen.

Women's Society to Meet.

The Women's Society for Christian Work of the Seventh-Day Baptist church will hold its regular meeting for work and busines Wednesday afternoon, March 15. Mrs. H. M. Maxson will tell of her recent trip through the South and especially her visit to Tuskegee Institute.

NORTH PLAINFIELD TWP. LIGHTNING DISTRICTS

The question of establishing lighting districts in North Plainfield township, was discussed at a meeting of the township committee at Watchung, yesterday, and the boundaries adopted are the same as those used in the division of road work throughout the township. This, it is believed, will prove satisfactory to all the residents.

The committee appointed Edward Canning a policeman in accordance with a decision reached at a previous meeting. W. deLaR. Anderson, chairman and Alfred Brokaw and Alexander Archibald, comprising the committee, were all present at the meeting.

Establish Dividing Line.

Civil Engineer F. A. Dunham, who was engaged for the purpose, has established a point of division between North Plainfield and Warren townships, and the North Plainfield Township Committee is awaiting the recovery of John Cooper, of Warren township, before taking final action. A full attendance of the committees is desired at the meeting. Mr. Cooper broke his leg a few weeks ago and is now improving. He hopes to be able to go out soon.

MISS FLEMING WINS MORE GOLF HONORS

Miss Marie Wagner, of the Hamilton Grange Lawn Tennis Club, won the women's national indoor lawn tennis championship yesterday on the courts of the Seventh Regiment armory, while in the doubles Miss Barbara Fleming, of this city, paired with Miss Elizabeth C. Bunce, won the title in doubles.

Miss Fleming, a young girl of seventeen, caused considerable more than a ripple of enthusiasm by her sterling performance in the doubles. To her individual playing and steadiness may in a large measure be credited the victory of her side. Always aggressive and hitting with wonderful sweeps of her racquet, Miss Fleming outrallied her more experienced opponents. She and Miss Bunce worked well together as they did the previous day when they defeated the champions, Miss Marie Wagner and Miss Clara Kuttroff. The rallies in the doubles match were the longest ever seen in the championship tournament. Miss Fleming and Miss Bunce won in straight sets.

SUFFRAGE TALK BY PROF. JOHN DEWEY

Announcement is made by the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield, that Professor John Dewey, of Columbia University, will address the meeting on the evening of March 14, his subject being "Suffrage."

The speaker is well known as a psychologist and many will be glad to hear his address. It was expected that Mrs. Raymond Robins would be present on this occasion to speak on working conditions of women, but owing to the fact that she is engaged in arbitrating the strike of the garment makers in Chicago, she will be unable to be present.

The meeting will take place in the newly acquired rooms in the Frost building on Park avenue and it is earnestly hoped that a large audience will be present to hear Professor Dewey.

PARENTS ARRAIGNED; CHILDREN CARED FOR

Truancy cases took up the greater portion of Judge DeMeza's time in the city court this morning. The families of Julia Conger, of Cottage place and Amadeo Delila, of Leland avenue, being those which had offended. Mrs. Conger has three children who have not attended at all regularly the Bryant School and the school authorities say that even when they do come for a session the youngsters are so dirty that they have to be sent back. An investigation of the Conger premises revealed a state of filth almost unbelieveable. Arrangements will be made today to take the children from the parents and put them in charge of suitable persons and be given a much needed bath.

Of the Delila children there was nothing much to criticize except their non-attendance. The father declared that he was so poor that he could do no better than he is now doing. His wife is dead and he said he had been unable to secure a woman who would come in by the day and care for his offspring for the sum he could afford to pay. Miss Mabelle Phillips, who heard the whole story, suggested a plan which the father accepted and three of the five will be taken to the Children's Home on Sunday and the other two will be cared for by Delila. Michael Colluci, the Richmond street banker, acted as interpreter and pleaded for leniency for Delila, who he said was working hard to earn a living, and who he believed was honest and doing the best he could.

TO BURY REV. MR. DIGGS AT LAWNSIDE MONDAY.

Presiding Elder A. L. Murray, of the Newark District, is in this city, making arrangements for the funeral service of Rev. John T. Diggs, which will be held at the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church, Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock. A number of the local colored ministers as well as others from various parts of the State will take part. The burial will take place at Lawnside, near Camden.

Rev. John T. Diggs was pastor of the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church for four years and was beloved by his entire congregation, who sincerely mourn his death.

Miss Edna Cole and Miss Gertrude Schleif, accompanied by Stephen Schlief, of Park avenue, are spending several days at Atlantic City.

MANY MOURNERS AT F. B. CLARK'S BIER

The funeral service of Frank B. Clark, son of Mrs. Anna Clark and the late Bernard Clark, was held at St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock, this morning, where a solemn high mass of requiem was offered for the repose of his soul. There was a very large attendance of relatives and friends from Brooklyn, Boston, Washington and this city; also a large delegation from Plainfield Aerie, No. 866, Fraternal Order of Eagles.

Father B. M. Bogan, pastor of St. Mary's church, conducted the service, being assisted by Father Hogan and Father Sciolla. There was a great many floral tributes, comprising several pillows, wreaths, etc., from relatives and friends; also from Palinfield Aerie, No. 866, F. O. E., and the Rising Sun Brewery Company. One handsome tribute was a floral piece representing "Gates Ajar."

URGE PASSAGE AF FREEHOLDERS' BILL

Thomas Pierson and William J. Bourdon, of Elizabeth, members of the Union County Board of Freeholders, were about the State House at Trenton, this week urging the pasage of the bill introduced by Senator Fitzherbert to reduce the members of boards of freeholders to five, these officials to be elected at large in the county.

Mr. Pierson claims that if the Fitzherbert bill is enacted into law and Union county is put under its operation, the administration of county affairs will be greatly improved. He says that it would be particularly advantageous to Elizabeth which now pays more than half of the county taxes but is only entitled to four members on the Board of Freeholders.

PLAINFIELDERS VISIT M'AULEY MISSION

Nineteen members of the mission study class of the Epworth League of the First M. E. church, visited the Jerry McAuley mission at 316 Water street, New York, last night. The trip was arranged by Irving Dodge, of the league, assisted by Miss Ada Stark, teacher of the mission study class, and proved of much help to the members in their line of study.

There were over two hundred men at the meeting last night, nearly all drunkards or reformed men. Superintendent Wyburn, who succeeded the late Col. Hadley and is also a reformed man, told of his experiences. Until his death a short time ago, John Huyler was president of the mission association. Plans are now underway for tearing down the old mission building and erecting a commodious new structure. It is said that about 1,500 persons are converted at this mission every year. The serving of sandwiches and coffee during last night's meeting was witnessed by the Plainfielders.

CAPT. DALEY AFFLICTED BY SLIGHT PARALYTIC STROKE.

Captain James Daley, of fire headquarters, was stricken with a slight paralytic stroke early this morning, and is now confined to his home on West Front street. Dr. Dundon is in charge and declares the patient must have absolute rest and quiet. The captain was affected before he left headquarters to go to breakfast, but in his usual quiet way declared it was nothing serious. Before he had reached home he reeled and all but fell yet refused proffered aid and continued on. He was exhausted when he reached his mother's apartment in the Stillman building.

Captain Daley has been in the city fire department for many years and bears a most enviable record. He has been injured and burned many times in the discharge of his duty, but always takes it as a matter of course.

REALTY CO. PROBE

Metropolitan Concern Has Scores of Victims in This City Alone.

INVESTIGATING SWINDLINGS.

Conducted a Store Here and Dealt in Real Estate—Losses of Local Colored People Are Considerable.

Through the arrest in New York yesterday of L. R. Collins, secretary of the Metropolitan Mercantile & Realty Co., a concern dealing, so it is alleged in fictitious real estate, the colored population of this city have become assured that their investments in homes amounting to anywhere between $30,000 and $50,000 is a very doubtful asset and they are thinking seriously of engaging counsel and having claims for the certificates of stock of the company presented in the New York courts.

So far as could be learned today there are between 100 and 150 colored people in this city who have invested their savings in stock of the concern from which they now will probably never receive a cent of return. Through the agency of the realty company established in this city about fourteen months ago many dupes were secured. They bought shares of the par value of $100 each for the sum of $10 and so on up to the "high water mark" of $25 a share. By the holding of a certain number of shares the purchaser was entitled to buy a house and lot, paying for the stock and the house at the same time in small installments.

W. A. Stills, a barber, invested in ten shares of the company and when he had paid in $125 according to his agreement with the company, he was entitled to a certificate of stock representing the ten shares. When he demanded his certificate it was refused on the ground that he had not fulfilled his part of a contract which the company claimed he had made with them to take ten more shares at an advanced figure. Mr. Stills immediately withdrew his subscription and was about ready to sue the company for his certificate. He is thankful today that he did not invest any more money.

A tract of land on West Fourth street, which formerly belonged to the Spooner estate, was part of the land secured by the Metropolitan Mercantile & Realty Co., but it is said that their holdings in the land consisted mostly of wishes and mortgages. Anyhow they thought they owned it and sold it in small parcels to those credulous enough to take the company's word that they owned it. Today there are many who are mourning the loss of amounts varying from $100 to $1,000.

It was said this morning that those who are interested in the concern financially are absolutely irresponsible financially and that the company had knowingly defrauded thousands of colored people throughout the State. Among those who have been caught in the tangle here are E. L. Maynard, William Wright, who is was said was formerly an agent of the concern; John Venable, of West Fourth street; Edward McCoy, of West Third street, and many others.

Wright conducted the store established by the company at the corner of Plainfield avenue and West Fourth street, but he got out of the game when he found that it was not what it was represented to be. He now conducts the store for his account. The amount of money lost in this city may never be fully known, but it amounts to thousands of dollars.

It is not alone the colored people whom the company tried to get involved in the financial tangle. Chas. H. Hand was approached on a real estate matter which would have eventually caused him much chagrin if not a money loss, but Mr. Hand would have nothing to do with the concern. The progress of the case instituted against the concern in New York will be watched with interest by those of this city who have invested.

When the company began business they promised to open a bank exclusively for colored people! a huge department store where the employees should all be colored; and a huge church where the finest of music and the best of colored preachers would be the portion of members. None of these great institutions have materialized and nothing is to be seen of the assets of the concern excepting the handsome office furniture at Eighth avenue and Forty-sixth street, New York.

The specific charge against Collins is swindling Robert Steward, a colored man, of Brooklyn, out of $485 in a sale of property at Rahway which the company did not own.

NUNS SAVE BABIES.

Carry Fifteen Infants From Smoke-filled Rooms.

New Brunswick, March 10.—Fire broke out yesterday morning in St. Mary's Home while seventy-five children, inmates of the home, were at breakfast.

Mother Superior Mary Victorine calmly told the children to go at once to the main building, 100 yards distant, and the children filed out orderly.

Then the nine sisters in charge of the building were ordered to rescue the fifteen infants asleep on the top floor. The sisters rushed through the smoke, each one taking a baby, and some of them two, and carried the children to safety.

The firemen had an hour's task checking the fire, which started from an overheated chimney next to the big boiler. The fact that the house was an old one, with filled-in walls, was all that saved it. The loss was confined to $1,000. The house is connected with the Trenton diocese and is directly in charge of St. Peter's Roman Catholic church.

A fine of $10 was imposed. Weeks requested to be allowed to drive the horse back to Elizabeth, but Mrs. Ainsworth refused.

Oppose Paid Department.

Rahway, March 10.—A petition is being circulated among property owners, which will be presented to the Common Council, asking for the retention of the present volunteer fire department, instead of installing a paid department, as advocated by the fire and water committee. The present volunteer department is generally conceded to be one of the best in the State and it is thought that the city is not in a position to assume the expense of a paid department, which will cost some $20,000 to install and something like $10,000 per year to maintain, while the present department costs but $2,200.

Girl to Christen Westfield.

Westfield, March 10.—The Central Railroad will launch a new ferryboat to be known as the "Westfield." The launching will take place at the Harlan & Hollingsworth shipyards in Wilmington, Del., on April 1. W. C. Hope, vice-president of the railroad, visited here yesterday and requested Mayor J. A. Dennis to select a Westfield girl to christen the boat. Many prominent Westfielders will be invited to attend the launching. The Central Railroad lighter now named Westfield will be put out of commission when the new ferryboat is launched.

Daniel D. Denny, of Fairview avenue, who has been seriously ill with an attack of pleuro-pneumonia, is improving slowly.

BASEBALL.

The whole baseball world knows that Edward G. Barrow, now president of the Eastern League, while manager of the Paterson Club, brought the mighty Hans Wagner into prominence, but few of the fans are aware of the fact that Barrow once owned the Peerless twirler, Christy Mathewson. It was while the executive of the senior minor organization was in charge of the Toronto club that Matty was turned over to him. "Big Six" failed to report to the Maple Leafs as the baseball war between the American and National leagues was on at that time and Matty finally hooked up with the Giants. What Mathewson has done for the Polo Ground organization is history.

"Do you know," said Barrow in discussing the matter, "I have often wondered if Matty would have made as big a hit in the Eastern as he did in the National had he joined the Toronto club? I had a great staff of twirlers that year and had strings on some others. Doc White belonged to me but wanted too big a salary. I had Brennen, Ritter, Altrock and Flarity. Connie Mack, Smith and myself watched Matty play a football game the winter before he went to Norfolk and Mack said at that time that he believed Mathewson would prove to be a wonderful twirler, having seen him work for his college nine the summer before.

"Matty was turned over to me by Captain Cunningham, of the Norfolk club, in 1910 with the understanding that he was to get half of the price I received in case I sold the twirler. Andy Freedman had bought the big fellow in the fall of 1900, but refused to pay for him. The matter was settled in the courts and Cunningham received a small sum for the great twirler.

"New York didn't think he would do and turned him over to Cincinnati. The Redlegs tired of the bargain and returned him to the Giants in exchange for Rusie. The Philadelphia Athletics got mixed up in the deal and Connie Mack got after Matty, but he eventually went to the Giants.

"A curious coincidence is the fact that the first game Matty twirled for the Giants Joe Kelley, now manager of the Toronto club, was the first Brooklyn batter to face him. I have had some great ball players working under me in my time and but for the troublesome times in baseball in 1901 I would have landed Matty for Toronto. This is an incident in the diamond career of the great twirler that is known to only a few persons."

GOLF.

Dave Honeyman, the new professional at the Forest Hill Field Club, will begin work at once for the coming season. Many improvements to the course are contemplated, and provided the ground remains clear of snow from now on rapid progress will be made.

According to a dispatch from Southampton ground will be broken at once for a home for the National Golf Club. This is the organization founded and made famous by Charles B. Macdonald, because of the fact that many of the holes are reproductions of parts of well known links abroad. The national course lies between the links of the Shinnecock Hills Golf Club, Bull's Head Bay and Peconic Bay and the clubhouse will be erected on the most northern point.

This site, long since picked out as ideal by the founders of the course, is on a bluff immediately overlooking the blue waters of the Peconic. From this point of vantage it will be possible to see more than half the eighteen greens.

The dispatch also says that the clubhouse will cost $45,000, and must be completed by July. The building will be three stories high, 60x115 feet, built of brick and fireproof material throughout. Laundry, kitchen and heating plant will be in the basement, while much of the space on the first floor will be devoted to lounging rooms, parlor, dining room and individual lockers. Members' bedrooms will be on the second floor and servants' quarters on the third. Rumor also has it that the New York Yacht Club will have an anchorage within a short distance of the links.

Lamy Turns Pro.

Saranac Lake, N. Y., March 10.—Edward Lamy, indoor and outdoor national amateur skating champion at all distances, Wednesday withdrew from the ranks of amateur sport to take up professional athletics. Lamy has signed a contract to play with the Mansfield baseball team of the Ohio State League. He will play an outfield position with the Mansfield team.

GEN. COLLINS TALKS ABOUT ARMY MOVES

The rapid mobilization of United States troops in Texas and along the Mexican frontiers is far more serious than any war maneuvres. This is the opinion of Brigadier General Dennis F. Collins as it was given to a reporter yesterday.

In an interview he said that no one but the authorities at Washington can tell the real import of the sudden getting ready of troops and powerful battleships, which are sailing under sealed orders. Reference was made to the rumor that the State militia was to be called on to take part in the so-called war game, but as to this General Collins said he had no information, though it was possible that there might be some such move on the part of the department and it would be a fine opportunity for the officers to observe and learn general conditions as they occur in actual warfare.

Talking along general lines in connection with the present getting ready of forces, the general said that at the time the world cruise of our battleship fleet was made, it was only a question of whether or not the fleet of this country could get into Pacific waters before the fleets of Japan left their country to make an attack on the Western coast of this country. He said that according to the advices received at Washington from their men in Japan, the Japanese fleets were in readiness at a moment's notice to begin hostilities and it was only the far sightedness of President Roosevelt that averted war at that time.

The rapid work that is being done on the Panama Canal is another incentive to the Japanese to open hostilities as soon as they can do so with a reasonable assurance that this country will be caught napping, General Collins believes, for once the canal is completed it will be impossible for Japan to get her eefft to this part of the world ahead of the American fleets.

Whether or not he thought the present mobilization of troops had anything to do with this or not the general refused to say, but he did say that it must be a great comfort to the citizens of this Nation to know that the army was ready at a moment's notice to give a good account of itself in event of war, or even the suggestion of a war.

TO INTRODUCE NEW FREEHOLDERS' BILL

City Attorney James C. Connolly, as a member of the Elizabeth Board of Trade's legislative committee, informed that body last night that a bill had been prepared for introduction in the Legislature, providing for a small Board of Freeholders for Union County and counties of similar classification. The new measure provides for the election of Freeholders on the same basis as Assemblymen and would give Elizabeth fairer representation than it has at present in the twenty-man board. He referred to the fact that the city pays more than one-half of the rateables and has the greater portion of the county's population.

The proposed measure, he said, provided for a five or seven-man board, and he was under the impression that the present Board of Freeholders was in favor of it. A salary of $1,800 was also provided in the bill. He thought the board members should support the measure. It was referred back to the legislative committee for investigation. This committee will also look into the referendum bill giving a salary of $500 to the members of the Board of Fire Commissioners.

COLLINS NOW SENIOR BRIGADIER COMMANDER.

It will come as a surprise to many, perhaps, that with the acceptance of the resignation of Brigadier General Edward A. Campbell, of the First Brigade of the National Guard of this State, General Dennis F. Collins becomes the senior brigadier general of the State forces.

The resignation of General Campbell has been accepted by the Governor, who compliments the general on his long and faithful service to the State. General Collins does not know at this time whether or not there will devolve on him any new duties as the senior brigadier general of the State, though he will probably receive notification of the fact in a few days.

It has been practically decided that the organizations in his brigade will go into camp this year at Sea Girt but prior to that time there will be a school of instruction for officers only at which there will be an officer of the regular army in charge.

Funeral of Little Victim.

The funeral of Matthew H. Foxten, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Foxten, who was burned to death Wednesday afternoon, was held at the parents' home on Steiner place, this morning. There were numerous floral tributes from the relatives and friends who were in attendance. Burial was made in St. Mary's cemetery.

Not Affected.

"I suppose," said the stranger in the sanctum, "that since you have pased under the control of the vested interests you will drop the muck-raking line of endeavor?"

"Oh, no, indeed," replied the editor. "That's an erroneous impression. Our reform efforts will not suffer in the least. For instance, here are two articles which will appear in our next number. One is on 'Municipal Inefficiency in the Enforcement of Proper Regulations Regarding the Disposal of Peanut Shells,' with seven half-tone cuts of backyards in Portland and oHuston. This article is called 'Petty Graft Among the Crap Players a National Disgrace,' profusely illustrated. Oh, no, we are still busy with the uplift."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Coal Price Reduction.

The local coal dealers were notified today by the operators that instead of granting the customary reuction of fifty cents a ton on coal on April 1, the reduction this year will be twenty-five cents and that for the succeeding five months there will be an increase of ten cents per ton, as usual. The present retail price of coal is $6 per ton, but instead of the retail price being $5.50 during April, May, June, July and August, it will probably be $5.75 at least if not $6 and then $6.50 for the balance of the year.

Too Early For Him.

A city chap went to work for a farmer out in one of the western counties of Kansas recently. At 3 o'clock the next morning the farmer called to him to begin the day's labors. A few minutes later the young man came out of the bedroom carrying his grip.

"You ain't a-goin' to take that grip with you to work, air you?" asked the farmer.

"Naw," answered the man with a fine scorn, "but I'm goin' to find some place to stay at night."—Exchange.

"What are pretty girls made of?"
You know how the old rhyme ran,
But science and poetry differ,
For list to the learned man:

There's chloride of potash and sulphur,
Of starch a good sized lump,
Iron enough for six railroad spikes,
Ain't he the prosy old chump?

There's phosphorus twenty-four ounces,
There's carbon and candle fat,
About nine dozen lumps of sugar—
We know he would find lots of taht.

Some thirty-six quarts of water,
Three thousand feet of gas,
Salt about two dozen spoonsfuls.
An there is your lovelist lass.

DRY CLEANING TALK

Number 2

WHAT IS DRY CLEANING?

Many people have erroneous ideas about what Dry Cleaning really is—believing that their clothes are actually cleaned dry—as if by magic method we pass our hands over the Garment and say "Presto!" It is clean.

Dry is a misnomer. "Chemical" cleaning would be a more intelligent name, but people might confuse "Chemical," thinking of acids, alkalies, etc., not used in Dry Cleaning.

The truth is we depend largely upon gasolene, naphtha, benzine—there's a difference—and other petroleum and coal tar products, for our cleansing bath instead of water as do the launderers.

The secret and successful operations in Dry Cleaning are learned only by hard experience and study, coupled with proper equipment. These are what enable us to do superior work.

We know our business thoroughly and are properly equipped in plant, collection and delivery.

WESTFIELD'S PROBE CAUSES SENSATION

The third meeting of the Westfield Council investigating committee was held in the Town Hall last night. Former Councilman Charles M. Affleck testified that he was interested in the sale of $160 worth of books to the town by Boschen & Wefer during his two years in office. He said that he did not solicit the orders and did not make enough to retire from business. Attorney Oliver placed John Bell upon the stand. He testified that he was foreman of the Standard in 1910, but did not make out the bills for legal advertising. Lawyer Oliver showed him several bills for advertising set in 8-point type instead of agate, and asked him if he measured the advertisements on the bills sent the town. Mr. Bell replied that he did not.

Charles E. Cox, building inspector in 1909-1910, admitted that he did not issue permits for the sash and blind factory for Crickenberger Bros. and two houses built to Welsh & Son. He said he received a $1 fee for the blind factory and was sure he turned over the money to the Council. He said the plans for the Welsh houses were mislaid and when found he returned the fee to W. S. Welsh. The permit for the two houses was issued by his successor in office. It was brought out in the testimony that Mr. Cox paid the town $3 too much for the permit on the house of Mrs. Pauline Johnson, on Broad street. Mr. Cox could not show any records of permits issued to J. E. Grafe for a house on Fremont avenue; E. S. Randolph, for house on Hillcrest avenue; H. L. Russell, for house on Fairfield circle, and H. C. McVoy, on Dudley avenue.

H. L. Russell testified that he sent Cox a check for $7 for permits in June, 1910. Fire Chief Decker and ex-Councilman J. W. Davis gave testimony regarding the sale of feed by Councilman Hohenstein to the town and the renting of his building as a temporary place for the fire department. Chief Decker admitted that the feed had been ordered by him of Mr. Hohenstein. He said he knew it was against the law, but thought it was right morally. Mr. Davis testified that he was present at the meeting of the fire committee of the Council when the Barton building was rented for the fire department, but that he did not know Mr. Hohenstein owned the building at that time. Councilman Casey admitted that he had indirectly sold the town goods through Judge Toucey. Mr. Casey said that he understood Judge Toucey was given authority to purchase the goods needed for the police department and that he sold the goods to Toucey for the town.

An effort was made by Attorney Oliver to find out whether or not any commission had been paid Chief Decker for the purchase of the fire truck. Chief Decker testified that no commission was paid to him or any one else that he knew of.

Pin Tray for Mrs. Wilson.

Trenton, March 10.—A pin tray made from the original plate from which were printed the invitations to the inauguration of Woodrow Wilson as Governor, was presented to Mrs. Wilson yesterday by former Mayor Daniel Bechtel, of this city. The original plate was engraved by Mr. Bechtel, and then by artistic handicraft he transformed the plate into a pin tray with four legs. It was presented to Governor Wilson, to be delivered to his wife.

James Fitzgerald.

James Fitzgerald, aged 48 years, of 327 Cottage place, died this morning at Muhlenberg Hospital, where he had been ill with typhoid fever since February 28. He was a plasterer by occupation having worked for several contractors in this city. He is survived by a wife; also a sister, Mrs. Andrew Carney, of the borough. Announcement of funeral will be made later.

Boy Breaks Leg.

Elizabeth, March 10.—John Kalnin, a seven-year-old boy residing in Trumbull street, fell on the sidewalk yesterday afternoon and broke his leg. He was removed to the Alexian Brothers' Hospital. The hospital staff also treated Joseph Cuscano, a Port Reading laborer who had his ribs crushed between two freight cars while heaving coal at that place yesterday.

FRESH AIR TOPIC AT C. E. MEETING

Stephen D. Riddle, superintendent of the Fresh Air Department of the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Union, will speak at a conference which is to be held this evening in the Congregational church at Westfield. Besides the work which Mr. Riddle is doing as State superintendent, he devotes much time to the task of superintending the camp conducted at Roseland by the Essex County Christian Endeavor Union. A remarkable work is done each summer at this camp, and the funds are provided by the Endeavorers of Essex county. The roomy, comfortable and well-appointed building at Roseland is the property of the union.

Mr. Riddle comes at the invitation of the Fresh Air Department of the Union County C. E. Union, and will answer queries that the Endeavorers may wish to make. He will be accompanied by William Russell, president of the Essex union, who has been invited to address the young people. Mr. Russell is a most interesting speaker, and it is hoped that a large audience will greet these two Essex county leaders.

Each society is the county has been asked to send a member who will serve on the committee, of which F. C. Lounsbury, Jr., of this city, is chairman. The meeting is, however, open to all Endeavorers, and they are urged to attend and express their opinions regarding the plans for 1911.

YAWN AND BE HEALTHY.

Dr. Emil Bunzl, of Vienna, Austria, in speaking of diseases of the throat and remedies, said that yawning had its great value. Yawning has recently been recommended, independently, as a valuable exercise for the respiratory organs.

"According to Dr. Naegli, of the University of Leuttich," said Dr. Bunzl, "yawning brings all the respiratory muscles of the chest and throat into action, and is, therefore, the best and most natural means of strengthening them. He advises everybody to yawn as deeply as possible, with arms outstretched, in order to change completely the air in the lungs and stimulate respiration. In many cases he has found the practise to relieve the difficulty in swallowing and disturbance of the sense of hearing that accompany catarrh of the throat. The patient is induced to yawn through the suggestion, imitation of a preliminary exercise in deep breathing.

"Each treatment consists of from six to eight yawns, each followed by the operation of swallowing. It should be added, however, that it is quite possible for deep breathing to be overdone, particularly by persons with weak hearts, and it is at least open to question whether the obstacles to free respiration, which the pawning cure is alleged to remove, are not useful in preventing theentrance of germs and other foreign bodies."

FORMER RECORDER DOUD GIVEN BIRTHDAY SURPRISE.

Former Recorder Thomas Doud, until recently a resident of the borough, was given a surprise party at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. C. McVoy, of Dudley avenue, Westfield, last night. It was in honor of his seventieth birthday and was attended by twenty-five relatives and friends. Vocal and instrumental music was enjoyed and supper was served in conclusion. The gathering was aranged by Mrs. McVoy.

Those from the city and borough in attendance were Mrs. James R. Blair and family, Miss May Hughes and Henry P. Vosseller.

Col. E. W. Hine in Command.

Wilson is expected to confer the brevet rank of major-general on Gen. Campbell in recognition of his years of faithful services.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

"I wouldn't take that trip for all the money in the world," remarked a spectator to an aviator friend at a recent aviation meet just after the latter had alighted on terra firma after making a new record.

"But I assure you," said the aviator, "the sensation of fight is so unique and inspires such an exhilarating thrill that from the moment you glide from the earth the experience is worth a fortune. Then, too, there is the physical enjoyment and delight of soaring through space with the freedom of a bird which compensates any danger."

"Danger! that's it," said the timid spectator. "Look at the death toll claimed by the conquerors of the air. Considering the imminent risk of life and limb, I should say your emotions of triumph and rapture are dearly bought."

"Well, of course, dangers lurk in the winds just as on the waves and in spite of all skill, care and foresight in construction and aviation, neither man nor mechanism is infallible," continued the aviator. "If the propellers don't break, or if the motors don't stall, the winds of heaven may bring disaster or the aviator at the helm may pull the wrong lever which would cause the same. So those who cannot master their fear should not venture to fly, but I know a substitute that affords practically all the rapture and thrill of the actual flight and yet is eminently safe, for it was made via an opera chair."

Then the aviator described Lyman H. Howe's scenes photographed from a dirigible ballon during its fight over scenic Switzerland which will be presented at the Plainfield Theatre Tuesday night.

The scenes take the audience on a dirigible ballon as though on a huge albatross or sea gull which glides gracefully from the earth on its flight through space. As it ascends and descends the audience experiences a sensation that defies imagination or description. With ease and grace it soars high above mountains, valleys, rivers, forests, cities and fields that lie far below.

This speeding panorama makes all seem like a huge animated map—a dream-like map. This, however, constitutes but one of many pleasures in store for those who travel via the Howe route over land and sea, and now even through the air, yet without risk or danger of any kind.

BROTHER HELD BLAMELESS.

Henry Keeck Is Acquitted of Manslaughter Charge.

North Bergen, March 10.—Coroner James M. Houghton conducted an inquest Wednesday night in the case of Frank Keeck, who was shot to death by his brother, Henry Keeck, in the latter's home on the Hackensack Plank road, North Bergen, on the night of February 27. The jury returned a verdict exonerating the prisoner.

John Conlin testified that when Henry returned home and offered to make peace with Frank, whom he had previously ordered out of the house for refusing to work, Frank drew a revolver and tried to use it. Henry seized the weapon, Conlin said, and in the struggle for its possession Henry discharged it.

Mrs. Mary Keeck, the elderly mother of the two Keecks, was a pathetic figure on the witness stand. She said Frank quarreled with Henry after Frank's return from Mexico, with the reputation of a "bad gun man." Henry told Frank to leave the house, she said, and later Frank made threats to kill his brother.

"Frank one day took a bottle out of his pocket," she testified, "and said: 'This poison is for me.' Then he showed me a revolver and said: 'This is for Hennie.' I know that Hennie was afraid of his life. I am the mother of both and it's hard for me to say that I am sure Frankie meant to kill Hennie."

PAY OF FIREMEN AND POLICE UP TO VOTERS.

A bill to give each municipality absolute authority to fix the pay of its firemen and policemen, was presented in the Senate, Wednesday, by Senator Leavitt, who has been a consistent enemy throughout the session of bills designed to increase the pay of the policemen or firemen in this or that community.

The bill provides that the rate of pay in the future shall be fixed by the finance board of each municipality, but that the rate shall be approved by the people before it becomes valid.

Senator Leavitt's bill is designed to shut off the many bills which appear in the Legislature each year for the purpose of having the Legislature establish new standards for the minimum salary to be received by firemen and policemen. Mr. Leavitt and others of the Senate believe that each municipality should regulate its own police and fire affairs, and that the Legislature should not be bothered with the bills which are so constantly reappearing. At least a half-dozen measures of this sort are now pending in the Senate.

Hazel Rose, of Belmont avenue, who was removed to the hospital a few days ago for treatment, is improving.

Mrs. David F. Shay, of Greenwich, Conn., and Mrs. George W. Barlow, of New York, are visiting their sister, Mrs. Arthur McVoy, of West Fourth street.

LONDON'S DIALECT.

A Perfectly Recognizable Child of the Old Kentish Tongue.

In a little book entitled "London's Dialect" Mr. Mackenzie Macbride challenges the view expressed by the education department of the London county council that "there is no London dialect of reputable antecedents and origin," and that "the cockney mode of speech is a modern corruption."

He points out that the London dialect, especially on the south side of the Thames, is a perfectly recognizable child of the old Kentish tongue, to which we owe our earliest written literature. "Thet" for "that," "benk" for "bank," "keb" for "cab," are remnants of the old Kentish mode of pronunciation.

In the Kentish dialect "that" was spelt "thet" as early as A. D. 825. The use of "i" for "a," as in "lidy," was common from the Trent to the Thames in Elizabeth's time, and John Stow, writing in 1580, gives us "bylyffe" for "bailiff." The use of "au" for "a" in such cockneyisms as "telegrauph" is of very old origin, and "abaht" and "ahtside" are both warranted by ancient use. As for "kep" and "slep" without the final "t," they are really uncorrupted words, the "t" being an intruder of late date.

TORTURE BY WATER.

The Third Degree In Sorcery Cases In Louis XIV.'s Time.

One of the methods adopted by Louis XIV. to purge his kingdom of sorcery was the "question ordinary." This, according to G. Duval in "Shadows of Old Paris," consisted in having ten pints of water poured into the body.

"The executioner placed the prisoner in a recumbent position, firmly tied upon a table. A block was slipped under the loins, so that the chest and stomach were thrown outward and upward, while the contents of a measure of two pints were forced by means of a hose down the victim's mouth. If he resisted his nose was held until he opened his teeth to breathe. After every two pint measure he was given a few seconds' rest and the opportunity to confess. If he continued his denial the question was reapplied until the whole ten pints had been consumed.

"In the 'question extraordinary' the quantity administered was augmented to twenty pints. The swelling caused by this unnatural amount of liquid in the body produced the most acute agony."

Knew the Risks.

Chloë, a huge black cook of middle age, came to her mistress one day with the announcement that she was about to be married. Regretting the loss of an excellent cook and having real interest in Chloe's welfare, her mistress said:

"I hope, Chloe, you appreciate the fact that marriage is a serious thing and you have considered carefully in regard to the step you are about to take. Marriage brings great responsibility."

"'Deed it does, ma'am!" said Chloe, with emphasis. "I reckon I knows, fo' I's been mah'ied fo' times. I knows just what reesks yo' takes when yo' done git mah'ied. My last divo'ce cost me twenty-five dollahs, but I made him pay half of it. Yo' nevah know what yo' is gittin' into when yo' gits mah'ied."—Washington Star.

Ruins of Yucatan.

The explorations of Arthur Diosy in Yucatan brought to light many new facts about the stupendous ruins which stretch through the country in a chain 300 miles long. The most amazing thing about these ruins, according to Mr. Diosy, is that the people who possessed such high architectural skill and the knowledge of rich and graceful decorative arts, belonged to the stone age and had no knowledge of metals. These wonders in stone were carved with flint implements and a civilization which has been compared to that of Egypt grew up without even the use of bronze and iron.

Turned the Tables.

Two hunters, returning from the Catskills, decided to try some New York city humor upon the agent of a little railroad station in the foothills.

"When does the 3:49 train get in?" asked one.

The old man regarded him seriously and at length. "Waal," said he, "she generally gets in just a leetle behind the engine."

Later they approached him respectfully. "About time that train is due, isn't it, uncle?"

"Yes," said the agent, "she's about due. There comes the conductor's dog."—Everybody's.

Dauntless.

"He cleared the sill at a bound and vanished in the darkness," related Romance breathlessly.

"But," scoffed Realism, "only a moment ago he was riveted to the spot. Did he file the rivets?"

"Oh, no!" rejoined Romance, nothing daunted. "Fortunately it was only a small spot, so that by a superhuman effort he wrenched it loose and carried it along with him."—Puck.

Result of a Fad.

Poverty came in at the door.

Love immediately flew out of the window.

"Ah," said those who observed, "this is what comes of being fresh air faddists."—Judge's Library.

You cannot dream yourself into a character; you must hammer and forge yourself one.—James Anthony Froude.

STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Frenchtown young men have organized a Down-and-Out Club, with George Kitchen as manager.

John J. McMullin, a Paterson plumber, has been awarded a decree nisi in the divorce proceedings brought by him against his wife Anna on the grounds of desertion.

While she was preparing to partake of a meal Wednesday night, Mrs. Jane G. Boyd, wife of Benjamin H. Boyd, of 859 Hamilton avenue, Trenton, was stricken with apoplexy and suddenly expired.

Jumping on a picket fence to amuse a few young friends, Ellis Giese, seven years old, of 92 Erie street, Camden, broke his left leg Wednesday night. He was taken to the Homeopathic Hospital.

While making repairs to a defective wire Wednesday afternoon, William J. Grieb, an electrician and lineman, employed by the Interstate Telephone Company, at Trenton, fell across a picket fence and was badly injured.

Headed by Dr. E. B. Rogers, a committee of 100 Collingswood citizens Wednesday began a ten days' campaign to raise $1,200 to meet an overdue payment on a steam fire engine purchased by the volunteers.

Losing his footing on a building on which he was employed as a carpenter, William Claypoole, fifty-three years old, fell a distance of about thirty feet, at Moorestown, Wednesday, and sustained contusions of the arms and head. He was taken to Cooper Hospital, Camden.

As a result of a dangerous condition of Joseph Van Buskey, who was stabbed many times during a free-for-all fight at Trenton, in which a dozen Hungarians participated, Judge Rees held the principals of the fight under heavy bail Wednesday evening in the Second District Court.

When John J. Streiff was found dead in bed at his home, 16 East Main street, Haddonfield, Wednesday morning, his unsigned will lay on the bureau in his room. Tuesday night, with the aid of William H. Harrison, a notary, he drew a rough plan of a will and went to bed early, saying that he would make a smooth copy of it and sign it in a few days. Mr. Streiff, a retired butcher, was sixty-four years old. Death was due to apoplexy.

Filibustering developed in the Atlantic County Board of Freeholders Wednesday, when that important body spent half a day fruitlessly debating the payment of a bill for $3.25 for labor on a bridge. Freeholder Bourgeois, Democrat, of Wyemouth Township, vainly tried to get the board to pay the bill, and roll call after roll call was recorded in the backing and filling, without result, the majority finally ruling that the bill remain in committee until it should decide to report it.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Miss Janis is seen in smart fashionable frocks in "The Slim Princess" at the Globe Theatre, and the large chorus in fashions a la mode. Miss Janis has a number of song hits, including an unsually effective song, "What a Chance to Take," which is rendered with the assistance of the full chorus. Then the imitations for which the clever young star has always been famous, are introduced in a novel manner, and there are several which Miss Janis has never done prior to this season. Joseph Cawthorn is the chief assistant of the array of fun-makers, appearing as a German tutor to the Turkish princess. The whole production is tastefully staged in the careful and artistic manner for which all the Charles Dillingham productions have been noted, but it is safe to say that in staging "The Slim Princess" Mr. Dillingham has fairly outdone all previous efforts. Matinees are given on Wednesdays at popular prices, and on Saturdays.

Amongst the arenic features of note at the Hippodrome may be mentioned the Great Albas in a sensational wire act that promises to outthrill anything ever before shown in the Hippodrome circus; Armando who will present a comedy novelty animal act which has earned European commendation; the three Donalds, gymnasts; Erna and Jennie Gasch, women equilibrists; the Blumenfold Sisters in a dainty equestrian specialty; the Colonials in an exhibition of physical culture; the Duffin-Redcay Co. in an astonishing high bar act; Miss Maude Wulff presenting a novel equestrian act and Powers' Elephants with "Baby Mine" the tiniest performing pachyderm on earth. The new circus will be given in conjunction with the three big spectacles "The International Cup" "The Ballet of Niagara" and "The Earthquake."

Carrol C. Taylor, of Fairview avenue, is detained at home with an attack of rheumatism.

Dennis Denny, of Chicago, is visiting at the home of his brother, D. D. Denny, of Fairview avenue.

James Fitzgerald, of Cottage place, who has been seriously ill for the past two weeks, is slightly improved.

Patrick Kellegher, of Jackson avenue, who met with a severe accident to his foot some time ago at Marshall's laundry, is able to be about with the aid of a cane.

An Experience With the Customs Officials at Kermanshah.

In eastern lands the collecting of customs dues is attended with perhaps more than ordinary fraud. In his book, "From Baku to Baghdad," Mr. W. B. Harris has told his experience with the customs officers of Kermanshah. The incident had its comical feature as well as its serious lesson:

Two hours later than I had intended we made a start and, proceeding through the long tunnel-like bazaars, emerged from the town. Here fate had annoyance in store for me. At the local custom house the guards wanted to search us and make us pay duty on our scanty baggage.

I had hired a mule to carry our saddlebags as far as Baghdad, using the owner of the mule, a wily old Arab who accompanied us, as a guide. These two, mule and man, the guards absolutely refused to let pass without my bestowing a perfectly illegal and illogical baksheesh. This I stoutly refused to do, and, knowing that in the east a show of temper is of no avail, I swallowed my wrath and argued coolly and collectedly with the soldiers.

Soon they confessed that they had no right to touch either me or any animal of mine, but they maintained that the mule and the rider were both Arabs and that therefore I could not interfere.

This was just what I wanted, and I solved the matter in a minute. I put the Arab on my horse and I rode his mule. There was no question about it then. The guards on their own confession could stop neither me nor my horse, and we rode quietly on amid the laughter of the men to change our mounts again fifty yards past the custom house.

GARBLED QUOTATIONS.

Popular Passages That Are Frequently Rendered Incorrectly.

Almost everybody who quotes at all misquotes. Nothing is more common than to hear:

A man convinced against his will
Is of the same opinion still.

This is an impossible condition of mind, for no one can be convinced of one opinion and at the same time hold to an opposite one. What Butler wrote was eminently sensible:

He that complies against his will
Is of his own opinion still.

A famous passage of Scripture is often misquoted thus: "He that is without sin among you let him cast the first stone." It should be, "Let him first cast a stone."

Sometimes we are told, "Behold, how great a fire a little matter kindleth," whereas St. James said, "Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth," which is quite a different thing.

We also hear that "a miss is as good as a mile," which is not as sensible or forcible as the true proverb, "A miss of an inch is as good as a mile."

"Look before you leap" should be "And look before you ere you leap."

Pope is generally credited with having written:

Immodest words admit of no defense,
For want of decency is want of sense, though it would puzzle any one to find the verses in his writings. They were written by the Earl of Roscommon, who died before Pope was born.

Franklin said, "Honesty is the best policy," but the maxim is of Spanish origin and may be found in "Don Quixote."—Pearson's Weekly.

Puzzled.

An aged colored man was passing a fish store when he stopped to examine a huge turtle chained in the doorway as an advertisement

He had never seen a turtle before, and he prodded the strange creature curiously. Suddenly he popped his finger into his mouth with a howl of pain. After the finger had stopped bleeding he gazed at it ruefully, then eyed the turtle apprehensively.

"What's the matter, Rastus?" asked the fish dealer, with a grin.

"Nuffin', sah; nuffin'. Ah was jest wonderin' whether Ah had been bit or stung."—Lippincott's.

The Artistic Temperament.

A famous singer was undergoing the ministration of the ship's barber.

"I 'opes," said the barber, "that we shall 'ave the pleasure of 'earin' you at the concert tonight."

"No," explained the famous singer, "I've had a long and exhausting season in America and within a few days I am to open in London. I have decided not to do anything on this voyage."

"It's the same way with me," said the barber understandingly. "When I'm hashore I never looks at a razor."—Success Magazine.

A Legal Holiday.

"Bindlesworth seems to rather look upon his wife with awe."

"Yes, I met him yesterday, and he wanted to borrow $5 from me. I asked him why he didn't go to his bank for it, and he replied with surprise that he was unable to conceal:

"'Why, bless me! I'd forgotten that the banks were open today, just the same. You see, this is my wife's birthday.'"—Chicago Record-Herald.

This Hard, Cruel World.

Mrs. Crawford—You can have all the bread and butter you want, but no more cake.

Willie—Say, ma, how is it I can never have a second helping of any of the things I like?—Lippincott's.

Vulgarity.

"Why do you say he is vulgar?"

"Because he has at least ten times as much money as I have."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Desperate Game

By JOHN K. LEYS,

Author of "The Lindsays," "The Lawyer's Secret," "The Black Terror," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, by John K. Leys.

The two friends left the Temple and went to a firm of inquiry agents and made known their wishes. The partner whom they saw listened in silence to what Brooke had to say and then touched the bell on his desk.

"Send Meakin to me," he said to the clerk who answered it. The next minute a long, cadaverous looking gentleman clad in a brown black frock coat entered the room.

"Just find this gentleman, Meakin," said the principal, handing him the slip of paper. "There should be no difficulty about it, as he was seen only this morning, and he has an office near Chancery lane. When you have got on his track wire and keep him in sight, awaiting further instructions. I think that is right," he added, turning to his clients.

"Quite right," said Guy, and they left the office. On their way out they overtook Meakin, who was already in the street.

"I wish," said Guy, going up to him, "you would come or wire to me at once at my private address—here it is—as soon as you come upon a trace of the man I want to find. It will save time, and there will be a ten pound note for you if you get on his trail within twenty-four hours. Here is a sovereign on account."

Meakin touched his hat, took the sovereign and walked swiftly away. His first proceeding was to go to Mr. Foscombe's office and, under pretense of having a letter to deliver which he could not intrust to any third person, he succeeded in getting Foscombe's private address, learned from Foscombe's landlady that the lawyer had gone to Euston square and then ascertained from a porter at Euston square that a man resembling Foscombe had gone to Kendal. Having done this much, the detective entered a public house and got gloriously drunk.

Just twelve hours later Meakin woke up. He was surrounded by whitewashed walls and at once understood what had happened to him. After a few minutes spent in as close thinking as the state of his head would permit, he managed to get a message sent to Guy Lorimer.

In less than an hour Guy made his appearance and soon had the man at liberty, whereupon he coolly claimed the promised reward, alleging that he had ascertained beyond the shadow of a doubt that Foscombe had left Euston for Kendal by the 11:30 train on the preceding day.

"Why didn't you tell me this at once instead of going off and getting drunk?" shouted Guy, and he seized the man by the throat and shook him as a Newfoundland dog would shake a toy terrier. Finally he dropped him and ran off to tell Brooke the news. He knew that there was no train he could catch before the one his enemy had left by twenty-four hours earlier.

"Kendal," said Ashton Brooke musingly, when he heard the news. "What can have taken him there?"

"She may be there!" said Guy in an eager whisper. They consulted a large scale map, and immediately the name "Ravenscrag Cas." caught Guy's eye. Like a flash he remembered Eva speaking of Sir Rufus' place as Ravenscrag, and he understood why Foscombe had gone to Kendal. An hour later he was being whirled northward as fast as steam could take him.

CHAPTER XXX.

THE VOICE OF THE DEAD.

It was rapidly growing dark when Guy Lorimer pulled the deer's foot bell handle that hung outside the entrance to Ravenscrag.

"Is Mr. Foscombe here?" he asked, speaking to Jorrocks through the grill.

Jorrocks opened the gate and admitted the visitor.

"Yes, sir, he is here at present, but I doubt whether you can see him. He and Sir Rufus are engaged—engaged most particular."

"Oh, then, I will wait. But I must see him; that is quite certain. Go and tell Mr. Foscombe that a gentleman wishes to speak to him. Name? No, it's no use giving any name. You just go and do what I say." And as he spoke he slipped a sovereign into the butler's palm.

Jorrocks shuffled away, and Guy seated himself to await as patiently as he could.

It was a small room, used for the reception of any of the country people who might wish to see Sir Rufus or the housekeeper. There was a fireplace, but the fire had been allowed to go out. What light there was in the apartment came through two tall lancet shaped windows overlooking the lake. The door opened, and Guy sprang to his feet. But he was wrong. It was not the butler returning, only a parlor maid carrying a small lamp. Something was wrong with the lamp. The girl placed it on a table and turned the screw first up and then down without producing any good result. The lamp was smoking abominably.

"Can I help you?" said Guy civilly, taking a step forward.

The girl started violently and then stood quivering with fear. She thought she had heard the voice of a dead man. She was cold, half sick with terror, rapidly losing consciousness.

Guy bent nearer and saw her face clearly for the first time. With a loud cry he sprang forward, opening his arms, but she had fainted before he reached her. To her it was in reality as if the grave had given up its dead—something so awful, so mysterious, that love itself had to stand aside and wait.

He gathered her in his arms and then gently laid her on the carpet, for there was no sofa in the room.

"If I only had some way of reviving her myself without ringing the bell!" he muttered to himself. His eye caught the glitter of glass at the farther end of the table. It was a carafe of water. He flung some of it sharply in her face, and in a few seconds she was clinging to him, half laughing, half crying, clinging to him as if she never would let him go.

"Is it you, Guy, your own real, living self?" she cried. "Oh, I feel as if I were in paradise! It cannot be the same world I was in three minutes ago. Then I believed you were dead—they told me you were dead; wasn't it cruel of them, Guy?—and now I know that you are alive and holding me like this. I am not dreaming; I am sure I am not dreaming. It is your own self, is it not? Speak to me, Guy! Speak to me"—

He kissed her swiftly moving lips and whispered burning love words in her ears till at length she became quite still, drinking her fill of the spring of happiness that she had not tasted for so long.

Jorrocks came to say that Mr. Foscombe was particularly engaged and could see no one. He opened the door, but neither Guy nor Eva heard him. He smiled to himself and went softly away, closing the door behind him. He thought the stranger had only inquired for Mr. Foscombe as a means of getting speech with the parlor maid—whom he had always judged to be a superior young woman—who was his sweetheart. In any case, it was no particular business of his, and he went off to his wife's room and refreshed himself with a glass of ale.

The dusk deepened into darkness, but the lovers needed no light. They were too happy, too entirely wrapped up in each other, to care for anything in the outside world.

But suddenly Eva came, as it were, to herself. A strong shudder passed through her, and she slowly released herself from her lover's embrace.

"What is it, darling?" whispered Guy.

"How could I forget?" she murmured as if speaking to herself. "But we were so happy, so happy! Guy, it is a hard thing to have to say to you, but I can never be your wife!"

In a few words she told him of her discovery of Sir Rufus' hold upon her mother, of his charge that Terence had committed murder and of his threat to expose Terence. She told how kind Foscombe had been to her, how he had come to her rescue at her request and how she had promised to marry him if he would get her out of Sir Rufus Reveril's clutches. "Don't hate me, Guy; don't shrink away from me!" she cried. "I thought you were dead, you know, Guy—dear Guy! I thought you were dead and buried somewhere far away where I could never see your grave. And I thought it would be better to marry him than the man I knew was a"—

"That will do, Eva; you needn't say any more. I understand it all now. But you shall never marry Foscombe."

"But, Guy, I must! I promised!"

"On condition that he made it impossible for Sir Rufus to injure your brother or bring disgrace and ruin upon Lady Roscommon. But that is more than he or any man can do. You shall never marry him. I will send a bullet through his false heart first. Is he in the house?" he said, slowly rising from his seat. Eva clung to him with the strength of despair.

"He is in the house, Guy. I cannot lie to you. But don't go to him! I entreat you by your love for me and mine for you. Think, Guy! Perhaps by some miracle I may get free from the promise I made him. Do you want to make my heart as full of gratitude to you as it is full of love? Then go back to London at once! Go tonight!"

"And leave you here? No, Eva. Don't ask the impossible. But come with me, Eva. I can get a special license! We can be married tomorrow! Think of it, darling!"

"Oh, don't tempt me, don't tempt me, Guy! I must think what would be my mother's fate if I were to do that. I should despise myself if I were to buy my own happiness at such a price!"

Guy argued and pleaded with her, but it was all in vain. She would not agree that her first duty was to herself and to him. She said she would never know another happy hour if she were to save herself and leave her mother to be made the talk of the whole country and her brother an outcast.

"If you love me, Guy, do what I ask you," she cried. And he could feel that she was trembling all over in her anxiety. "I will do anything you ask me except break my word. Only go back—go back to London!"

"And you will write to me every day and keep me fully informed of all that happens?"

"Yes, yes; I promise you that faithfully. And I will do nothing—such as being married—without giving you warning."

"You will not under any circumstances yield to either of these men if they should press you to be married here before going home."

"No; I solemnly promise that I will not."

"Then, dearest, I will make no attempt to meet Foscombe at present, and I will take the first train back to London, since you wish it, on condition that you send me a telegram if you should need me at any time."

CAUGHT BY DRIVER ANTS.

Exciting Experience In West Africa With These Deadly Pests.

The driver ants are a terrible pest in West Africa. Crawling over the ground in countless thousands, invincible to anything but a wall of fire, they bring quick death to every live thing unfortunate enough to be caught. In their path and leave behind them the skeletons of lizards, rats, sheep, cattle and even human beings. In his book entitled "We Two In West Africa" Major F. G. Guggisberg recounts the terrors of one night when the pests invaded his house:

I heard voices calling, "Get up; the ants are on us!" Sitting bolt upright, I found the room apparently in darkness. In reality the lantern on the floor at the foot of the bed was still burning, but as I threw my hand out and felt the heavy weight of the mosquito net I suddenly realized that it was coated with ants so thickly that it kept the light out as effectively as a velvet curtain.

Two bounds took me out of that mosquito net and the hut, but it was an uncanny feeling when my feet crunched through the living carpet of ants. Hitting the side of the doorway in my hasty exit, I brought down a shower of the little pests on my head and shoulders from rafter, wall and roof, and then the fun began.

Some people say that the ant buries his head in you and leaves it there, others that he drives some other part of his body into you. I didn't worry about examining which theory was correct. It did not affect the torture of the result. For the next ten minues I was standing in a state of nature in the open, the rain beating down and the boys, hastily roused, picking ants off my body by the light of torches.

I was so engrossed in this new sport that I quite forgot about Lees; then I suddenly realized that he was not there. I won a moral V. C. by going into that infernal place and hauling him out. He was a pitiable sight in the torchlight, his hair waving as if in a breeze as the ants crawled through it, his body black with them.

To pick them off was too slow a job. I seized a tin of kerosene oil and poured it over him, sweeping the enemy off in thousands. One of my hammock boys rushed up with a flaming torch, meaning in the kindness of his heart to give master more light. I yelled to him to keep away, and he, thinking he was being urged on, rushed toward us quicker than ever. Luckily Lees' cook stopped him in time, and a tragedy was averted.

We spent the remainder of the night under a tree. In spite of the discomfort of it all—the persistent rain, the mist, the smarting pain of the ant bites—we could not help laughing at the idea of our helplessness against the little brutes that were occupying our comfortable huts. However, the only thing to do was to wait patiently until they cleared out.

A Repulsive People.

The inhabitants of Dutch New Guinea are not an attractive race. "The native woman," says Dr. Eric Marshall, the explorer, "drags up the children, cuts the firewood, brings in the sago, works the canoes, occasionally proving her skill as a warrior in the family and village quarrels, and always coming off best with her tongue. She is usually content with a strip of bark cloth. When in mourning she dispenses even with this. The male sex predominates, and most of the men have to be content with one wife. On the death of a man the widow, clad like Eve, but as ugly as Satan, crawls around the grave, wailing and chanting, performing weird movements with arms and body, which may or may not be meant for dancing."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Blue Tits Love the Bees.

Bees have enemies of various kinds like the rest of creation. Every one knows that many birds are insectivorous, but all insects do not form the food of any one species. The bird which has formed a taste for bees is the blue tit, and if a pair of these discover a suitable nesting place in the neighborhood of an apiary it is surprising how many bees will be carried off to satisfy them and their young. Generally their work is mostly felt where queen raising is extensively indulged in, for queens and drones being largest and slowest on the wing form a desirable and easy prey.—Agricultural Economist.

Up to His Standard.

A merchant in a small town was about to become bankrupt for the seventh time. He called in the accountants to go over his books. When they had finished they told him he would be able to pay 3 cents on the dollar. A troubled look came over the merchant's face. "Heretofore," he said, "I have always paid 10 cents on the dollar, and I'll do it now," he affirmed as a benevolent smile overspread his face. "I'll pay the rest out of my own pocket."—Everybody's.

A Reminder.

Mrs. Crimsonbeak—Did you think of me while I was away in the country, John? Mr. Crimsonbeak—I certainly did, dear. I wore that necktie you bought me for my birthday, and everybody asked where on earth I got it, and I had to tell them.—Yonkers Statesman.

A Well Done Job.

"Is she well married?"

"I should say so. She's been trying for years to get a divorce and can't."—Exchange.

Persistent people begin their success where others end in failure.—Edward Eggleston.

The Coming of the Postman is always an occasion of interest. You like to receive letters. Everybody does. And doesn't a letter written on fine, high-grade stationery give you more pleasure than one written on "just paper?"

The best paper that we know of is that manufactured by

EATON, CRANE & PIKE

For years this has been the universal favorite among discriminating people. There is as much difference between it and the "no-name" kind as there is between linen and cambric cloth. Prove it for yourself by comparison.

What "Hamlet" Lacked.

In a mining camp town "Hamlet" was one evening given by a strolling company, and this is the criticism that appeared next day in the local papers, written by the miner dramatic critic:

"There is too much chinning in this piece. The author is behind the times and seems to forget that what we want nowadays is hair raising situations and detectives.

"In the hands of a skillful playwright a detective would have been put upon the track of Hamlet's uncle, and the old man would have been hunted down in a manner that would have lifted the audience out of their cowhides.

"The moral of the piece is not good. The scene where Hamlet sasses his mother is a very bad example to the rising generation.

"Our advice to the author is more action, more lovemaking and plenty of specialties. The crazy girl scene should be cut out altogether and a rattling good song and dance substituted."

Charles V. at Table.

Emperor Charles V. of Austria, by far the most powerful ruler of his day, was thus described as he appeared at table by Roger Ascham, secretary to the English ambassador, in 1550: "I stood hard by the emperor's table. He had four courses; he had sod beef—very good—roast mutton, baked hare; there be no service in England. The emperor hath a good face, a constant look; he fed well of a capon; I have had a better from mine hostess Barnes many times in my chamber. He and Ferdinando, king of the Romans, ate together very handsomely, carving themselves where they list, without any curiosity. The emperor drank the best that ever I saw; he had his head in the glass five times as long as any of us and never drank less than a good quart at once of Rhenish wine." It was notorious that the emperor ate and drank immoderately, and as a natural result he suffered terribly from gout from the time he was thirty years old.

Game to the Last.

Douglas MacDonald and his old crony, Donald MacDougal, were once opposed to each other in a famous curling match, and the last two stones to finish the game were the two cronies' Donald MacDougal, with enormous deliberation, threw his stone. He threw it well. He made what is called a pat lid and jumped for joy. Then it was Douglas MacDonald's turn. His case seemed hopeless, but such a splendid throw did he make that the pat lid was knocked off, and his stone lay at the side of the tee, winning the game. In his joy the old fellow jumped sky high. He came down so hard that he broke right through the ice. He sank, but, bobbing up again, he shouted from the cold water:

"Hi, lads, we've won, and if I dinna come oot o' here alive be sure ye pit that stone on my grave!"—Exchange.

Dirt and Death.

When a celebrated Paris physician was asked how the city could prevent the coming of a plague then ravaging other European places he answered, "Boil your ice!" That tersely called attention to the necessity of utter cleanliness and that even ice made from impure water carried disease.

"Yellow fever," said Henry Ward Beecher, "is God Almighty's opinion of dirt." The chief contributing cause toward modern efficiency in surgery is that surgeons have learned to keep clean. Nothing is so spotless as a good hospital. Everything is boiled and sterilized—beds, instruments, clothing, washings, floors, hands and finger nails. That is why they save lives there. Nobody would die if he could keep perfectly clean. Death is the final triumph of dirt.—Chicago Tribune.

He Understood the People.

One of Jay Gould's campaigns as a dealer in railways was with the Wabash system of railroads. He got control and after effecting a reorganization which increased the capital stock and also the bonded debt sold them out. It is related of him at this time that an associate said to him, "Mr. Gould, don't you think you are bonding this much higher than the property will stand?" "That may be," answered he, "but the American people are mighty partial to bonds."

SCORE IN COMEDY

Hope Chapel's Christain Endeaor Society Present "A Pair of Idiots."

MRS. G. A. SIMONS COACH.

Young People's Performance Wins Plaudits—Social Hour Follows the Creditable Entertainment.

"A Pair of Idiots," a two-act comedy, was given by the Christian Endeavor Society, of Hope chapel, last night, before a large audience, and the entertainment was one of the best efforts of the members, who have been successful in the presentation of several short plays. Last night's cast was practically the same as used in the other productions.

The entire cast deserves the praise bestowed. Miss Mary Nesbit Mortimer, was especially good in the part of "Miss Lucretia Bardley," a spinster. Miss Eckert and Miss Slorah also made a hit in their respective parts. The honors among the men were shared by Messrs. Brownell, Rimmer and Firstbrook.

Mrs. G. Stuart Simons, to whom as dramatic coach and director, the success of the play was due, was presented with a china berry set by the society as a slight token of appreciation of her services. The gift was a surprise. Mrs. Simons thanked all for the gift and commented on the loyalty and co-operation of the society.

During an intermission, Harry Kartscher sang a solo, "Dreams," and recited several selections by Eugene Field, which were well received. Miss Bertha Jones was the accompanist. After the play the cast, members of the society and guests remained for a social hour. Among those present were Rev. and Mrs. Frederick L. Greene, the new pastor and his wife; also Miss Helen I. Melvin, of New York.

The cast for the play follows:

Col. Archibald Bradley, a hot tempered Virginia gentleman, Frank Rimmer; Peter Jennings, from Arkansas, C. Howard Firstbrook; Dr. George Gunther, Peter's friend, Harold H. Brownell; Miss Lucretia Bradley, the colonel's maiden sister, Miss Mary N. Mortimer; Miss Jean Bradley, the colonel's daughter, Miss Edna Eckert; Miss Winifred Lester, the colonel's niece and ward, Miss Elizabeth Slorah.

The committee of arrangements comprised the Misses Eunice Eckert, Elizabeth Slorah, Clara Hunter and Melville Roseberry and Donald Mortimer. Lester N. Sutton was the business manager and David Wardrop, stage manager, Mrs. G. Stuart Simons, director and coach.

MISCHIEVOUS BOYS ARE FINED IN COURT

Eight boys ranging in age from 9 to 12 years were arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning, charged with breaking into the vacant house at 413 New street, owned by Mrs. John Moore. It was alleged that the boys had forced their way into the house by breaking several panes of glass and opening the windows. Once inside the deviltry began. A clock which had the face to look good was smashed, several framed pictures, hanging on the walls, were taken down and holes kicked in them; a bracket lamp next received the attention of the stick the boys carried. It was knocked to the floor and demolished.

Several jars of fruit in the cellar were broken, table linen dragged across the floor and some handkerchiefs actually stolen.

The youngsters could give absolutely no reason for their maliciousness and when Mrs. Moore, who was in court, declared that the damage was about ten dollars, Judge DeMeza immediately fined five of the boys $2 each and allowed the others to go. Severer punishment will be meted out to the next crowd of such rowdies brought before the court.

JERSEY GUARDSMEN MAY GO TO BORDER

Major William B. Martin, formerly captain of Co. K, and captain W. E. Pedrick, of Trenton, have been recommended by Judge Nelson Y. Dungan, to take part in the maneuvres on the Mexican border. They have been informed by telephone to this effect.

The advisability of having the adjutant a resident of the capital city was demonstrated when a telegram was received in Trenton from the War Department at Washington asking for the names of officers who could attend the so-called army maneuvres in Texas. The telegram received by Adjutant-General Sadler, was answered at once.

The telegram received requested the Adjutant-General to suggest and recommend several officers from each regiment and one officer from each other branch of the service to attend the maneuvres now being held on the Mexican border.

Immediately upon receipt of the wire, Adjutant General's department got into communication with colonels of the troops, batteries and the signal corps company, and at 10:30 last night a telephone was sent to the War Department recommending the following:

Major Arthur H. Mackie, Major Roland D. Crocker and Captain William A. Powell, who are officers of the First Infantry, and were suggested by Colonel John D. Fraser, the commander of the regiment.

Colonel Dungan, of the Second Regiment, suggested Major William B. Martin, and Captain William E. Pedrick.

Colonel John A. Mather, of the Third Regiment, suggested Major Winfield S. Price, and Lieutenant William T. Read. Numerous other rulings contradicting?

Colonel Henry H. Brinkerhoff, of the Fourth Regiment, suggested Captain John O. Van Slyke and Lieut. Lewis E. Jackson.

Colonel Edwin W. Hine, of the Fifth Regiment, suggested Lieut.-Col. Albert A. Van Walraven, Major William M. Stalter and Captain Richard R. Chiswell.

Captain William A. Bryant, of the First Troop, suggested Lieut. William Kyle, Captain Harry L. Harrison, of Battery A, Field Artilery, suggested Lieut. Frederick A. Reimer. Captain Samuel G. Barnard, of Battery B, Field Artilery, suggested Lieut. William G. Hinderer, and Captain George F. Perkins, Jr., of the Signal Corps, suggested Lieut. Frederick E. Ferris.

As this answer was the first received by the War Department in reply to their telegram it is likely that most of the officers suggested will be accepted. The action of the War Department will not be known, however, for a day or two. The officers who will be detailed will be given twenty-four hours in which to prepare for the trip, and will likely report at San Antonio for a three weeks' tour of duty. Transportation and pay will be provided by the War Department, and it is thought that this camp of instruction will be extremely interesting to the officers and of great benefit to the National Guard of this State.

DEATH OF MR. BOND

Theophilus Bond. Aged Seventy-Eight Years, Succumbs to Pneumonia.

AUTHOR OF MANY POEMS.

Once a Member of Newark Varnish Concern—Wife, Son and Brother Survive Him—The Funeral Tomorrow Afternoon.

Theophilus Bond, aged seventy-eight years, one of the best known citizens of this city, and prominent as a writer of poems, died last night at his home, 503 East Front street, following an illness of about a year, during which he suffered an attack of pneumonia from which he did not have strength enough to recover. Mr. Bond was born on East Front street, nearly opposite the First Presbyterian church, and was the son of the late Rev. Lawis and Catherine Bond, his father being one of the early pastors of the above church.

For nearly fifty years, Mr. Bond was a member of the well-known Newark firm of Price, Bond & Co., manufacturers of varnish. The firm went out of existence several years ago and since then Mr. Bond has been living in retirement. As a writer Mr. Bond gained considerable fame. Many of his poems were written appropriate to important national events and in response to them he received autograph letters of appreciation from Roosevelt, Garfield, John G. Whittier, Edmund Clarence Stedman and Joseph Chamberlain, of England. He possessed hundreds of such letters and he prized them highly as a collection of great value.

Mr. Bond was a devout Christian, a faithful member of the First Presbyterian church, and was loved and admired for his many fine qualities. He is survived by a wife, one son, Clarence E. Bond; two grandchildren, Mrs. Allen E. Beals and Clarence Leslie Bond and a great grandson, Allen Wright Beals; also one brother, Rev. Lewis Bond, all of this city.

The funeral will be held at the late home, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock and the burial will be in the family plot in North Plainfield cemetery.

FLAMES DESTROY HOUSE AT WATCHUNG

The two-story bungalow residence located on the rear part of the Underhill farm at Watchung, was totally destroyed by a fire which was first discovered at 7:30 last night. The house was formerly occupied by Freeman Straight, but recently has been untenanted. The blaze is supposed to be of incendiary origin and it is probable an investigation will be made by the North Plainfield township authorities.

The fire was first noticed by George Hughes, a former New York newspaper man, who was driving home from Plainfield. The flames were then just bursting out of the upper windows. He hurried to a telephone and notified Postmaster George Schmidt at Watchung, who in turn gave the alarm to the chemical engine company. The men responded forty strong but it was a difficult task to get the apparatus up the road because of mud. At times the volunteers sank over their shoe tops in the oozy mass.

The house was beyond saving when the firemen arrived and Chief William H. Titus directed them to devote their attention to surrounding outbuildings. This was accomplished successfully, but on six occasions the only source of water supply, an ordinary fixed well, was pumped dry. A quantity of furniture stored on the first floor of the house was carried to safety. The Underhill residence fronting on the main road was in no danger.

The place was owned by Mrs. Anna Underhill, who estimated the total loss at about $2,000, partially covered by insurance. The property is situated on the north side of the Watchung lake where the Mount Bethel road turns toward Stirling.

The fire was plainly visible from all parts of the city and the progress of the flames was watched by crowds of spectators.

BREEM BROTHERS HEIRS TO ESTATE

Fred Breem, formerly manager of the Central Livery and now proprietor of a boarding and livery stable on East Second street, received information from Holland, yesterday to the effect that he and his brother William Breem, are named as heirs to half a valuable estate left by their aunt, who died on February 26. The announcement came from the executors and interested lawyers, who asked the two to present themselves in person or send powers of attorney to allow the estate to be settled. Papers for the latter were immediately forwarded.

The aunt in question was Mrs. Lucia von de Korven, a widow and sister to the late Paul Breem, of the borough, father of Fred and William. She lived at Vladingen, Holland, and when she died last month was eighty-six years old. Her will was dated 1886 and left her property to two heirs, Paul Breem, and John Frederick Jung, a brother-in-law, both of whom are dead. The heirs to Mr. Jung's share are three children living in this country, while Fred and William Breem are the only surviving relatives of the brother.

The value of the estate is not given in the executors' letters but in statements from lawyers asking for the handling of the case it is disclosed to be very valuable. Both Fred and William Breem are widely known locally and are receiving the congratulations of their many friends over the windfall.

He lived on West Fourth street nearly half a century, selling his property just west of Liberty street only a short time ago. He had been in poor health for many years, due to his advanced age.

Mr. White is survived by his wife, one daughter and four sons. They are Mrs. Zeller, James and William White, of this city; David J. White, of Atlantic City, and Daniel J. White, of New York.

The funeral will be held in St. Mary's church Monday morning at 9 o'clock and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

MRS. WARING DEAD

Wife of Orville T. Waring Passes Away After a Long Illness.

ACTIVE IN CHARITY WORK.

Founder of Women's Exchange and Prominent in Grace Church—The Funeral Takes Place Monday Afternoon.

Mrs. Orville T. Waring, aged sixty-eight years, a prominent resident of this city for the past thirty-five years, passed away at her home on Park avenue, last night, following a severe illness which covered a period of two years. In December of last year, her condition became such that she was unable to leave the house and since that time had been confined to her bed. Her death was due to kidney trouble and dropsy, which developed within the past few weeks. Growing weaker and weaker, Mrs. Waring just slept away with no great suffering and her end was peaceful.

Mrs. Waring was Hester Griffith and was born in Troy, N. Y., being the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theophilus T. Griffith. She was married forty-four years ago to Mr. Waring and prior to removing to this city, resided in Pittsburg, Philadelphia and when the Standard Oil Company's offices were located in New York, Mr. Waring, who is a director of the company ,established his home here. The residence on Park avenue is one of the most attractive in the city.

Mrs. Waring was a faithful member of Grace Episcopal church and the Women's Guild, and was the founder of the Women's Exchange, one of the most important charities of the city, which has accomplished great good.

Always generous in her contributions to charities, many a person will mourn her loss. There were many poor families that received help from her in a quiet way. She was always doing something to relieve the unfortunate. In her home she will also be missed. She was devoted to her family and there was an especially strong tie existing between her and her husband and children.

The recent severe operation performed on Mr. Waring, from which he is now recovering, has given the family much anxiety, but Mr. Waring's condition now assures complete recovery, although the death of his wife is a great shock.

Besides a husband, Mrs. Waring is survived by a sister, Mrs. John McDonald and a brother, Judge Lewis E. Griffith, both of Troy; four daughters, Mrs. Lewis T. Timpson and Mrs. J. Hartley Mellick, of this city; Mrs. Treodore F. Reynolds, of Orange and Mrs. Humphreys, wife of Captain Chauncey B. Humphreys, now in the Philippines; also four sons, Orville G. Waring, Lewis E. Waring, E. J. Waring, of this city and Richard S. Waring, of Texas. The funeral will be held at the late home, 900 Park avenue, Monday afternon at 3 o'clock.

MISS WALTON ENGAGED AS BERKELEY TEACHER.

Miss Grace Walton, of Springfield, has been engaged as the special teacher of music and drawing at the Berkeley Heights school. Miss Walton comes with the highest recommendations as to ability and method

Banquet and Entertainment.

The executive department and employes of the Quincy-Manchester-Sergeant Company gave a banquet and entertainment in the Babcock building, last night, in honor of A. E. Martin, assistant superintendent, who will leave here soon to take a position with a western concern. Speeches of regret on the departure of Mr. Martin were made, attesting his popularity. He was presented with a watch chain and charm with the Odd Fellows' emblem on it. W. H. Butz, chief draughtsman, made the presentation. An orchestra furnished music during the evening.

Mrs. A. G. Darwin.

Mrs. A. G. Darwin, aged eighty-four, formerly of Glen Ridge, died at her home 316 West Sixth street, this morning. She had been a resident of this city about two years. A BAG CONVICTED TWO CHICKEN THIEVES

Accused of attempting to steal chickens from George and Nick Futuros, of West Front street, B. W. French and J. W. Mitchell, hostlers formerly employed in a local stable, were arraigned before Judge William G. DeMeza in the city court this morning, and the former was fined $5. Sentence was suspended on Mitchell.

The Futuros brothers claimed that on Wednesday afternoon the two accused men had attempted to steal chickens from their back yard and being detected made a quick get-away. However, yesterday both men were seen acting suspiciously in the rear of the Endress store. Futuros caused their arrest by Patrolman McCarthy, who said this morning that while he saw no chicken in the possession of the men, he did know that French had an empty bag concealed under his coat and that on the way to headquarters attempted to get rid of that piece of evidence but was caught in the act and the bag was offered as an exhibit in the case.

Both men strenuously denied stealing, claiming their intentions were strictly honest. The bag was explained away by French, who declared that he was going to fill it with straw and use it as a pillow. The judge did not believe him.

COUNCIL UPHELD BY THE PASTORS

Rev Dr. Chambliss' Plea Causes a Stir at the Ministers' Association Meeting.

Considerable stir was caused when Rev. Dr. John A Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, urged that leniency be shown by the Plainfield Ministers' Association yesterday afternoon to Christian Gloekler, whose retail liquor license was not renewed by the Common Council and to the business men who signed a petition that the governing body reconsider its action and grant the license again. The clerygman, in his argument for taking a broad view of the matter, referred to the saloonkeeper, whose license was taken away because he had sold liquor to minors, as "Brother Gloekler."

Rev. Dr. Chambliss read his remarks from a typewritten statement in which he claimed that equity should have been shown Mr. Gloekler by granting him a short license in order to dispose of his $6,000 worth of liquors, claiming that now he could not sell the stock on hand, not being aware, probably that Mr. Gloekler could obtain a government license now for such a purpose. He also asserted that the best business men had signed the petition for a reconsideration and that no reflection should be cast on them as it was not the desire of the ministers to antagonize the business interests.

These remarks brought forth a storm of protest from fellow clergymen. Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, said that a man who sold liquor to minors was not entitled to any consideration and he for one would like to see the $6,000 stock poured into the sewer and not into the gutter for fear that some one might drink it. He also challenged the assertion that the best business men had signed the petition, claiming, with Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, that many of the best business men had refused to sign it. Rev. Mr. Maguire also claimed that some business men who had signed had been deceived.

Speeches strongly favoring resolutions upholding the Common Council and scoring the signers were made by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring and others. Answering Rev. Dr. Chambliss' argument that it had been claimed that others were equally guilty with Gloekler but had not been punished, Rev. Mr. Goodrich and others asserted that if anyone had real knowledge of such a condition it was his duty as a citizen to bring them to justice.

Protest was made when Dr. Chambliss suggested that the word "deplore" be omitted from that part of the resolution concerning the petitioners.

The resolution as passed unanimously follow:

To the Common Council of the City of Plainfield,

Gentlemen:—

The following resolutions were unanimously passed by the Plainfield Ministers' Association:

"Resolved; That the Plainfield Ministers' Association do heartily approve the action taken by the Common Council in refusing to renew the license of the saloon on the corner of Front and Somerset streets known as Gloekler's saloon, especially since this action was based upon the knowledge that Mr. Gloekler was selling liquors to minors. In view of the fact that, after the Council had taken this action and the refusal of this license had been considered as settled, a new effort, which we greatly deplore, is now being made to secure a reversal of that action, we do earnestly and unanimously petition the Common Council to sustain its original action and to continue to refuse the license.

"Resolved; That a copy of these resolutions be sent to our local papers."

Respectfully,
JOHN Y. BROEK,
President.
CHARLES E. HERRING,
Secretary.

TO AILING WOMEN.

A Little Sound Advice Will Help Many a Sufferer in Plainfield.

No woman can be healthy and well if the kidneys are sick. Poisons that pass off in the secretions when the kidneys are well, are retained in the body when the kidneys are sick. Kidneys and bladder become inflamed and swollen and worse troubles quickly follow. This is often the true cause of bearing down pains, lameness, backache, etc. Uric poisoning also causes headaches, dizzy spells, languor, nervousness and rheumatic pain.

When suffering so, try Doan's Kidney Pills, a remedy that helps sick kidneys. You will get better as the kidneys get better, and health will return when the kidneys are well. Let a Plainfield woman tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. Earnest Dorflinfler, 400 Clinton avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I hold just as high an opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills today as I have for years. The cure they made in my case has been permanent and consequently I am glad to conform my former testimonial." (Statement given January 19, 1911).

On August 28, 1905, Mrs. Dorflinger gave the following account of her experience with Doan's Kidney Pills. "The first symptom of kidney trouble in my case was a dull, heavy pain in my back and head. This was followed by a tired, languid feeling and I knew that my kidneys were gradually giving out. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised an dgetting a box at Randolph's Pharmacy, I began their use. Before long my condition improved and I continued taking Doan's Kidney Pills until I was cured."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

TROLLEY WINS IN TRIAL OF COMPLAINT NO. 1

The four complaints brought by Councilman Everett Townsend to enforce the provisions of the "No Seat No Fare' ordinance on the part of the trolley company at Trenton, were brought on for trial before Police Justice Harris in the Central Police Court yesterday. Counsel for the trolley company asked for a further adjournment pending a decision by the Board of Public Utility Commissioners as to the validity of the ordinance.

In opposing the adjournment City Solicitor Bird pointed out that the ultimate decision as to the reasonableness and validity of the ordinance must be reached by the Supreme Court. He objected to further delay upon the ground that while the right to enforce the ordinance is kept open, the public of Trenton is suffering from inadequate service.

Former Judge George W. MacPherson, representing the Trenton Street Railway Company, interposed technical objections to every move made by the city solicitor.

Trial of the first complaint consumed over two hours, after which it was dismissed upon motion of Mr. MacPherson. The ground of dismissal was that though Councilman Townsend had waited an hour and seventeen minutes for a car in which he could obtain a seat, having ultimately gone home in an automobile, he had not established a valid offense on the part of the trolley company.

After testimony had been taken on the second complaint Mr. MacPherson moved for dismissal on the ground that it had not been shown that the Trenton Street Railway Company was actually operating the cars on the date alleged in the complaint. This raised anew the question mooted at the hearing last week.

Mr. Bird contended that having proved the franchise to the Trenton Street Railway Company and the fact that its lease to the Trenton and Mercer Company Corporation had not been approved by the Board of Public Utility Commissioners at the time of the complaint, established a prima facie case against the Trenton Street Railway Company.

DELAYED SOUVENIR OF GIFT TO BATTLESHIP.

In sending out this week copies of a handsome monograph, commemorative of the presentation by the State of a silver service to the battleship New Jersey, more than three years after the event occurred, Adjutant General Sadler felt constrained to offer explanation of the long delay. The service was presented August 14, 1907.

A short time after the presentation a contract was made with the Dreka company for the preparation of the monograph. This was done under legislative authority, the company furnishing a bond of $400 for the proper completion of the work. The Dreka company went ahead with the making of the plates, but was unable to complete the work because of failure of the adjutant-general's office to furnish the necessary data. It appeared that this correspondence had been taken in charge by a former employe of the office, by whom it was left unanswered. General Sadler discovered the situation about a year ago, and decided that in view of the long delay it would be advisable to cancel the contract.

He found, however, that to do this would cost about $350 already expended by the Dreka company, while at a slight additional cost the monograph could be published. After a conference with the State House Commission, it was decided to publish the monograph, the commission allowing from the funds at its disposal $60 required to add some features to the document.

There were 250 of the monographs published, all of which have been distributed by the adjutant-general to members of the Legislature, officers of the battleship New Jersey and others who participated in the presentation.

The adjutant-general in his last report made a report of the matter. The monograph contains accounts of the proceedings of the Legislature, report of the commission appointed to consider the form of the testimonial, story of the launching of the battleship, description of the silver service and an historical account of the inscriptions engraved thereon.

The bill calls for $1.95 and Mr. Powers petitioned the Council to correct the error. The Council, in order to clear the matter up, authorized the tax collector to accept a payment of one cent in full on the town's claim.

TOLSTOY IN TRENTON.

Son of Famous Novelist Talks of Universal Peace.

Trenton, March 11,.—Count Leo Tolstoy, the son of the famous Russian novelist, arrived in Trenton last night, and will remain here for several weeks studying conditions. He is the guest of Edmund C. Hill. Count Tolstoy was asked as to his idea of securing universal peace and he gave it as his opinion that if the United States, France, England and Russia should band together in a peace compact it would practically mean the end of the modern method of warfare.

While he says he is not an emissary to secure the assurance of the United States to any such agreement, still that would be his idea toward securing the desired end. Count Tolstoy intends to rest and observe while he is in this country.

She quickly paid Daniel's fine and then sent him on a tour of the city to get money enough to get her out. He was ultimately successful.

EX-SENATOR JOHN KEAN'S "URSINO" AS A TOWNSHIP.

Citizens of Union township may head off a quiet little move to take part of their municipality for a new township to be known as "Ursino." "Ursino" is the name of former Senator Kean's home, which is located within the proposed new township. If Mr. Kean is back of the move, as is suspected by his townsmen, he is remaining under cover.

The sponsers for "Ursino" are James E. Stem, Augustus T. Gray and Edward C. Ulrich. Assemblyman Hugh J. McLoughlin, of Union county, will be asked to introduce a bill providing for the division of the township.

Several prominent men of Union met at the home of Gottlieb Schnable, chairman of the township committee, Thursday night and registered a protest against the proposal. It was decided to hold a massmeeting in Cooker's Hall, Lyon Farms, tonight. More objections will be heard at this meeting and a committee will be named to appear before the Legislature against the bill after it is presented.

The "Ursino" plan was dubbed "a sharp political trick" at the meeting Thursday night.

It was charged that the "father" of the new township had drawn a zigzag line purposely to exclude a colony of foreigners from "Ursino."

The section wanted for "Ursino" is bounded by Lehigh Valley Railroad, the brook, Liberty and Long avenues and the Union and Essex county dividing lines.

BASEBALL.

"In addition to being one of the best outfielders in the business, this fellow, Clyde Milan, is a mighty nice sort of a chap," says Jim McAleer. "When we were over in Philadelphia last summer on one of the trips I took a walk with Milan, and when we passed a gentleman's furnishing store on Chestnut street I noticed Clyde was particularly struck by a display of neckties in the window. I told him I would buy him one, and he was so tickled that I told the clerk to show us some knitted affairs of bright colors.

"I knew they were pretty expensive articles, but I explained to Milan he could have any one he wanted. He picked out a brilliant blue, but when the clerk called out the price, $3, Milan nearly fainted. He dropped the tie and started out of the store. 'They can't fool me, Jim. There never was a tie that cost $3,' he yelled. I finally got him back, but it was only after I refused to allow him to put back the tie he had selected, so he could get half a dozen of a cheaper variety. Take it from me, I'll bet that royal blue scarf of Mr. Milan's was the topic of more than one conversation around the old stove in the prosperous and progressive village of Linden, Tenn., during the winter months."

Decisions affecting major league clubs were given out by the National Baseball Commission Thursday. They include a proposed solution of a three-cornered dispute between the Washington American League Club and the Brooklyn and Boston National League organizations over exhibition games in the national capital next month. The Boston Club complained that it had contracted for exhibition games on April 7 and 8, but that subsequently it was advised that the Brooklyn team was to appear in Washington on those days and that Boston could come April 5 and 6. As games had been booked elsewhere for these days, Boston asked the commission to intervene. The commission recommended that Boston appear in Washington on April 7 and Brooklyn on the following day. It was stated that compliance with this recommendation will be considered by the commission should its attention further be called to this case."

President Lynch, of the National League, has announced approval of the following contracts and releases. Contracts—With Boston, William I. Burke, H. S. Spratt, Frank Pfeffer and W. J. Ingerton (the last named assigned by Chicago); with Brooklyn, Wilburt Schardt; with Chicago, R. T. Fisher, David W. Shean, William A. Foxen and A. F. Hofman, 1911-12; with Cincinnati, S. F. Pauxtis; with New York, Louis F. Drucke; with Philadelphia, Earl L. Moore, 1911-12-13; J. A. Rowan; with Pittsburg, Robert Byrne, H. Camnitz, John M. Corriden and W. B. McKechnie. Releases—By Brooklyn to Rochester, (E. L.), Thomas McMillan; to Binghampton (N. Y. S. L.), R. M. Blakely; to Mobile (S. A.), Tony Smith; by Cincinnati to Syracuse (N. Y. S. L.), S. F. Pauxtis.

In order to avoid the oppressive heat at Marlin Springs, Tex., and at the same time to get in a practise game, Manager McGraw shifted his plans, so that the game could be played in the morning, and the players could take it easy in the afternoon. The Regulars tackled the Colts for the fifth time, and won their first victory of the season by a score of 5 to 3. The interesting features to the game, aside from the fact that the veterans have got into sufficiently good shape to hit the ball was the wonderful pitching of Leon Ames. Marquard was the only twirler on the staff that was not given a chance to work in the game.

Manager Dahlen and his players were favored Thursday at Hot Springs, Ark., by the best baseball weather so far. Instead of having two sessions the Brooklyn manager jammed the day's work into the morning and it lasted nearly three hours. Much of the time was confined to batting practise. Just before the close 'Cy" Young, the veteran, went on the mound to try and fool Brooklyn's heavy stickers. It was the best batting practice they have had since last Sunday, when they faced Walter Johnson, the Washington crack.

Former Corporation Counsel John Whalen, treasurer, of the New York Giants, called on Mayor Gaynor, at the city hall, New York, Thursday, on behalf of John T. Brush. As a result, the Mayor will toss out the first ball when the Giants open the season at the Polo Grounds on April 12.

There are now twelve young Yankees in Camp Irwin, at Athens, Ga., Ed Sykes, the Chicago giant recommended by Germany Schaefer, having dropped in Thursday, and now the recruits are all on hand to go through the daily drills as prescribed by Chief Coach Irwin. The young Yankees worked out under a red hot sun both morning and afternoon. Coach Irwin coached the youngsters in batting, while "Duke" Farrell saw to it that none of the boys cut too many fast ones loose. Ables will do the pitching in a game which has been arranged between the Yanigans and the University of Georgia for this afternoon.

Manager Hal Chase, of the Yankees, received a telegram at Hot Springs, Va., Thursday, from Louis Brockett, to the effect that the twirler had forwarded his signed contract. Brockett went from the Newark Indians to the New York Americans in 1909 with "Big Chief" George Stallings. He did not play ball last season. It is not unlikely that the Yankees will let the pitcher go to Buffalo, in case there is no room for him with the Yankees.

The Chicago Cubs and the Detroit Tigers are going to play a game of baseball next week, according to a dispatch from New Orleans. It may be all right to play such a game before the season opens, and it may not.

The veteran Athletics are thawing out at Hot Springs, Va. Yesterday some of the players worked out in handball contests. After the lunch hour, Murphy, J. Shibe and Coombs tried the novel idea of playing golf on the snow, but after playing nine holes returned to the cottages, while Davis, Hartsel and Morgan, after tossing the ball for nearly an hour, took a long walk down the railroad, the only path where the snow had disappeared.

GOLF

There is a difference of opinion in the ranks of the Western Golf Association at present as to the best method of playing the open championship tournament of that organization. When the views of a number of the leading professionals were sought it was found that some favored medal and some match play. It will be remembered that C. W. Evans, Jr., the Chicago amateur, who is still in his teens, cast dismay in the camp of the professionals by winning the Western open last summer. This affair was decided mostly at hole play, and Evans defeated G. O. Simpson, a professional, in the decisive round.

Early indications make it appear as if this year's amateur championship tournament of Great Britain will be the most representative affair of its kind ever held. In addition to the Americans, who will include Fred Herreshoff, the metropolitan title holder; J. G. Anderson, and possibly W. C. Fownes, Jr., the national champion, prominent amateurs from far-off Australia will also try their luck at Prestwick. These will include Clyde Pearce and his brother, Bruce. The first named has won both the amateur and open titles of Australia.

The return of Miss Dorothy Campbell from Canada to take part in the British women's championship tournament at Portrush will likewise lend zest to that competition. Because of her remarkable record Miss Campbell is regarded as the world's leading woman golfer at the present time. It was she who put an end to the long run of English and Irish victories in the women's championships, and she also led the Scotch to victory in several international matches. Now they are beginning to wonder from what club the American champion will enter. If Miss Campbell enters from Canada, where she has been residing for nearly two years, there would be a possibility of the championship cup taking a voyage across the Atlantic. There are those, however, who believe that the Scotch girl will represent North Berwick, her old club.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Alfredo De Oro is still the pool champion. He defeated Thomas Hueston, who is well known in Newark, in a 600-point match, the final block of which was played in New York Thursday night. De Oro continues to show his superiority at pool. Hueston had prepared carefully for the contest, and many believed that he would beat his opponent. But De Oro was always at the top of his game, and won rather handily, the result being 600 to 493.

FALLS THREE STORIES BUT IS LITTLE HURT.

With his arms loaded with hats piled higher than his head, James O'Connor, sixteen years old, of 141 James street, Newark, stepped into an open elevator shaft on the third floor of the hat factory of M. S. Mork & Co., at 345 Ogden street, Thursday afternoon and fell to the bottom.

O'Connor was injured about the legs and head, but not seriously. He did not care to go home in the Second Precinct automobile ambulance.

O'Connor was told by his foreman to bring a number of hats downstairs. He used the elevator going up and left it standing at the third floor while he went to get the hats.

When O'Connor started back with the hats he carried so many he could not see where he was going. In the meantime some one had started the elevator to the floor above, and O'Connor fell into space and landed about twenty-five feet below.

O. T. Waring, of Park avenue, continues to improve from an operation performed several weeks ago, and is now able to be about the house.

Washington Camp, No. 30, P. O. S. of A., will hold class initiation Tuesday night.

DRY CLEANING TALK

Number 2

WHAT IS DRY CLEANING?

Many people have erroneous ideas about what Dry Cleaning really is—believing that their clothes are actually cleaned dry—as if by magic method we pass our hands over the Garment and say "Presto!" It is clean.

Dry is a misnomer. "Chemical" cleaning would be a more intelligent name, but people might confuse "Chemical," thinking of acids, alkalies, etc., not used in Dry Cleaning.

The truth is we depend largely upon gasolene, naphtha, benzine—there's a difference—and other petroleum and coal tar products, for our cleansing bath instead of water as do the launderers.

The secret and successful operations in Dry Cleaning are learned only by hard experience and study, coupled with proper equipment. These are what enable us to do superior work.

We know our business thoroughly and are properly equipped in plant, collection and delivery.

GAVE SUCCESSFUL LUNCH BOX SOCIAL

The Women's Relief Corps, No. 10, auxiliary to Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., held a very successful lunch box social at the home of Commander and Mrs. W. C. Smith, of Grandview avenue, last night. It was attended by fully sixty members and friends who enjoyed music, addresses, games and dancing until a late hour. The house was prettily decorated for the occasion with flags and bunting.

Naylor's orchestra provided instrumental numbers and the following contributions were made to the program: Piano duets, Mrs. Jennie Bergman and Miss Clara Barton Smith; mandolin selection, Mrs. C. C. Cubberley; Irish dialect songs and stories, Stephen H. Struthers; a dissertation on the "Army Beans," J. H. Townley; addresses, Commander W. C. Smith and H. Craig Smith; recitations, Mrs. Anna Frazee. Army songs were also sung in unison.

At the close of the program the lunch boxes were auctioned off by Commander Smith. He induced keen competition in the bidding and a neat sum will be realized by the corps.

The committee in charge of the affair was composed of Mrs. Everetta Townley, chairman; Mrs. Harriett Gibbons, Mrs. Annie L. Smith, Mrs. Hattie Kirch, Mrs. E. K. Frazee, Miss Try Mattox and Miss Evelyn Manley.

Somebody on the Roof

By Dorothy Blackmore

(Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.)

Miss Hyacinth Wells was an old maid. If she hadn't been an old maid she wouldn't have been the owner and principal of the Wells school for young ladies. Old maids have a fondness for opening schools for young ladies. It's their way of getting revenge for never having had any romance in their own lives. They become watch dogs and tyrants and gloat over it.

When Miss Jean Kelly arrived at Ravendale and the Wells school with her mother, she was left in the parlor while the mother and Miss Wells retired to a private room to have a confidential conversation. Miss Jean was to be sequestered on account of her being in love at nineteen. She was as good as engaged to a very determined young man, who was two years older. He had said to the mother's face after being turned down that he would marry Jean if he had to wait a hundred years. It had taken the strongest kind of parental authority to bring the girl to the school, and she was to be kept there as a pupil and a prisoner. No letters must be received or sent without being read. As she walked out on the ground, guards must be stationed to watch. If allowed outside the grounds two guards must accompany her.

She had been hurried from home, so that the determined man might not get track of her, but in case he did he would be known by a scar on his chin. Miss Wells was to look for a scar.

"Trust me," replied Miss Wells, when she heard the full particulars. "There is neither love nor romance under this roof. My young ladies are taught that this world would be altogether better off without men. Thomas and William are old and crippled, and they are the only two males around this sacred institution. They cannot be bribed or deceived. In three months your daughter will have ceased to think of the young man."

Miss Wells expected to find a sulky and obstinate young lady in Miss Jean, but was agreeably disappointed. The new pupil settled right into place and gave no trouble. Instead of sulking she sang. There were fifteen other girls, and while all of them constantly kicked about the weak soups and the oleomargarine on the thin slices of bread, Miss Jean thought it was romantic. No other woman in the world would have suspected her of duplicity, but Miss Wells did. Her heart and hand had never been sought by a determined young man, but she could figure that if such had been the case she would not have given him up so easily. A mother might be hoodwinked, but an old maid—never.

And Miss Wells' vigilance was soon rewarded. Within four weeks she opened the prison door to a young man with pencil and notebook in hand. He was taking the census of the country. That scar? It was there!

"Go away, sir," cried Miss Wells, and the door was banged on his heels.

A week later, when the grocer's delivery boy drove up to the kitchen through the back gate, Thomas passed him with a grumble. Something warned Miss Wells. She left a class to walk through to the kitchen, and, behold, the grocer's boy was a young man! And the scar? Yes, it was there; but though he was driven away he went with his head up and a determined look on his face.

Then the various small boys earned various quarters by hanging around the grounds, but they failed in their attempts if they had notes to deliver. One day one of the girls gashed her hand. A doctor was sent for to dress it. With him came a young medical student. That is, he got as far as the door again, and then that scar gave him away.

Miss Jean Kelly had been in the school for three months when Miss Wells got a shock. One of the girls turned tattle-tale. She announced that many a night, about midnight, Miss Jean had sneaked out of bed and dressed herself and gone up through the scuttle to the roof and remained there for an hour. She said it was for fresh air; tattle-tale said that a determined young man could reach the roof by climbing the big oak tree growing so near the wall.

Miss Wells compressed her lips; she would see to it; she did see to it. Old Thomas was set to watch at night, but he snoozed the hours away. His old watch dog took his place, and was found dead of old age the very next morning.

Ah, she had it at last! She would go upon the roof herself and catch the criminals red-handed. She was a little old to be catting around on house roofs at night, but the honor of the Wells school was at stake.

The second night after tattle-tale had given things away was a beautiful summer's night. It was a night for cats and lovers to prowl. An hour before midnight found Miss Wells stealing up the scuttle ladder and out on the roof. She was there to watch that tree. Yes, one of its limbs actually overhung the roof. It would be no feat at all for a determined young man. Miss Wells was scantily dressed. Her scant hair was hanging down around her neck, and she was barefooted in her slippers.

The watcher had been at her post nearly an hour when something happened. She thought she heard some one in the tree, and in shifting her position she lost her grip and went rolling down the steep roof until a chimney brought her up. She was safe from a further fall, but she must get back to her place. A cat could have done it, but, alas, she was not a cat. She was only an old maid with shaky nerves. She wouldn't have tried that climb for a thousand dollars. If she called out who would hear her? If she waited until daylight—heavens!

And then she looked up to see the figure of a man above her. Something told her that it was the determined young man with the scar on his chin. In addition, he told her so himself. He was very cool about it. After gazing down at her for three or four minutes he asked:

"How are you going to get up again?"

"Young man, I'll have you arrested for burglary!"

"You can't. There's no breaking and entering in climbing a tree."

"What are you here for?"

"To get you out of a scrape, if you are sensible. If not you'll be left for people to gaze at in the morning. About 600 hands in the shoe factory can overlook this roof, and you are not dressed for company."

"I'll scream for help!"

"And have it in the papers that you were sneaking around on the roof at midnight! No, my dear Miss Wells; your way is the quiet way. Imagine a reporter sitting here in my place and interviewing you! Imagine the headlines in the papers! Imagine him taking a snap-shot at you by flashlight!"

"Are you the young man Miss Kelly wanted to marry?"

"She wanted to, and she wants to yet. I'm here tonight to help her down the tree. We are going to elope. I have a rope here, and I have a proposal to make."

"Yes?"

"Let her seemingly start for home in the morning with her trunk. I'll take care of the rest. If you won't agree, down the tree we go, and you are left right where you are!"

Miss Wells gasped out a "never!" and added that she would perish first, but when the young man started to slide the scuttle and signal to Miss Jean, things changed. She gave her solemn word and was pulled up to keep it. She started her off on pretense of sickness at home, and as the girl was ready to depart she whispered in her ear:

"If you never, never, never say anything about this I'll always say that if I ever marry any man it will be a determined young man who knows what he wants!"

MADE IT IN RECORD TIME

Wager That Was Won by Golf Enthusiast in Spite of Odds That Were Heavy.

"Golf enthusiasm has probably caused more argument and unique wagers than any other branch of sport," says G. J. Nathan in Outing. For instance:

"No more amusing illustration of this enthusiasm can be cited than the wager that was made several years ago by a former national champion with a number of his friends on the Garden City course. While in the heat of a discussion over the fine points of the game, the ex-champion declared that he could play the 18 holes of the Garden City course in less than one hour's time and in 95 strokes or better. In view of the fact that the course covers about 6,000 yards and that it usually takes about two hours to make this distance of more than three miles, it is quite superfluous to say that his offer was snapped up on the spot. It was decided, furthermore, to settle the matter at once.

"Procuring two caddies, the player ordered one of them to follow him and the other to keep on ahead after the ball. The course is comparatively flat and the 'gallery' mounted bicycles to keep pace with the golfer who had set out to make a speed record over the course. At the cry 'Go!' from the timekeeper, he started. Keeping constantly on the run and shouting out to the caddy the club he intended to use next, he dashed around the entire course in exactly 46 minutes, making the 18 holes in 92 strokes, according to the tally, and thereby winning as odd a wager as has ever been laid by a golf enthusiast."

Power of Nature's Beauty.

Have you never felt the marvelous power of beauty in nature? If not you have missed one of the most exquisite joys in life, says Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine. I was once going through the Yosemite valley, and after riding 100 miles in a stagecoach over rough mountain roads I was so completely exhausted that it did not seem as though I could keep my seat while we traveled over the ten more miles which would bring us to our destination. But on looking down from the top of the mountain I caught a glimpse of the celebrated Yosemite falls and the surrounding scenery just as the sun broke through the clouds, and there was revealed a picture of such rare beauty and marvelous picturesqueness that every particle of fatigue, brain fag and muscle weariness departed in an instant. My whole soul thrilled with a winged sense of sublimity, grandeur and beauty which I had never experienced before and which I can never forget. I felt a spiritual uplift which brought tears of joy to my eyes.

A Delayed Execution.

An eighteenth century execution on Kennington common was stopped for a time owing to a strange cause. On Aug. 19, 1763, two days before the date of the execution, a heavy fog came over London, accompanied by thunder and lightning and torrents of rain. These conditions lasted for nearly forty-eight hours, and many people believed that the last day had arrived. When the time fixed for the execution arrived the assembled crowd cried shame on the sheriff for hanging a man when the world was coming to an end. As he persisted in his preparations they burst through the barriers and stopped the proceedings, shouting that the culprit might as well wait a few minutes, when the grand summons would come to all. The sheriff had to obtain the assistance of a force of soldiers before the execution could be carried out

Mixed Emotions.

A Bostonian tells of a clean, well set up young Irishman who formerly saw service in the British navy, but who is now engaged in business at the Hub.

"When are you going to get freedom in Ireland, John?" the Bostonian once idly asked.

"The only way that we'll get freedom in ould Ireland," said the Celt, "will be if France an' Russia an' Germany an' Austria an' maybe Italy if they would all join together to give those blackguards of English a rare ould batin'. That's the only way, sir, we'll get home rule."

Then as he looked cautiously about a twinkle of cunning was added to his expression. "An' the whole lot of 'em together couldn't do it, sir. Oh, it's the grand navy we've got!"—Lippincott's Magazine.

The Talmud.

The Talmud is the compendium of ancient Jewish oral, or unwritten, law, as distinguished from the Pentatench, or written, law. Its origin is coeval with the return of the Jewish people from the Babylonian captivity, 536 B. C. Its compilation in Hebrew was begun by the scribes, and by their successors the work was carried on till 220 B. C. The Talmud is a combination of prose and poetry and contains two elements, legal and legendary. Its morality resembles that of the New Testament, and its philosophy reminds us very forcibly of that of the great Plato.—New York American.

A Fresh Egg.

An English food expert, said in a recent lecture:

"The secret of health is two meals a day with an occasional fast. But people won't avail themselves of this superb secret. It is too unpleasant—like the fresh egg. A gentleman, after cutting the top off a soft boiled egg, summoned the waiter and said:

"'Waiter, take this egg back to the kitchen, wring its neck, and grill it for me.'"

MONSTER WHALES.

One That Swallowed Whole a Shark Fifteen Feet Long.

Frank T. Bullen, the noted writer of sea tales, in one of his lectures said that in New Zealand he once saw a whale opened and there were found in its stomach a number of fish which must simply have swum down its throat, and among them was a shark fifteen feet long and nine feet round. The huge Greenland whale was described. Mr. Bullen asked his audience to imagine a monster of 250 tons and told how such a one was taken on a voyage in which he took part, enough whalebone being taken out of his head to pay a good dividend on the voyage. For six months in the year this particular kind of whale, which was the most helpless of all, led a life of alarums and excursions, for he was always being chased.

A third kind of whale, the humpbacked whale, was shown in a picture jumping from the water, and Mr. Bullen explained that this was no indication of joy in life. They were, in fact, if not driven out of their minds, certainly driven out of the water by parasites adhering to their bodies. This particular whale was greatly devoted to its young, and if a man happened to kill a calf he needed all his ingenuity to escape from the mother. On one occasion fifty-two boats went after whales in the bay of California and by accident a calf was killed. In one hour the parent destroyed fifty of the fifty-two boats, killing a number of men, and then sailed out to sea without a scratch.

BEN BUTLER'S BLUFF.

It Was Well Worked and Completely Fooled General Bingham.

General John A. Bingham was a member of the military tribunal that tried Mrs. Surratt and the Lincoln assassination conspirators.

After the trial in the subsequent debates in the house General B. F. Butler frequently charged that the commission had arrived at an unjust verdict and had convicted an innocent woman. In a memorable debate he boldly proclaimed that if the contents of a diary which had been found on the dead body of J. Wilkes Booth were ever made public it would disclose the fact that it contained the proof of Mrs. Surratt's innocence, which proof had been infamously suppressed by the commission. When General Bingham made a movement as though he would repel such an accusation, Butler dramatically drew a memorandum book from his breast pocket and held it aloft, but did not utter a word. Bingham naturally supposed that Butler had a copy of a diary such as he had spoken of. As a matter of fact the book contained nothing but blank leaves. General Butler was just bluffing.

The diary was in possession of Secretary Stanton, but President Johnson finally demanded it. It was an interesting book, but it threw no light upon the great conspiracy.

Milk and Popped Corn.

Because he knew his patient the doctor was not at all ruffled when she exclaimed:

"But I can't, doctor; it is no use talking. I just can't. I hate milk. I can't drink it. I will take any kind of medicine you wish me to, but I cannot swallow sweet milk."

"Very well," he said soothingly. Then he opened the door, and from the kitchen there drifted in the smell of popping corn.

"Who is popping corn?" she asked.

"Your nurse," said the doctor.

Half an hour later he persuaded her to taste a spoonful of milk.

"Why, that's not so bad after all," she said. "What did you do to it?"

"Soaked that popped corn in it," said he. "Gives it an entirely different taste, doesn't it? Sweet milk's bitterest enemy is bound to say it is drinkable after it has soaked up the essence of popped corn for ten or fifteen minutes."—New York Sun.

Evening Schools.

Evening schools owe their existence to the Rev. Thomas Charles, who about 1811 set up one at Bala, Wales, which proved to be quite successful. In 1829 or 1840 the English Bishop Hinds strongly recommended such schools for poor adults, who, on account of enforced labor, had no chance to secure an education. The idea was taken in hand by the British privy council in 1861, and from that date evening schools began to be considered seriously. At the present time they are numerous throughout Great Britain, America and many other leading nations.—New York American.

Keep the Fire Burning.

It used to be the custom in some old English inns for the fire to be kept constantly burning day and night. One such inn mentioned in "Old Country Inns" was the Plow, at Upper Dicker, in Sussex, and at the Chequers inn, near Osmotherly, in Yorkshire, the hearth fire has been burning uninterruptedly for at least 130 years. The tradition points to a time when the public house was necessarily resorted to for purposes of all kinds.

A Desperate Game

Eva thanked and kissed him for yielding to her, but he did it with misgiving. The words had scarcely left his lips ere he would have recalled them. But her relief and joy at being assured that there would be no meeting between him and his enemy were so great that he had not the heart to retract his promise.

On the following morning he was once more in London.

CHAPTER XXXI.

PLAYING FOR A BRIDE.

Jorrocks had only told the truth when he informed Guy that Mr. Foscombe was particularly engaged. He and Sir Rufus were bending over a chess table, totally oblivious of the outside world. They had begun playing soon after breakfast the day before, they had played ever since, stopping only for meals, and the fateful match was not yet concluded.

At the outset both men proceeded very cautiously, each being unaware of the other's strength. But after the game had lasted for an hour the baronet lost patience and made a bold attack, sacrificing a knight for the sake of gaining what he thought would prove to be a winning position. The lawyer in a moment saw his advantage and met the attack with the utmost caution. And he had his reward. By the end of half an hour the attack collapsed and the way was open for an advance on Foscombe's side. Even then he proceeded warily, never throwing away a chance, and in twenty minutes more he was able to pronounce the magic word "checkmate!"

He had won the first game, and, what was more, he believed he had shown himself decidedly the baronet's superior in play.

"Draws don't count, I suppose?" said Sir Rufus as he rearranged the pieces for the second game.

"The usual way is to make them count for a half each," said the other, "but in this case we will let them go for nothing."

The result of this was to prolong the play. After losing the first game Sir Rufus kept himself better in hand. He made no more rash assaults on the enemy's position, and the result was that he won not only the next game, but the next after that. He was, in fact, the better player, and after his second defeat Foscombe was compelled to recognize the fact.

When they adjourned for a late luncheon after the close of the third game Foscombe felt as certain that he would lose the match as he had before felt confident that he would win it. And during the meal, which was eaten almost in silence, his reflections were peculiarly bitter. In his heart he cursed himself for his folly. But the food and wine partly restored his self confidence. An hour's rest and a cigar completed what the meat and wine had begun, and when play began again he faced his adversary resolved to fight for a win with all his powers.

Success had perhaps made Sir Rufus careless. At all events the fortune of war left him and for once sided with his opponent. After a long and stubbornly contested game the baronet, finding his position hopeless, resigned.

It was evident that he felt even this partial defeat keenly. His manner was calmness itself, but there was a look in his eyes that the lawyer did not at all like. It seemed to threaten him.

Lights were brought in as they were beginning the fifth game of the series, the second since luncheon, when Jorrocks came close to Foscombe and said in an undertone:

"A gentleman has called and wishes to see you, sir."

"Oh, let him wait," said Foscombe mechanically. And the butler glided out of the room. But a moment later he caught the baronet's eye regarding him curiously, and suddenly he started. He had spoken to Jorrocks without considering where he was or who it could have been that wanted to see him. Now he knew. There was but one man in the world who could have an interest in following him, the man whom he had so grossly deceived under the mask of friendship. The thought of meeting his dupe face to face was not reassuring. But he tried to dismiss the subject from his mind and fix his attention on the game. This was not an easy task. His thoughts would wander off to the man he had wronged. Would Lorimer insist upon seeing him, or could he be cajoled into leaving the castle without the personal encounter he had come so far to obtain?

He played on for perhaps half an hour, and it seemed to him that every move he made was worse than the last. It was plain that if he went on in this way he would lose the game and probably lose the match. Things were going badly for him, very badly.

He looked up at his adversary. "May I ring the bell?" he asked.

"Certainly."

"Is that person still there?" he asked Jorrocks when he appeared.

"Yes, sir."

"Well, be good enough to tell him that I cannot see him tonight, but that a letter addressed here tomorrow will find me. After that I shall be back in town. And please let me know when he takes himself off."

The butler departed on his errand.

"Will you allow me to wait until the butler comes back?" he said to his host. There was a look of mockery on the baronet's face, and Foscombe could not meet it. He dropped his eyes and sat there in silence till Jorrocks came and reported that the gentleman had gone away.

Then play was recommenced, but it was evident that Foscombe had a very bad position, so bad that it was scarcely possible for him to avoid defeat. His heart sank, and the baronet's face assumed a triumphant expression. It was in vain that Foscombe tempted him to do something rash. Steadily and remorselessly he pressed his advantage home, taking piece after piece and hemming his adversary's king more completely in. If it had been any ordinary occasion Foscombe would have resigned long ago, but he had a feeling that if he lost this game and allowed his enemy to end the day's play a game ahead of him he would never be able to make up for the loss and would lose the match. Despairingly he struggled on, and suddenly hope looked at him out of the darkness!

He was reduced almost to his last gasp. His king was so surrounded with hostile pieces that he could not move, and his pieces were all captured except a bishop, a rook and three blocked pawns. With trembling hand he advanced the bishop to a square in which it was en prise by a knight, and then immediately made a motion as if he had made a slip and would withdraw his move. His object was to make his adversary move without studying the board.

The ruse was successful. Sir Rufus swiftly put out his hand and captured the bishop. Then Foscombe gave check with the rook, compelling his adversary to take it, and announced "Stalemate," making the game a drawn one. Sir Rufus stared at the board for an instant and then raised his eyes to his enemy's face.

"That was a lawyerlike trick," he said.

"Stalemate is a perfectly legitimate device," stammered Foscombe.

"It was not that I referred to," said the baronet, "but never mind. We are level still. We cannot play more tonight. Tomorrow will decide."

Next day they were rather late beginning, and the first game was keenly fought. In the end victory fell to the lot of Sir Rufus, who throughout played the better game. He had only one more game to win, and the match with all that had been staked upon it would be his.

Just as the second game was commencing Jorrocks came in and handed his master a telegram. With a word of apology the baronet tore it open, and a smile of grim satisfaction lit up his face.

"If you don't mind," he said to his guest, "I will send an answer to this," and he rose and went to the writing table. Foscombe wondered idly what the telegram could be about. The news, whatever it was, seemed to afford Sir Rufus considerable pleasure. He positively beamed upon his guest as he returned to the chess table, but on both sides every nerve was strained to win. Three times did Jorrocks announce luncheon, only to be told to go—elsewhere. At length when both players were faint from excitement and want of food they recognized that neither could possibly win that game. It was a draw and went for nothing.

The excitement was now intense. The rest and refreshment of the luncheon adjournment did but little to allay it.

Both were eager to begin again and end the long struggle.

By this time Foscombe recognized the fact that he was pitted against a player superior to himself and that he could only win, if at all, by the use of greater caution and patience.

After an hour's play the baronet made by inadvertence a false move, and Foscombe at once took advantage of it. Sir Rufus struggled hard for some minutes, but the case was hopeless, and he suffered himself to be mated, saying from between his teeth: "I make no complaint this time. It was my own fault, but I promise you it shall not happen again."

Foscombe rose and walked up and down the room. He was shaking all over with excitement. There was but one game more to play, and whoever won it would win Eva and her fortune. He wished it were over. Better know that he had lost, he said to himself, than endure the suspense any longer.

Five minutes more, and the two men, grave and silent, sat down to the final, the decisive game. It was getting dark, but when Jorrocks brought in lights they scarcely noticed it.

For more than an hour the play continued without either side gaining much advantage. And then suddenly Foscombe thought he saw a chance of winning by one bold stroke. He studied the position carefully. It seemed sound. The risk did not appear to be great. He advanced his queen to a rather dangerous position. Sir Rufus, fearing a trap, made a countermove. Then Foscombe gave check with the queen, placing her in danger. He knew that if Sir Rufus contented himself with moving his king he could scarcely avoid defeat, but he thought he would be tempted to take the queen, and then, and then—

The baronet put out his hand, hesitated and drew it back. Foscombe's heart stopped beating. Once more Sir Rufus looked over the board and—took the queen. One more move and another, and then Foscombe advanced a rook from a distant corner and in a shaking voice whispered, "Mate!"

He had won.

For nearly a minute the two men sat silently staring into one another's eyes; then the baronet's face broke into a smile.

"You have won," he said. "I congratulate you." Then, without waiting for any reply, he burst into a roar of laughter and with one sweep of his arm sent board and chess pieces rattling on the floor.

"It is too absurd, too excruciatingly funny," he said, still laughing. "But I am quite content."

"If you are satisfied I am," said the lawyer dryly.

"And with reason, my good friend. You have every reason to be satisfied. A beautiful bride, who is no doubt deeply in love with you and who has a dowry of £80,000; the satisfaction, too, of knowing that you have taken her from first one of your friends and then another, both of whom trusted you—but that is a detail."

"I trust you do not mean to insult me, Sir Rufus, after having taken the way you yourself suggested for the settling of our dispute."

"Insult you, my good Foscombe? What can have put that into your head? I fancy it would not be easy to devise a fitting and altogether satisfactory insult for you."

"We have had enough of this, I think," said the lawyer with more spirit than he had yet shown.

"What do you propose to do?" the baronet asked again, still with the same mocking smile.

"To leave the castle with Miss Fitzgerald at once."

"What! Tonight?"

"Yes; tonight," said Foscombe sharply.

"But the lady is ill. She is in bed; has been in bed all day."

"Well, then, tomorrow morning. We must go then whether she is well or ill. I shall take her straight home."

"To Castle Dare?"

"That is my intention. But of course I shall be guided entirely by Miss Fitzgerald's wishes as to that. And I trust it is not necessary for me to remind you, Sir Rufus, that it is part of our bargain that the loser shall not interfere with the winner in any way. You are bound in honor not to say a word about any suspicions you may have concerning Captain Fitzgerald's guilt in a certain matter nor to mention to any one the fact that Lady Roscommon has another husband living."

The baronet bowed, but he had not time to reply before the door opened, and Jorrocks once more presented himself.

This time he bore a card on a salver, and he handed it to the baronet, saying, "The gentleman is waiting, sir."

Sir Rufus looked at the card and burst into a laugh. He tossed it over to his adversary. Foscombe looked at the card and turned pale. He had read the name of Guy Lorimer.

"I thought he had gone away last night," he stammered.

"But it seems he has come back again," said the other. "Really, if a beaten man may be allowed to suck a little amusement out of his defeat, I may be pardoned for enjoying this little contretemps. You have the other claimant to deal with, you perceive. Tell the gentleman to step this way, Jorrocks."

"No, no! Not here. I don't wish to see him."

"That I can easily understand, but it would be great fun to see you two meet, and I don't feel inclined to deny myself that treat. But you may give your own orders," he added in a lower tone. "The place is yours now."

"But I restore it to you," said Foscombe in the same low voice.

"And I decline to accept the gift," answered Sir Rufus, speaking in his usual tone. "But we cannot very well turn the gentleman out on a night like this. It is raining as it can only rain in Cumberland, and the thunder gets worse every moment. I scarcely think we can avoid asking him to spend the night, but of course as you wish."

"You can do as you please, Sir Rufus," said Foscombe, rising as he spoke, "but I am going to my own room. I shall stay there and leave you free to entertain this gentleman if it suits you without any reference to me. Perhaps you will tell the cook to send me up something to eat when dinner is served. And I would be obliged if you would order the carriage to be round in time for the first train in the morning."

"Your orders shall be obeyed, sir," said the baronet, with mock humility. And as the lawyer left the room he summoned the butler, who had discreetly retired out of hearing.

"Ask the gentleman who is waiting to step in here," he called out briskly.

CHAPTER XXXII.

A PLOT BETRAYED.

With a sad heart Guy Lorimer returned to London and sought Ashton Brooke. On the stairs he met Mr. Pepperday, who gave him a queer, sickly sort of smile. Brooke had finished breakfast, and Guy told him all he had learned about Eva, Foscombe and the baronet's threats concerning Lady Roscommon and Terence. "Brooke," he said, "you see the whole trouble has arisen because Lady Roscommon is a woman with a past. She was a Miss MacIlvray, and she had been married before she became Lady Roscommon—married to a wealthy young fool named Kempson, who ran through all his money, committed some crime in connection with a gang of scoundrels and was, with his companions, arrested, tried and sentenced to a long term of penal servitude. He was in Dartmoor when his wife's uncle came home from India, adopted her and brought her out in society. She met Lord Roscommon, who fell in love with her. I can easily imagine the perplexity and distress of the poor girl. I dare say she had no good reason to offer for refusing Lord Roscommon, and it was evident that she could not go on refusing lovers indefinitely. Her uncle would have begun to suspect something and might have made inquiries which would have proved her ruin. She had practically only two courses before her—to confess to her uncle that she had deceived him grossly and that she was a married woman, married to a convict, in which case he would probably have had no more to do with her, or commit bigamy. She chose the latter course, and now she is paying dearly for her sin.

"Sir Rufus Deveril was in possession of her secret—probably he was a friend either of her or of her first husband in his younger days. Being in great need of money—people talk of him as being practically a ruined man—he hit upon the plan of making use of this secret to win for himself a wealthy bride. From her uncle Miss Fitzgerald inherits a large fortune, which Sir Rufus determined should be his. He threatened to expose Lady Roscommon unless he became her son-in-law. All this Eva learned from her mother's letters, which she found in Sir Rufus' desk."

Brooke whistled in amazement when he learned of Foscombe's perfidy and of the promise he had led Eva to make.

"She will surely never marry the cur, now that she knows you are alive!" Brooke exclaimed, puffing furiously at his pipe.

"I fear she may. If she were convinced that by sacrificing herself she could shut Sir Rufus' mouth once and forever I almost think she would, though she were never to know another hour of happiness."

"Poor girl. But she gave you her promise too. And yours was given first. So your claim is at least as good as Foscombe's. Did you put that before her?"

"I did, but not so as to insist on it. It seemed to be playing it rather low down on the girl. If she would rather give me up than have her mother proclaimed a bigamist and herself and her brother illegitimate why, could I plead her promise against that?"

"What the devil is that?" cried Ashton Brooke, starting to his feet. The curtain over the bedroom door was moving, and the door itself was being pushed slowly open. The portiere was pushed aside and Pepperday, looking more ghastly than ever, his face of a queer unnatural grayness, came slowly into the room.

"What do you want?" said his master.

"It was I was," stammered the man. "Oh, sir, can you forgive me?"

"Forgive what?"

"I have been listening to what Mr. Lorimer has been saying to you. I have heard every word."

"Have you suddenly gone mad, Pepperday? What on earth made you do that?"

"The love of my wife and children and the malice of a devil in human shape drove me to it, sir. I have been the most miserable man in Peckham ever since I promised to do this vile thing, and I trembled so that I thought you must have seen the curtain shaking. I thought I would confess all to you, and then perhaps you would hear something I know about that gentleman you have been talking of."

"What gentleman? Foscombe?"

"No, sir; Sir Rufus Deveril and the lady—Lady Roscommon, I think, you called her."

"Sit down, man, and tell us what you know. If you are frank with us I dare say I might for Mr. Lorimer's sake consent to overlook the rather crooked thing you have confessed to. Come, what is it?"

"When I was a young man, sir, some five and twenty years ago, I was a clerk in the office of a money lender called Foscombe, this Mr. Foscombe's father. One of the other clerks, a young man named Oliver, left us, having got a place through an uncle in the office of a registrar of births and deaths in Upper Islington. One day about three months after he had left the office I met him, and he seemed to be spending money freely, treating men he scarcely knew, and so on. I said to him, 'Oliver, has any one left you a legacy?' 'No,' said he, 'but somebody has paid me £50 for a job. Such a lark!' says he. After a little Oliver, who had been drinking freely, told me all about it. He said that he had an old acquaintance, a man named Kempson, who had come into a great deal of money and was quite a swell. One day he met Oliver and said there was a little matter he could oblige him in, and it would be as good as £50 in his pocket. Oliver was quite pleased and asked what it was. And what do you think it was, sir? Nothing less than to perform a mock ceremony of marriage at the office. Kempson must have been a rare scoundrel. He wanted to cheat a girl into thinking that she was married to him when she wasn't married at all."

Pepperday stopped to take breath and wipe his moist brow with a dirty white pocket handkerchief. Guy sat devouring him with his eyes.

"What was the name of the bride?" he asked in a voice hoarse with anxiety.

"It was a queer name, sir, a Scotch name. I heard you mention it as you were talking to Mr. Ashton Brooke and that was what made me think"—

"Was the name MacIlvray?" cried Guy impatiently.

"That was it, sir!"

"And the husband's name was Kempson. Good heavens, Brooke, if this should be true!"

"But how did the scoundrels carry out such an imposture?" asked Brooke, eying his clerk sternly.

"Oliver told me the whole story, laughing all the time. He seemed to think it was a first class joke. It was easy enough for him to do it, sir, as it was a regular registrar's office, with government books and papers lying about, and she couldn't be expected to notice that it was only a registry for births and deaths and not for marriages. And of course he would choose an hour when his chief would be out and he would be in charge of the office."

ANOTHER BIG SHOW NEXT MONDAY NIGHT

All existing advance sale records are likely to be smashed at the Plainfield theatre, Monday, March 13, when the sale opens for the famous comedy success, "The Time, the Place and the Girl," which comes to the theatre, Saturday next, matinee and night. The large number of regular theatre-goers of Plainfield who keep in touch with affairs of the playhouse apparently know all about this extraordinary production, a fact clearly indicated by the unusually numerous requests which have been received at the box office that seats be laid aside before the hour for the opening of the sale. Of course these requests have not been complied with, in fairness to those who will appear in line Monday morning. But it is significant of the widespread interest which is manifest in the event, that it denotes the approach of one of those famous shows which come along now and then in the course of a season, and which everybody appears to be determined to witness. "The Time, the Place and the Girl" will be seen with all of the massive and beautiful scenic and electrical effects which were used during the recent run of this musical comedy in New York, Chicago and other large cities and represented by the company of 50 comedians, singers, dancers and specialists which have ben identified with the remarkable success of the piece from the beginning of its career. In view of this there is warrant for the expectation of immense advance sales, which as stated before begins Monday morning.

CHILDREN RAISE $100 BY PRESENTING PLAY

Princess Winsome was gallantly rescued yesterday afternoon and evening by Prince Charming and thereby ended a troublous time for the royal parents of the princess. The saving of the royal young lady and the tragedies leading up to it were admirably portrayed by several members of the Sunshine Mission Band of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. The fairy play was given to raise funds for the use of the band in its work at their missionary station at Canton, China; school at Tripoli, Spria, and the support of two famine orphans in India. The sum realized by the young people amounted to about $100.

The chapel of the church was filled at both performances.

These took part: Princess Winsome, Helen Terry; Prince Charming, Dorcas Boman; Sir Feal Knight, Janet Lane; the king, Elizabeth Browne; the queen, Mildred Miller; witch, Kio Tetsuka; ogre, Augusta Burke; Frogeye Fearsome, Elizabeth Brown; Titania, Louise Patterson. The flower fairies were: Rose, Helen Patterson; forget-me-not, Julia Taylor; pansy, Helen Newman; poppy, Martha Williams; daisy, Bessie Case; morning glory, Margery Bird.

The entertainment was arraigned and the children instructed by Misses Harriet Goddard and Edna Brown.

LIVELY BOYS MAKE USEFUL CITIZENS

Nearly one hundred mothers attended the lecture given by Rev. Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews in the auditorium of the Young Men's Christian Association yesterday afternoon. It was the second in the series to be given this month and proved decidedly interesting to the women present. Last week's address had to do with importance of the physical life of the boy. Yesterday Mr. Mathiews took up the emotional phase of the boy's existence.

He compared the life of the active, lively boy with a savage, with considerable advantage to the boy, the life of the savage being largely emotional is a natural inheritance of the boy, but that he improves upon it by tincturing his emotions with feeling of affection, a sense which is usually absent is the savage.

The fighting spirit, declared the speaker, is one which develops naturally in the boy and he is not counted much unless he exhibits that spirit among his fellows. But the boy does long to become a man He copies his elder male friends and wants to smoke and do other things that his father does. Serious boys become bad men, while those who are lively and fall into the usual peccadilloes generally find themselves and make the best of citizens.

JACK JOHNSON BEATEN IN AUTOMOBILE RACE.

Jack Johnson, the ebony-hued enigma of the pugilistic world is sorely troubled. It's all a result of a little argument li'l Artha had with the E-M-F "30" racer which is entered in the coming Panama-Pacific road race.

When the E-M-F, with Driver Aurandt at the wheel, was being tried out near San Francisco, Jack was in the neighborhood pursuing his favorite pastime—shattering the speed ordinance in his monster six-cylinder car. The E-M-F passed the big "smoke," much to the latter's surprise.

"You were travelling some," remarked Jack when he saw the E-M-F team a short time after.

"Yess, jogging along a little," replied Driver Aurandt.

"A little?" queried Jack with much surprise, "you don't mean to say that little car can go any faster?"

"Let's settle the argument right now," suggested Aurandt, who has quite a golden smile of his own.

"With my heartiest approval," chuckled the big champion In another moment the two cars were off, the exhaust from Johnson's car cracking the atmosphere.

It was a neck-and-neck affair for about ten yards when the E-M-F leaped ahead of the throbbing six cylinder machine and despite the fact that Johnson crowded his racer to its utmost capacity, Aurandt rapidly widened the gap that separated the two racers.

"How did you like it?" asked Aurandt after Jack came up.

"Is that the E-M-F "Bullet?" asked the big pugilist, ignoring Aurandt's question.

"Nope, just a younger brother," answered Aurandt and drove on.

Chalmers MOTOR CARS

HAVE GOOD MOTORS

Back of every smooth-running Chalmers motor there are many thorough tests of efficiency. As each motor comes from the Assembling Department it is tested for accuracy under electric power. Each part must be perfectly assembled, the whole running smoothly.

After this comes the most important test of all. At varying speeds, from 800 to 1200 revolutions, each motor is run 24 hours under its own power to determine to the last degree of certainty that every part works smoothly and silently. After this the motor is hitched to a dynamometer which makes the engine carry a load equivalent to a touring car with its full number of passengers. Under this strain the motor is run an equivalent of 300 miles.

And finally each motor which passes the test is assembled in a car and sent out for a 200 mile road test in actual service.

There is a Chalmers motor which will work right for you and give you the "best run for your money" you have ever had from any purchase. Lut us fix your delivery date now.

DR. CHAMBLISS MAKES A STATEMENT

His Attitude Regarding Gloekler Licence as Expressed at Ministers' Meeting Told by Him.

Apprehending that some may place a wrong construction on the gist of the report of the Ministers' Association meeting in The Daily Press on Saturday, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, accepts the offer of this paper to explain to the public what transpired at the meeting in question so far as he personally was concerned. Rev. Dr. Chambliss, Rev. Charles L. Goodrich and Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring yesterday spoke briefly to their congregations on the action taken by the ministers on Saturday, which following its custom not to suppress news, this paper published.

It is suggested that a careful reading be given Dr. Chambliss' statement which follows:

"You will, I am sure, kindly allow me to correct a misapprehension affecting myself which has resulted from the publication in The Daily Press Saturday afternoon last concerning a meeting the day previous of the Plainfield Ministers' Association. The report was doubtless given to you hastily, without carefully weighing words, but with no intention of misrepresenting the facts, and you cannot be blamed for printing it as received.

1. "It was said that I 'urged that leniency be shown by the Association to Christian Gloekler, whose retail liquor license was not renewed by the Common Council, and to the business men who signed a petition to the governing body to reconsider its action and grant the license again.'

"I made no plea for 'leniency' either to Mr. Gloekler or to the signers of the petition.

2. "It is said that I 'referred to the saloon-keeper whose license was taken away because he had sold liquor to minors as 'Brother Gloekler.''

"I did not use the phrase, 'Brother Gloekler,' though I would not be ashamed to do so to any human being; but it is not my custom, except in church services, to call a man 'Brother,' preferring the more common designation of 'Mr.'

3. "It is said, 'Dr. Chambliss read his remarks from a typewritten statement, in which he claimed that equity should have been shown Mr. Gloekler by granting him a short license in order to dispose of his $6,000 worth of liquors.'

"I had nothing typewritten, but only a brief paper in pencil, which I had hurriedly written in my study just before going to the meeting. I did not claim that equity should have been shown Mr. Gloekler by granting him a short license, nor did I in any way condemn the action of the Common Council.

4. "It is said, 'he also asserted that the best business men had signed the petition for a reconsideration, and that no reflection should be cast on them, as it was not the desire of the ministers to antagonize business interests.'

"This, so far as related to the character of the signers, is what might be called a near-truth. What I said was, (I quote from the paper here and everywhere verbatim), 'In view of the fact that many of our fellow-citizens of prominence in business and of large influences have invited in a petition to the Plainfield Common Council to reconsider an action recently taken by which the license of Christian Gloekler was cancelled,' (I should have said 'refused renewal'), 'we, the Ministers' Association of this city, feel it our duty to express the conviction that the violation of the license law by Mr. Gloekler cannot be innocently overlooked by the Council, and that his license was justly revoked'—(its renewal refused), 'we have great respect for the opinion of the gentlemen who signed the petition, who are among our best and most useful citizens, desiring as earnestly as we ourselves the welfare of the community; and we regret the pain and loss which this punishment inflicts upon Mr. Gloekler, for he, like every other man, is our brother. Yet, we are unable to see how the Council can restore his license,'—(or 'renew it.')'

"As for the rest, referring to a suggestion which had been made to me by one of the signers of the petition, that Mr. Gloekler's license might be 'renewed for a limited period and perhaps in another locality,' (for he, like everybody else, thought 'that corner' abominable), I said, 'this could only be justified, if at all, by the consideration that Mr. Gloekler's pecuniary loss is not only heavy but comes upon him suddenly while pursuing a course of conduct which, though in violation of law, he had come to regard as one of the many transgressions that are ignored by the municipal authorities, and for which it is said other men in the same business have not been punished.'

"I meant thus only to mention a consideration which might naturally enough appeal to a body that sells liquor licenses—not one appealing to me, who would never under any circumstances vote for a saloon license. But I say now, what I did not say then, that if I favored the saloon business at all, I think I might see some reason why this man's case should be 'reconsidered', for I do not know that he is worse than the others.

"The only other words in the paper besides those already quoted are these, with which I closed: 'We are united in our opposition to the saloon business, which we believe to be only evil and evil continually. But so long as we sell to men the right to do such a business, we cannot exclude them from our consideration, as children still of the same merciful God, to whom we would extend a brother's sympathy when they suffer, and a brother's hand to recover them when they err, or to lift them up when they fall." That is simply the Christianity I have always tried to preach, for I have so learned Christ, who never condoned sin, yet always had a heart and a hand for the sinner; and I believe this is the spirit of my brother ministers.

The discussion which took place was lively but entirely brotherly, and had reference only to the form, not the essence, of the resolution to be adopted.

There was no "storm of protest," though there was general, not universal dissent from the tone of my remarks as being less pronounced than the occasion demanded. Neither I nor any one else offered a resolution, a substitute or an amendment, (not, however, I am glad to say, was mentioned in your account, though it was elsewhere), which contemplated a request to the Council to reconsider the case of Mr. Gloekler, and the vote was unanimous for the resolution which was passed and reported in your paper.

J. A. CHAMBLISS.

A communication from Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie follows:

"I will be glad if you will give me the courtesy of your columns to correct an impression which will be made upon the casual reader by the article in Saturday's issue concerning Dr. Chambliss and the renewal of the Gloekler license. Dr. Chambliss did not disagree with any of his brethren in the ministers' meeting on the matter of that license and strongly expressed himself on the justice of the Council's action. In an early part of the meeting he offered the suggestion that in dealing with this matter the Association should not enter upon any denunciation of the merchants and citizens who had signed a petition for rehearing, that we should give them credit for just intentions and good citizenship as well as ourselves and that we should not enter into any antagonism to them or act in excitement or haste. This suggestion has usually been offered and properly when we were about to make any public protest and it has nearly always been acted upon.

"Dr. Chambliss's opposition to the saloon, and to the renewal of this license was as frank and hearty as that of any of his brethren. I believe that a different impression of his attitude will be taken by many from the article of Saturday evening and I desire to say that such an impression is absolutely unjustifiable and that it is a great mistake for any of the public to think for one moment that Dr. Chambliss ever so remotedly put himself on the side of the saloon in this controversy."

To his people yesterday, Rev. Dr. Herring said:

"Recently there was sent to the Common Council of our city a petition to reconsider its action concerning a certain saloon. Upon investigation I find that a number of these men signed it without fully realizing its import and were they to have another chance would not sign it a second time. In other instances, I found that one of the members of the firm signed it, while the other member was ignorant of it. Did you ever think that the sudden judgment that came upon this saloon keeper was very much like the judgment of God? The divine judgment is delayed and man continues in his sin; then sudden calamity comes to him. A man sells liquor to minors, and is finally discovered and judged. But how long has he been engaged in wrong doing?

"It is not a good argument to say that others are doing the same thing. The same judgment would be meted to them could we legally know who they are. Finally, I want to say that the Plainfield Ministers' Association were unanimous in their approval of the recent action of the Common Council in refusing to relicense Gloekler's saloon, and in their disap-

CEDAR BROOK TREE FOR A HISTORIC SITE

Senator James E. Martine, of this city, is scheduled to take part in the celebration at Appomattox, Va., on Sunday, April 9, commemorative of the surrender of General Lee. The land on which the now famous battle was fought is the property of General Ames, who was a participant in the memorable battle. General Ames has invited Governor Woodrow Wilson to be present on the occasion and also has suggested that Senator Martine could furnish the apple tree which it is proposed to plant to take the place of the one removed piecemeal by relic hunters (the tree under which Lee surrendered to Grant).

A large attendance of Confederate veterans and some of the Virginia militia are expected to participate. Champ Clark, the new Speaker of the House, is to be prominent in the ceremonies attending the planting of the apple tree.

PLAYS THIS WEEK AT LOCAL THEATRE

A symposium of attractions is booked for this week and on Monday next at the Plainfield theatre. A feature of the Howe pictures, which will be exhibited tomorrow evening, is a trip through the best scenic parts of Europe in a dirigible balloon, which is described as a most thrilling adventure.

"The Time, the Place and the Girl," which, it is said, cost ten thousand dollars to stage, will be the next offerting, Saturday matinee and evening. This is a musical comedy of extraordinary beauty and fascination, well calculated to please the most exacting audience. Finally, on Monday evening, "Bright Eyes," a new musical play, by Joseph M. Gaites, will be the attraction. For the jaded this play is said to be a reawakening and is said by the New York critics to be the best thing Mr. Gaites has ever written. Stars of the first magnitude will appear in the play.

FAMOUS PEDESTRIAN HERE THURSDAY NIGHT

Edward Payson Weston, who will give his celebrated humorous lecture at the First M. E. church, Thursday evening, under the auspices of the Brotherhood, will celebrate his seventy-third birthday on March 15. A testimonial lecture to commemorate the event will be given in Grace M. E. church, Amsterdam avenue and 104th street, New York city.

The testimonial was planned by a committee of prominent citizens, including Nathan Straus, William Nelson Cromwell, Henry Clews and Gerald R. Brown. In their letter to Mr Weston, they said:

"Your successful efforts, famous the world over, to place walking as a healthful exercise before the public have already done a vast amount of good to the people of this country. We, as New Yorkers, feel that your appearance on the lecture platform in the metropolis would enable you to widen the good influence of your labors and also to permit your myriad friends here to signify their appreciation of you as a typical American and an earnest apostle of clean, exhilarating sport. We would suggest that it take the form of a personal testimonial to you in such shape as you may desire at such an early date as may suit your convenience."

THE TEXTS OF HAGGAI THEMES FOR SERMONS.

Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue church, preached the first of a series of four sermons, last night, on "The Great Texts of a Minor Prophet, Haggai," and he drew many helpful lessons from this Bible character, showing his strength and determination to do those things which pleased God. Dr. Zelie said that the Book of Haggai was one not often read by people but would be found full of important facts that would help a person live a better life.

Surprised E. F. Templin.

E. F. Templin, of East Ninth street, was given a surprise party at his home Saturday evening in honor of the twenty-fourth anniversary of his birthday. The affair was arranged by his mother. The evening was spent playing cards, after which refreshments were served. Those present were Paul R. Collier, F. R. Foster, Samuel B. Bogert, S. J. Rockwell, A. G. Nash, A. C. Aaholm, Egbert Bogardus and E. F. Templin.

TO RACE PIGEONS

Plainfield Homing Pigeon Fanciers to Enter Their Birds in Contests.

CASH PRIZES ARE OFFERED.

Organization of Which Charles E. Faber is President Greatly Interested in Schedule of Races as Planned.

The Plainfield Homing Pigeon Fanciers Club, which was organized in 1902 by E. H. Hobbie, who is now secretary, treasurer and race secretary, was started with two members who owned flying birds, but today it is one of the strongest in this part of the country. It consists of twelve active members. Unfortunately the best and most active member, M. B. Mellor, has not for the past year been able to pay much attention to his birds on account of business, but his valuable loft of birds with records from 100 to 1,000 miles are now owned by the Wheatly Homing Loft and with the experienced handling which they will get this year, will undoubtedly continue to do some remarkable flying.

At a meeting held recently the race schedule for the old bird series of 1911 was adopted as follows:

May 14, 100 mile race from Newark, Delaware; 21, 200 mile race from Baltimore, Md.; 27, 300 mile race from Shipman, Va.; June 10, 400 mile race from Reidville, N. C.; 24, 500 mile race from Newton, S. C.

The International Federation of Homing Pigeon Fanciers, of which the local club is a member, has offered $750 in cash prizes for this year together with several other cash prizes, cups, etc., which will make homing pigeon flying more interesting than ever and as some of the very finest birds in the country are owned by Plainfielders, some of the prizes will doubtless come to Plainfield.

Last year there were about 500 birds flown by this club and this year there will undoubtedly be a couple of hundred more. The first country to engage in this sport was Belgium. It was later introduced into Europe and the United States and now this country is gradually out-doing the older countries and will soon head the list. The officers and members of the local club follow:

President, Charles E. Faber, North Plainfield; vice president, F. C. Bremmer, Westfield; secretary, treasurer and race secretary, Edward H. Hobbie, Plainfield; assistant, George H. Smith, Plainfield; D. C. Anderson, North Plainfield; William J. Taylor, John Fischer, Westfield; Robert J. Parsons, William VanEpps, E. L. Mackenzie and J. P. W. Taylor.

HOPE CHAPEL DEFICIT MATERIALLY REDUCED.

Through the action of the officers and teachers of Hope chapel Sunday-school, yesterday, the church deficit of $1,000 was materially decreased. There was a balance of $200 in the school treasury and of this $175 was ordered drawn in favor of the church treasurer to be applied to the deficit. It was also announced that the Howard McWilliam Bible Class would contribute $100 for the same purpose and the Christian Endeavor Society would give $25. By these contributions the deficit is now $700, with excellent chances for further reductions.

An Early Morning Blaze.

An alarm from box 83 at about 1 o'clock yesterday morning, summoned the city department to a chicken coop blaze in the rear of Sylvanus Hoffman's house on West Front street. It was put out before any great damage had resulted. The box was pulled by George Dunavan, who discovered the blaze as he was on his way home. Mr. Hoffman believes the blaze to have been of incendiary origin. The alarm was the fifth the department had answered in twenty four hours.

RECITAL BY PUPILS OF MISS GRACE KARR

An informal recital was given Saturday afternoon by Miss Grace Powell Karr at her residence, 1108 Putnam avenue. The program as a whole was well rendered by the pupils and in their usual conscientious manner before a large gathering of parents and friends.

These pupils took part: The Misses Grace Gillahan, Margaret Dealing, Sarah L. Schuck, Marjorie P. Searing, Jane Stout, Marion Frederickson, Market L. Stout, Mildred M. Clark, Pearl C. Wendell, Ethel J. Wendell, Eleanor V. Searing, Alice F. Simons, Erna M. Kubierschley, Muriel J. Courser, Minnie Bantle and Roswell E. Bolem.

RAN IN FRONT OF AUTO; TAKEN TO MUHLENBERG

Horace Cody, the seven-year-old son of Nicholas Cody, of Kensington avenue, ran in front of an automobile at the corner of Watchung avenue and Fourth street, yesterday, shortly after noon, and was knocked down. The automobile, driven by Richard Harrigan, was going slowly at the time. Cody received a scalp wound and severe contusions about the body and suffered greatly from shock.

According to Mr. Harrigan the boy appeared suddenly from behind a trolley car and ran directly in front of the machine. It was impossible to stop before the boy was struck. Mr. Harrigan picked the boy up and hurried with him to Muhlenberg Hospital, where the wounds were dressed.

Plainfield Defeated by Eurekas.

The Plainfield Association Football Club was defeated by the Eureka A. A., of Kearney, on the local grounds, Saturday afternoon by a score of 10 to 1. The visitors proved themselves much too strong for the locals, although the Plainfielders put up a good defense. This gives the Eurekas the championship not having lost a game this season. Plainfield finished in second place.

the large edfice. The dedication services of the new memorial organ attracted numbers from other churches to swell the ever-growing numbers of Trinity's membership. An elaborate musical program was rendered, under the direction of Organist Arthur L. Titsworth. Rev. Dr. Edward Payson Johnson, of the New Brunswick Theological Seminary, presented the splendid new instrument to the church on behalf of the donors and Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of the church made the speech of acceptance. The new organ was presented to the church by Albert L. Force and his daughter, Lillian A. Force, as a memorial to Mrs. Clara M. Force, whose sudden demise shocked the community on December 31, 1909.

In presenting the organ to the congregation Rev. Dr. Johnson said in part:

"A noble place has music and a divine right in the worship of our Christian churches. It may not displace the appeal of the preacher, for 'how can men believe without a preacher?' And yet it may often add to the spoken appeal, persuasive pathos or subtle and resistless power. Nor is it fitting that music should usurp the place of prayer in our public worship; for prayer is the simple plea of the believing child to the Father of mercies and God of all grace.

"And yet the music of God's house often is wholly prayer, prayer the most simple and direct, the most reverent and impassioned. Wisely is our Christian worship fitted together and interwoven of prayer, preaching and praise in that three-fold cord of influence which holds fast many a believing soul to heavenly things and heavenly places to Holy Church and Holy Master in a loyalty which old Satan cannot subdue or weaken. We devoutly praise God for the ministry of song, as for the prayer and preaching of His House; for we feel as says the poet:

"'Music to Christian zeal inspires;
It wakes the soul and lifts it high,
And wings it with sublime desires
And fit to see the Deity.'

"An English writer, himself a minister of the Church of England, has spoken of our devotion in God's House, whenever we truly worship the Father, as both active and passive; and I thank him for the thoughtful discrimination. Not merely when we join vocally and earnestly in the reading of the Psalter or in the singing of the familiar hymns of the church, are we actively, and fervently at devotion; but also and as truly, when we reverently receive the peracher's message and appeal, putting our whole souls into eager approval and appreciation, and also when his passionate prayer for the

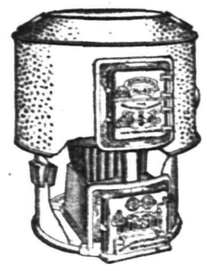
Heating Problems Solved



Sectional view of BOYNTON FURNACE, showing Patented square fire pot and large ash pit.

HERE is the furnace that heats the house from first floor to the attic—makes no dust—little ash, and less bother. A BOYNTON "square pot" furnace will give summer temperature in zero weather, on a surprisingly small amount of coal. It's the square fire pot that does it. The never smothers out because the fire pot is full of ash and cinder. A turn of the BOYNTON ash cutting grate clears the fire completely. The BOYNTON has a capacious square cornered ash pit, that you can shovel out clean. BOYNTON boilers—for house, school, or church heating—have this same economical fire pot. BASEBALL.

Umpires Bill Bannon and Bobby Hart, two of President Barrow's new men, broke into the umpiring game the same year in the Ohio and Pennsylvania League. Both Bannon and Hart had played wonderful polo that season, and their ability as athletes was so well known that President Morton, of the O. and P. had no hesitation in appointing both on his staff as arbitrators.

Hart had a hard time with the fans for a while, but Bannon took to the work like a duck to water. Until they gained a little experience, they worked double together. Hart would judge strikes, while Bannon would look after the decisions on the bases.

One day Akron and New Castle were playing a close game in Arkon. Mickey Lalonge, a catcher now with San Francisco, was behind the bat. Mickey was noted for his strong throwing arm, and all base runners were afraid of him. A New Castle player had taken a long lead off first and dashed for second on the next pitched ball.

Lalonge received the pitch and made a quick heave to second. The throw was a little low and was going squarely for the silver head of Bannon. Bannon had no time to dodge the toss. Suddenly, acting on an uncontrolable impulse, he threw up his hands and caught the ball. The runner reached second in safety and Manager Walter East and the other Akron players crowded around Bannon in angry protest. Bannon stood immovable and declined to utter a single word, or to in any way express the reason for his peculiar play.

After the game Hart asked Bannon why he had caught the catcher's throw. Looking around to see that no one was looking, Bannon exclaimed in a stage whisper: "I did not intend to get killed when I am getting a salary of only $50 a week."

GOLF.

Apropos of July dates, it is worthy of mention that the Connecticut Golf Association favors July 12 to 15, and, provided present plans go through, the State championship tournament will be held over the links of the Hartford Golf Club on the dates mentioned. An invitation will be sent for a team match with the Rhode Island Golf Association. Dr. William Kent Shepard, of the New Haven Country Club, has been elected president of the Connecticut body. Robert H. Hovey, of Hartford, is captain.

W. D. Vanderpool, the Metropolitan Golf Association secretary, has gone to Atlantic City, where he plans to remain for two or three weeks. The Morris County golfer intends to take his clubs and get in some early practice over the Country Club's course, which is in excellent condition at present.

Robert Thomson, the professional at Knollwood for the last few years, has been engaged by the Glen Ridge Golf Club to succeed Alec Cunningham. Jack Campbell, who had the Forest Hill Field Club greens last season, is at present unplaced. Until he locates somewhere Campbell will reside in the Philadelphia district. W. H. Way, for years identified with the Euclid Club, of Cleveland, has gone as professional to the Mayfield Country Club, a neighboring organization.

In order to prevent a scarlet fever epidemic, the school authorities of Roselle, acting under the advice of Dr. Henry Pierson, have ordered the closing of all the borough schools for a period of two weeks, beginning Friday. The movement to prevent an epidemic goes further than this, for the church authorities decided to dispense with the Sunday school sessions yesterday.

It was stated yesterday that the schools of Roselle Park will probably have to be closed because of the spread of the disease. Most of the cases at the present time have developed among the pupils in the Lorraine School, Roselle.

THE FORUM.

Replies to Mr. Roberts.

Editor, The Daily Press:

In reply to a letter appearing in your issue of Thursday headed "Factory or Commuter's Town," the writer seems to deplore the activity of our Chamber of Commerce in trying to bring to this city manufacturing interests that would no doubt redound to the credit of this community. It seemed to me rather strange that in this progressive age a citizen of this city could be found who would attempt to stifle the progress of this growing city, while every consistant endeavor has been made by a body of intelligent citizens to bring Plainfield prominently before the eyes of the outside world by trying to foster here manufacturing interests that would end eventually to make the city of Plainfield famous. A city that has within its boundaries such magnificent enterprises as the Pond Tool Works, the Potter Printing Press Works, Scott's Printing Press Works and many others, and whose products have gone far beyond the narrow outlines of this State, has made a name of incalculable value for Plainfield at the same time giving employment to hundreds of intelligent, law abiding American citizens.

The writer of the "Factor or Commuters" letter seemes to fear that taxation will become exhorbitant, and that too many schools are already being built. Well, what of it, if the city is progressing. We can afford to pay more taxes for the reason that such growth naturally enhances the value of property, and as to schools, let us hope to see the day that every ward in the city may have half a dozen, for does not this show a high grade of progress and intelligence in this community? But the writer says that in bringing factories here it would tend to increase the individual profit of the real estate books and the merchants, but for the "majority" of our people, the commuters I presume he means, they cannot see anything desirable in it. Too bad that the commuters can't see these things in the light that other progressive citizens can—for I doubt somewhat if this gentleman can speak for that great influential body of commuters who wish Plainfield to grow, prosper and expand beyond its present limits.

"Many of us," says the writer, "selected Plainfield as a quiet residential town." Yes, sir, but you must remember that this is a progressive age and that cities and people must move along with the progress of the times, for to hold a body of water within a certain limited boundary would in a short time become stagnant, wither and dry up.

Fifth avenue, New York, was at one time a quiet residential avenue, but the onward march of progress, typical of our American people, compelled the residents of this quiet neighborhood to move forward and make room for commercial enterprise, resulting in making that entire section the greatest industrial centre in this country.

I regret to know that a single citizen of this city should like to see Plainfield lapse into a Rip Van Winkle city, where the inhabitants could remain within their own narrow confines, and did not give a rap whether the other man prospered or not, for today we must not live for ourselves alone; we must accept a broader sense of responsibility; help our fellow man when we can, and by honest, upright endeavor, elevate whenever possible the standard of the community in which we live. Again this gentleman says: "Take your factories anywhere, even to Chicago, but keep them away from Plainfield," and again: "Why invite the latest applicant to locate here when other towns can be benefitted by its locating within their borders."

This is really the first time I have ever known where a good business man would prefer sending a good customer across the street to a rival and be the loser himself. Then why not keep the profit yourself, if it is profitable, as you claim it would be to send an enterprise to Chicago, why not keep it yourself. No, I fear that the Chamber of Commerce cannot be guided by this logic, and they cannot be diverted from the course they have earnestly mapped out.

And now the commuters, the majority of whom I am told never really know what progress is being made in the business section, because their business interests do not bring them to the central city, while the real estate man and the business man toils day after day in striving to make the city of Plainfield a city of progress, a city of good enterprises, and a city in which any man would feel a pride to live in.

And here let me say before concluding that the gentlemen comprising the Chamber of Commerce have taken upon themselves a great responsibility, lots of hard work, committees working even long into the night when perhaps others are enjoying their home comforts—and for what? Striving to make for all the people a greater Plainfield, which would mean more enterprises, more work, more good citizens, etc., and if these are not commendable reasons why we want these things, then I fail to grasp the true meaning of the word progress.

Come into the Chamber of Commerce, sir, and be numbered among those who desire with all true sincerity to upbuild the community, and I feel certain that within the course of ten years, when you look back and see what this progressive group of citizens has accomplished for our fair city, that you will be the last man to oppose any enterprise that stands for progress.

HOLD SERVICE FOR THEOPHILUS BOND

The funeral services of Theophilus Bond were held at his late home on East Front street at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon and was largely attended by relatives and friends, including a number from Newark. Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of which Mr. Bond was a lifelong member, officiated. He based his remarks on a poem entitled "At Rest," which was composed by Mr. Bond, which is as follows:

I long for rest;
For scenes that ne'er were viewed by mortal eye,
For fields that mortal foot hath never pressed;
Where clouds nor darkness dim the summer sky,
And living waters gently murmur by.

I long for rest;
Full many a year my weary feet have trod
In devious paths, by sin and care oppressed;
Have bowed my head beneath Thy everlasting rod
And tried to say "Thy will be done, O God."

I long for rest;
I long my dear Redeemer's face to see;
To lean my aching head upon His breast;
And hear once more the invitation free,
Ye weary, heavy ladened, come to me.

I long for rest;
For rest eternal with the ransomed throng,
Whose praises fill the mansions of the blest,
Vieing with the seraphs in their glorious song,
While golden harps the joyful strains prolong.

I long for rest;
Yet longing not impatiently I stay
And bide the time my Saviour deems the best,
Then gladly I'll forsake this feeble clay,
And trusting, follow where He leads the way.

There was a large display of beautiful floral tributes. The burial was in North Plainfield cemetery and the pall-bearers, all relatives, were Alexander Archibald, Walter Hopkins and George Bruen, of Newark; G. P. Hinman, Russell Bond and Leslie Bond, of this city.

Charles Greer, of Park avenue, is detained at home with an attack of grip.

—The Rasores will meet tomorrow morning at the home of Mrs. G. Herbert Condict, 922 Central avenue; subject, "John Winthrop."

HERE AND THERE.

Massage for naughty children is the latest prescription from Japan. It has been brought to England by a Miss Josephine Richardson, who spent three years in Japan, where she had charge of some Japanese children who belonged to one of the best families in the country. She says:

"Whenever my charges grew sulky or unamenable to discipline for any length of time they were quietly taken away, reappearing the next day perfectly serene, good tempered and willing to learn.

"How had the change been effected? I found on inquiry that the children had had their stomachs massaged and that this was a very generally practised remedy.

"It appears that in Japan all naughtiness is held to proceed from a disordered stomach, a belief which in most instances is probably correct.

"So successful was the massage treatment with my Japanese children that I certainly think the experiment should be made among American children."

DRY CLEANING TALK

Number 2

WHAT IS DRY CLEANING?

Many people have erroneous ideas about what Dry Cleaning really is—believing that their clothes are actually cleaned dry—as if by magic method we pass our hands over the Garment and say "Presto!" It is clean.

Dry is a misnomer. "Chemical" cleaning would be a more intelligent name, but people might confuse "Chemical," thinking of acids, alkalies, etc., not used in Dry Cleaning.

The truth is we depend largely upon gasolene, naphtha, benzine—there's a difference—and other petroleum and coal tar products, for our cleansing bath instead of water as do the launderers.

The secret and successful operations in Dry Cleaning are learned only by hard experience and study, coupled with proper equipment. These are what enable us to do superior work.

We know our business thoroughly and are properly equipped in plant, collection and delivery.

DIOCESAN OFFERING FOR MT. ST. MARY'S

Referring to the conditions resulting from the burning of the Mount St. Mary College, Bishop James McFaul, in a letter to the clergy of his diocese, says in part: "Although the building was well insured it was heavily encumbered by debt, so that, in meeting the difficulties which will necessarily attend the rebuilding of the institution, these afflicted Religious must begin their future labors with even more debt than they had five years ago when they moved from Bordentown to Plainfield.

"It will cost the sisters at least $150,000 to replace the ruined structure and after paying off the debt there will be a balance on hand of about $30,000.

The letter of which the above is an abstract, was read in all the churches of the diocese yesterday, Sunday, March 19, has been set aside by the bishop for a special collection to be taken up on behalf of the sisters.

A Slight Blaze.

A slight fire occurred in the rear part of the Salvation Army barracks on East Second street at 1:45 this afternoon. Workmen putting a slag roof on a part of the building placed a pot of tar on the kitchen stove to melt. It boiled over and started a blaze. Firemen stationed at headquarters directly next door noticed the smoke pouring out of the windows and ran the chemical engine out. It was not needed, however, as Captain Hewitt and assistants put the fire out with pails of water. The damage is trifling.

Psychology of the Crowd.

"What makes the crowd gather so over there?"

"Oh, vulgar curiosity I suppose. Let's go over."—Harvard Lampoon.

The Consistory of the Netherwood Reformed church will hold a meeting tonight at the church.

The regular monthly sewing meeting of the Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church will be held in the church parlor tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

I HAD A LITTLE PAIN.

I had a little pain right in the middle of my back
And felt that all my aching bones were just about to crack,
And when I told the folks at home
about my miseree,
Here are the several sorts of things
my people did to me:

Mother got the arnica,
Father got the oil,
Mamie put the kettle on
To let the water boil;
Kittie got the mustard,
Tommy rubbed the spine,
Cousin Howard ran and bought
A can of turpentine!
Wife, she got excited
And fixed a toddy hot;
Then the doctor came along
And hammered on the spot!
Neighbors rang the doorbell
And volunteered to help,
And even Fido, willing pup,
Assisted with a yelp!

And when the things were ready
they all gathered at my bed
With water bags to heat my feet and ice packs for my head;
And while I groaned in anguish, with the pain that I endured,
Here are several sorts of ways my people got me cured:

Mother rubbed with arnica,
Father rubbed with oil,
Mamie got the foot bath out
And put my feet to boil!
Kittie mixed the mustard
And plastered up my spine,
And Howard made a sizzler with
His can of turpentine!
Wife, she got me piffled
With frequent toddies, hot—
And the doctor nearly killed me
In his hammering on the spot;
Neighbors came and told me
Of all their friends that croaked
With little pains just like my own,
Until I nearly choked!

At last the little pain that started all this ripping row
Just disappeared, and in the end I got to sleep somehow.
It was an ugly little pain—I hardly could endure it—
But heaven knows how I survived the things they did to cure it!

John Hogan given a chance to sign the pledge for a year; John Waldron, of Manson place, sent to the county jail for 30 days for being disorderly in his home. Clan Mackenzie to Meet.

Clan Mackenzie, No. 204, O. S. C., will meet tonight in Fireman's Hall, 109 Park avenue. Charter rates are still open as an extension of time has been granted by the Royal Executive. A chance is thus offered to Scotchmen and their descendants to join under the low rates. All members are requested to be present.

A Surprise Party.

On Friday evening Miss Grace Connett, of 306 Plainfield avenue, was surprised by thirty-seven of her friends who made an unannounced visit, it being a birthday celebration arranged by four intimate girl friends. The evening was enjoyably spent in games and music.

Mrs. Hawthorne Soloist.

Mrs. Byard Hawthorne will be the soloist at the next concert of the Y. M. C. A. orchestra on March 21. Mrs. Hawthorne is the contralto soloist of Trinity Reformed church.

Edward McCardel, of Trenton, spent the week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. F. Pearson, of East Front street.

Mrs. John S. Long and sister, Mrs. Cochran, of Louisville, Ky., are visiting Mrs. Long's daughter, Mrs. Dr. Charles Nash, of West Seventh street.

Rev. Dr. James H. Ecob, of New York, was unable to be present and address the men's meeting in the First Presbyterian church yesterday afternoon but some profitable time was spent in discussing "The Church and the Community." Herbert E. Parker, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., led the meeting.

The Flush.

"Your husband seems fairly well, but I don't know how to account for that hectic flush."

"It's perfectly simple, doctor; five clubs."—Exchange.

THE ROAD TO THE TOP.

Secret of Success, or a Tale at the Railroad Station.

They stood on the station platform, and the mercury hovered around zero.

"By the way, sir," exclaimed the inquisitive man in the red earmuffs, "I just saw you speak to your wealthy brother."

"Well, sir, what of it if you did?" snorted the big man with the icicles in his mustache.

"Nothing, sir; nothing at all. But—er—would you mind telling me the real cause of his accumulating so much wealth?"

"Oh, slush!"

"I'm not after any slangy nonsense, friend. I want to know the real cause of your brother's accumulating his pile."

"Oh, slush!"

"Come, now—can't you be sociable and tell me the reason?"

The big man made a megaphone of his hands:

"Slush, confound it, slush! S-l-u-s-h! He manufactures rubber boots for snowy weather! If you ask me again I'll"—

But the inquisitive man in the red earmuffs was hiking it down the track.

Making It Hard For Father.

They were having a guessing match at riddles, and nothing seemed impossible to old Father Jones. As a last resort old Mother Jones got up and announced that she had one. "It is green, it stands against the wall and makes a noise like a cow."

After a volley of faulty answers the younger generation gave up and turned to Father Jones. Even he looked helpless. At last he surrendered to mother's mercy.

Mother Jones drew a deep breath and, with a look of importance, said, "It's a herring."

"A herring!" all yelled. "How?"

"Why, it's green if you paint it green," said Mother Jones, "and"—

"But it doesn't stand against the wall," they all protested.

"Yes, if you nail it against the wall," smiled Mother Jones.

"But," spoke up Father Jones, "who ever heard of a herring crying like a cow?"

"Well," defended Mother Jones, "if I hadn't put that in you would have guessed the riddle."—Success Magazine.

Belated Recognition.

He was an Italian and was being shown the wonders of Stratford-on-Avon.

"This," said they, "is where Shakespeare was born."

"Shakespeare, Shakespeare?" cogitated the foreigner. "Who was he?"

"Why," they laughed, "you must know! Don't you remember 'Amlet' and 'Romeo et Giuletta?'"

"Oh, yes," answered the Italian apologetically. "I quite know—ze librettist!"—Judge.

Another Faux Pas.

Jinks—That fellow Sillipate is the most inexcusable dolt I ever saw!

Winks—What has he been doing to you?

Jinks—A few days ago some one invited him to dinner at our boarding house. Well, sir, that idiot just praised every dish on the table and complimented the landlady on her cooking until she raised our board a dollar a week.—Chicago Tribune.

More to the Point.

Doctor (politely, but looking at his watch with impatience)—Pardon me, madam, but my time is not my own. You have given me all your symptoms in sufficient detail, and now perhaps you will kindly—er—ah—

Husband (not so considerate)—Maria, he doesn't want to hear your tongue any more; he wants to look at it.—New York Journal.

Purely Social.

Embarrassed Preacher (reading the first chapter of Jonah and making the best of the seventeenth verse)—And the Lord prepared a great fish to swallow up Jonah, and Jonah was in the—er—a—and Jonah was in the—er—And the Lord prepared a great fish to swallow up Jonah, and Jonah was in the society of the fish three days and three nights.—Life.

The Long and Short of It.

Mr. Long—My wife manages to keep her boarders longer than you do.

Mr. Short—Oh, I don't know! She keeps them so thin that they look longer than they really are.—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Frequently the Case.

"They say that Goldrocks carries $100,000 life insurance."

"Yes; it is true."

"He must consider his life of very great value."

"That does not make it so. It merely shows that he is worth more dead than alive, so far as this community is concerned.

The Question.

This life of mine, so bitter, withered, small—
A seed wind driven down the night—
Oh, what is holding in it all in all,
Awaiting warmth of quickening light?

DRESSING A SHIP.

A Man-of-War Wears More Than One Suit of Clothes.

INNER AND OUTER GARMENTS.

Besides Its Coat of Armor Plate It Has a Special Set of Underclothes to Protect the Vital Parts of Its Anatomy. Mineral Wool Mufflers.

Battleships wear coats of stout armor plate, as everybody knows, but everybody does not know that they wear undergarments which are produced chiefly from cocoanuts. Your most powerful man-of-war is really a very delicate object and requires special underclothing so that some vital parts of its anatomy may not become too cold and so that other equally vital portions may not become too hot.

From stem to stern, which is another way of saying from head to toe, your enormous super-Dreadnought is enveloped in an undergarment placed immediately behind its topcoat or armor plate. This is its special mackintosh, or, rather, waterproof, which acts as a protection from fire as well as water.

In the ordinary way if a shot pierced the side of a battleship water would pour in at the hole and possibly the ship might sink, but this is obviated by providing a backing to the armor. Great secrecy is kept in the various navies regarding the material used and its arrangement.

In many of the latest battleships, however, the coating is made of cellulose, which again is obtained from the fibrous cocoanut rind. Cellulose possesses the peculiar property of swelling immediately if it comes in contact with salt water. Therefore the moment that water pours in at a hole at the ship's side the cellulose almost instantly expands and so closes the aperture. Of course the cellulose is especially treated in order to render it fireproof.

A man-of-war has its vitality enormously diminished if certain portions of it become too cold, in much the same way as its human tenants. Accordingly its boiler and steam pipes are clothed with "jackets." In some cases the jackets are made of ordinary blanketing, others of a fibrous clay-like composition or even of close grained wood. In general the material used for a ship's underclothing of this description consists of mineral wool.

However, the great ship is more likely to suffer from the effects of heat than from those of cold. There is always the danger owing to the newer type of machinery employed that the powder magazines may get too hot.

In the latest men-of-war the stores are surrounded by a thick coating of mineral wool. Mineral wool, by the way, has nothing whatever to do with wool, as it consists of a mass of snowy threads of a kind of glass. It is made by blowing jets of high pressure steam through the furnaces in the manufacture of iron and steel.

Enormous quantities of this strange variety of wool are used on board for the purposes of underclothing the bulkheads and the more delicate portions of the ship's body. This invaluable substance acts equally well as a protector from heat and from cold. It is such a remarkable nonconductor of heat that it is used for covering the refrigerators and the cold storage chambers and therefore the explosive stores.

In the dockyards all men who are employed in packing the mineral wool in the spaces on the ships are obliged to wear masks. This is to prevent the sharp needlelike particles from being inhaled and so causing chest troubles of fatal character.

The ammunition rooms themselves are kept cool by a refrigerating plant in addition to being clothed in mineral wool, the same applying to the ammunition passages. The wool is also packed between the double bulkheads which separate the boiler spaces from the other portions of the vessel. Altogether the uses of the mineral wool on board are extremely numerous. Even reindeer hair is to be met with on board in the capacity of a particular sort of underclothing. This material is very light—considerably lighter than cork, for instance—and it is not so subject to decay. For this reason among its many uses it is of great value as a filling for the life buoys.—Boston Transcript.

Smoking Before Meals.

People will persist in smoking, even after they have read the following from that eminent authority, the London Lancet:

Smoking just before meals is to be deprecated, because the pungency of the pyroligneus products contained in tobacco smoke renders the buccal mucosa insensitive to alimentary stimulation. In fact, the effect is to dull or abolish the olfacto-gustatory reflex, thus depriving us of what Pawlow calls "appetite juice."

Self Confidence.

"Do you believe in all the views you advocate?"

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum after some hesitation, "I do, but I doubt whether a less skillful reasoner than myself would be able to convince me of the correctness of some of them."—Washington Star.

His Conclusion.

Mrs. Gnaggs—I'll never forget the night you proposed to me. You acted like a perfect fool. Mr. Gnaggs—That wasn't acting.—Philadelphia Record.

We WANT COMPETITION

of the Right Sort, Not the Following Kind!

A Mrs. S—— after selecting her outfit and learning the total cost from our plainly marked price tags, said she preferred to make comparisons elsewhere before ordering, to which we readily agreed, for it's a thing we always URGE!

On getting another store's prices (where they were marked in private signs) she found ours were far less, and SAID so. The salesman promptly dropped to our figures—AND GOT THE ORDER.

Here, where there's but ONE PLAINLY MARKED PRICE ON EVERY ITEM, such an "accommodating" and sudden price drop would be impossible—here, when you read the price tag, you KNOW it's already at lowest point, for ALL prices are made and REMAIN on the SAME UNIFORMLY SMALL PROFIT BASIS. We don't HAVE to run a "leader" here and there for an hour, or a day, to catch trade, as ALL lines are equally good values EVERY day in the year!

All we want is HONEST competition that meet OUR plainly marked prices WITH prices you can READ!

ISN'T THAT FAIR?

EASY CREDIT 6 months, 1 year, or 1½ year's time to pay—or 10 per cent off for cash.

The Goose Tower.

In the early years of the fourteenth century the "free cities"—Hamburg, Lubeck and Bremen—sent a delegation of seventy-seven members to King Valdemar to demand increased rights and privileges in their trade with Denmark. The delegates were not very respectful in their language and demeanor, and the king, who was at Vordingborg, told them they acted like a drove of geese and clapped them into prison in the tower, telling them they would stay there until they learned better manners. Over the heavy tower door the king put up a stone with the inscription:

Sieben und siebenteg Hause;
Sieben und siebenteg Ganse;
Ware nicht so viele Hause
Hat ich auch nicht so viele Ganse.

Translated this reads: "Seventy-seven houses and seventy-seven geese. If there were not so many houses I would not have so many geese."

On top of the tower, which still stands solid and strong, was placed a big gilt goose, with neck outstretched as if it were hissing.

The Jerboa and the Melons.

An odd fact relative to a little African melon is thus related by an official of Khartum:

The jerboa or kangaroo rat is found in considerable numbers in places miles and miles away from any water or even dew, and I was at a loss to understand how these little animals could exist through the ten months of drought. It appears, however, that after the scanty rains a small wild melon of bitter taste, but full of juice, flourishes in the desert. The jerboa, as soon as the melon is ripe, bites off the stem and proceeds to dig away the sand under the melon, so that it gradually sinks below the level of the ground. The constant wind soon covers it with six to eight inches of sand, which protects it from the scorching sun and from drying up. When all other moisture has evaporated the jerboa goes to his larder and drinks the juice of the melon till the rains come on again. One jerboa will bury as many as forty of these little melons to last him through the dry season.

The Automobile.

In some respects the automobile is the most marvelous machine the world has yet seen. It can go anywhere at any time, floundering through two feet of snow, ford any stream that isn't deep enough to drown out the magneto, triumph over mud axle deep, jump fences and cavort over plowed ground at fifteen miles an hour. It has been used with brilliant success in various kinds of hunting, including coyote coursing on the prairies of Colorado, where it can run all around the broncho, formerly in favor, since it never runs any risk of breaking a leg in a prairie dog hole. Educated automobiles have been trained to shell corn, saw wood, pump water, churn, plow, and, in short, do anything required of them, except figure out where the consumer gets off under the tariff law.—Outing.

The Word "Gaiters."

Episcopal gaiters cannot date from a very remote antiquity. The very word "gaiters" is almost a newcomer to the language. Johnson's Dictionary does not recognize its existence. It does not occur before 1760, and even in 1802 a military dictionary had to define it as "a sort of spatterdashes." "Guetre," however, the French original, goes back at least to the fifteenth century, and the origin of that is lost, though etymologists compare all sorts of words in all sorts of languages, including an old German word for a baby's christening cloth. The one certainty is that gaiters has nothing to do with gait in spite of the punning line in the "Rejected Addresses"—"Lax in their gaiters, laxer in their gait."—London Standard.

The Self Sacrifice of Fadzeau.

A fine historical dog story is recalled by Mr. Edwin Noble in "The Dog Lover's Book." The incident is connected with the flight of William Wallace to the mountains after Erneside, accompanied by only sixteen followers, among whom was one named Fadzeau. When the baying of the bloodhounds was heard announcing the coming of the English Fadzeau refused to go any farther, affecting weariness, and Wallace, suspecting him of traitorous intentions, killed him. When the English came up the hounds stayed upon the dead body and refused to follow beyond the stains of blood.

He Beat Her.

A woman said to the railway station ticket agent angrily:

"Look here, sir, I've been standing before this window twenty-five minutes!"

The agent, a gray, withered little man, answered gently:

"Ah, madam, I've been standing behind it twenty-five years."

"Have you seen this man Oliver lately? Do you know where he is to be found?" asked Guy.

"Yes, sir. I saw him not long ago, and he told me he wasn't in any employment, but he seemed to have plenty of money. After a bit he told me that he had seen a gentleman who was with the couple he had pretended to marry and who had acted the part of best man, and he was a regular swell, a baronet." Guy and his friend exchanged glances. "And from what he said, I believe he had been blackmailing this baronet—getting money out of him to keep the secret."

"I shouldn't wonder," said Guy, starting to his feet. "But I must be off. I can still catch the 11:30 to the north. We can smash those villains now, thank God! Find Oliver for me, Pepperday, and I will give you £20."

CHAPTER XXXIII.

A FOE IN SHINING ARMOR.

Guy went to Ravenscrag with but one idea in his mind.

He would see Eva, tell her the good news and persuade her to leave the castle with him that night. He would bring her to London, and they would get quietly married, or, if she preferred it, they would go first to Castle Dare and tell Lady Roscommon that after so many years of secret slavery she was a free woman. Surely in common gratitude she could not refuse her consent to his marrying her daughter now.

At Ravenscrag he asked for Eva, giving, of course, the name under which she passed at the castle.

"She is in bed, sir," answered Jorrocks, "not being very well today."

Guy started and turned pale.

"She is not seriously ill, is she?"

"Oh, I think not, sir. She was downstairs for a short time this afternoon, but I don't think she could see any one today."

"I have come from London to see her. It is very important. I am sure she would see me if she knew I was here."

To gain time he asked for Sir Rufus, got Jorrocks to take in his card and at the same time made him promise to let Eva know of his arrival.

When he entered the library the baronet stood on the hearth rug, a smile on his handsome face.

"I think I had the pleasure of meeting you one night—at Hampton Place," he said, with an easy cordiality which went far to hide the impertinence of the greeting.

"I fancy you are mistaken," said Guy coldly. "I have come to tell you, sir, that your blackmailing scheme is at an end. It was a base project from the first, and, thank God, in spite of the cruel and unscrupulous means you took to carry out your desires, your project has failed!"

All this time the baronet continued to look at Guy with a mild, indulgent surprise, as if one should say, "What can this strange fellow be talking of now?"

"Will you kindly tell me what you are driving at?" he said aloud. "I'm afraid I am rather dull. But, first, won't you draw up a chair to the fire? I'm sure you must be cold."

"I prefer to stand, thank you. As I was saying, your blackmailing scheme and your hopes of obtaining Miss Fitzgerald's fortune must henceforth be given up. Lady Roscommon never was legally married before she married Lord Roscommon, and that you knew all along, though I did not find it out till today. So the snare is broken, and your power over both mother and daughter is just nothing. I hope to have the pleasure of telling Lady Roscommon that after years of slavery she is a free woman."

"I don't understand one-half or one-quarter of what you say," said the baronet, with a show of petulance. "Who ever said Lady Roscommon was married twice? I am sure I never did, and I may say at once that I don't believe there is a word of truth in the story. At least I have known the lady for many years, and I never heard a whisper of anything of that sort. Don't you think you may to some extent have misinterpreted my actions and my intentions, Mr. Lorimer?"

The man's tone was so firm and at the same time so courteous, his manner so exactly what might have been expected from a high bred man who could not lose his sense of dignity even when the most scandalous accusations were brought against him, that if Guy had not been thoroughly acquainted with the facts he might have been hoodwinked. As it was he began to realize for the first time what a dangerous enemy the baronet might be.

"I have no wish to dispute with you," said Guy. "If it pleases you that facts well known to both of us should be ignored, so be it. I am not your judge. But now that your hold over Lady Roscommon is gone I presume you will withdraw your suit with respect to her daughter."

"My good fellow, I don't know what business it is of yours, but if you refer to Miss Fitzgerald I may tell you that as a matter of fact my engagement with that young lady has been at an end for some time."

"I am happy to hear it. And that being so, I presume you will place no obstacle in the way of our leaving the castle tonight."

"I was about to offer you the poor hospitality of my roof for tonight," said the baronet with an amused smile. "I pity any one who tries to drive to Kendal tonight. Just listen to the storm."

This placed Guy in a dilemma. It seemed uncourteous, indeed boorish, to refuse the baronet's offer of hospitality in such circumstances, and yet he hated the idea of being indebted to him for even the smallest favor. As he hesitated he remembered that as Eva was unwell it might be dangerous for her to travel in such weather.

"Since you are good enough to ask us to wait till the morning, we shall be happy to do so," said Guy. "But I should like to see Miss Fitzgerald tonight if possible."

The baronet's face assumed an expression of the utmost astonishment.

"God bless my soul!" he cried. "Surely you don't imagine that Miss Fitzgerald is here?"

"Is she not?" asked Guy, eying him keenly.

"Certainly not."

"And has not been here lately?"

"Of course not."

"Sir Rufus, I should be sorry to be compelled to describe that statement. I saw and spoke with Miss Fitzgerald in this castle last night."

Sir Rufus started slightly, but instead of looking disconcerted his face assumed a graver expression.

"Miss Fitzgerald," he said, "is a young lady for whom I entertain sentiments of the deepest respect. With the full consent of her parents we were affianced, when she suddenly and without any apparent reason left her home. I was of course greatly distressed, but I need scarcely say that I knew nothing of her movements. A short time ago I discovered, to my amazement, that, carrying out some foolish girlish escapade, she had actually become a member of my household and had been acting for some time as one of my domestics. You are a man of the world, and you must know that no girl's reputation could be exposed to such an ordeal without grave injury." Guy flushed scarlet, and his fingers involuntarily clinched themselves, but he put a great restraint upon himself and did not utter a word. "The fact that Miss Fitzgerald has been here at all is and must remain a profound secret. I thought you were unacquainted with the facts, and therefore I denied that Miss Fitzgerald had been staying under this roof. And I shall do the same thing in future, as a matter of course. Allow me to suggest that that is the course best calculated to promote her future comfort and happiness."

Guy felt that he was no match for the baronet. His blows fell harmless on the shining armor in which he had girded himself. There was only one thing to do, and he did it.

"I shall remember your advice, sir, and you need not be afraid that I shall not follow it," he said in a tone that was half ironical. "But do I understand that if Miss Fitzgerald is not too ill to travel you will place no obstacle in the way of our leaving the castle tomorrow?"

Sir Rufus paused for a moment and then said:

"I had intended seeing the young lady home myself. It seemed to be the best course under the circumstances, but if she prefers your society to mine, as she possibly may"—this was said with a frank, genial smile—"and you assure me that you are going straight to Castle Dare, of course I shall offer no opposition. And now, having settled that weighty matter, let us think of dinner. The gong will sound in half an hour. Shall I tell Jorrocks to show you to your room?"

He rang the bell, and when the butler answered it he said: "Jorrocks, Mr. Lorimer has been detained here by the storm. Tell the housekeeper to get the earl's room ready for him and to put up the cabman. You had better take Mr. Lorimer up at once."

Guy left the room with rather mixed feelings. He was to have attacked and exposed the scoundrel. And he was going to eat his dinner, drink his wine and sleep under his roof!

As for Sir Rufus, he relieved his pent up feelings in characteristic fashion. As soon as the door had closed behind his enemy he flung himself on a couch and shook in a convulsion of silent laughter. "Oh, you fool, you delicious fool!" he whispered to himself, raising himself to look at the door through which Guy had disappeared. Then again he fell to laughing and laughed till the tears came into his eyes.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

TRAPPED!

The room to which the butler conducted Guy was a large, square apartment with very thick walls and two high windows which overlooked the lake. Everything about the room was large, solid and old fashioned. A huge four poster bedstead stood at one end of the room, and there was a fireplace constructed apparently for the roasting of sheep whole.

After dressing for dinner Guy lingered about the halls in the hope that he might meet Eva. She did not appear, but he saw Jorrocks, who told him Eva had received his message and that her room was directly above his. The library door opened, disclosing Sir Rufus and the cabman who had brought Guy to the castle.

"That is arranged, then?" said the baronet, speaking to the cabman. Guy wondered what this could mean.

"All right, Sir Rufus," answered the man, touching his forelock, and then the master of the castle turned to Guy.

"The man had some idea in his head of going back tonight, but I said you were certain to want him in the morning and that he had better stop overnight, especially as the weather is so bad."

Surpassing All Others--Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday

This will be a gala week for lovers of fashion and finery—the hour of our Opening Exposition has arrived and tomorrow we bid you come to see and enjoy a display of springtime apparel and other merchandise larger in extent—broader in variety, finer in quality than has ever been made in Newark—an exhibit no other store in Jersey could make, because no other one has such facilities, such broad acres, such fine merchandise.

INVITATION EXTENDED TO ALL--No Cards

See the Beautiful New Hats, Gowns, Dresses, Suits, Coats, Waists; Misses', Children's and Infants' Apparel

EVERY PART OF THE STORE IN ITS BEST BIB AND TUCKER

THIS WEEK'S NOTABLE SELLING FEATURES

We do not propose to devote all our thought or time or s pace to showing pretty things this week. We've planned to double the interest by presenting a galaxy of attractive sellin g features—goods and garments of the most seasonable character at prices far below normal—in some cases extraordinary.

FEAST OF BEAUTY WITH A FEAST OF BARGAINS

Prepare yourself therefore for a feast of beauty in the opening shows, and at the same time a feast of bargains such as no other Newark store could present. The State's Greatest Store will do the city and itself honor and cover itself with glory this season—depend upon it.

SUPERB DRESSES FOR ONLY $10.75

We couldn't have secured anything for this week's selling more attractive than this lot of dresses. Their beauty will be unquestioned by anyone who sees them—few women will be able to resist buying more than one. There are so many styles and all made of such splendid materials, and so thoroughly up-to-date that everyone will want one or more of them at the insignificant price at which we plan to sell them.

These dresses are of Satin Foulard, Chiffon Taffeta and Gold Cloth, in plain hairline stripe or polka dot effects, with fine lace yokes and collars or in pretty low neck styles; pretty braid or combination trimming—deep border effects now so fashionable; long or kimono sleeves, skirts panel gored or plaited; every style a new one; all the dresses in custom finish; sizes for small, medium and extra large women; any suit in the collection for $10.75

Finest Hats, of Course

ALSO TRIMMED HATS AT $4.75

The finest of hats, of course; more than you'll see anywhere, but we've made special preparations for this week for an unprecedented showing of our most popular-priced hats in conjunction with the Formal Opening Display of the most superb creations we import or that our milliners can produce.

It is because so many people select hats at this popular price that we pay so much attention to them, and try season after season, month after month, to better them, to give more style and beauty and quality for the money, and we feel that we have made great progress along these lines since no other store produces hats at an equally low price that begin to compare with these.

There will be hundreds of styles ready for you this week, and whether you choose a hat for dress, for everyday service or for filling in between seasons you will find many styles here in many colors that will please you immensely.

It is the wonderment of all that we are able to produce such beautiful hats, many of them copies of much more expensive models, at the little price of $4.75

At $7.75 and $9.75 we have other lines of trimmed hats that are also very popular. In these we use somewhat finer materials, and some of them are more elaborately trimmed and are exceptional value for the money.

Popular Priced Coats

We are devoting ourselves to securing the most beautiful coats that the best makers produce, and our showing this Spring will be most attractive, indeed. But we realize that where one woman selects a garment of the fine sort and is willing to pay for the very best in quality, style and exclusiveness there are dozens, perhaps hundreds, who buy coats as much for service as for good looks, and who seek to economize. It is to these that the four lots of coats we tell of below will especially appeal.

Women's and Misses' Blue Serge Coats—24 inches long; semi-fitted models; trimmed with check sailor collar and piped with red satin; one of the coats we feature at $12.50

Women's and Misses' Blue Serge Coats—Semi-fitted with satin shawl collar and various pipings; well tailored; extraordinary value at our price $9.98

Women's and Misses' Coats of Fancy Spring Mixtures—54 in. long; some with sailor collar as well as long shawl collar; trimmed with various piping and silks; special priced $9.98 and $12.50

Women's 36-inch Black Broadcloth Coats in regular and in-between sizes, especially adapted for short-waisted women; splendid value at $6.50

OUR ANNUAL SALE OF THE FAMED

Burt 4.00 and 4.50 Shoes and Oxfords at $2.85

This is the events hundreds have awaited with great expectancy. Some have wondered whether we would be able this year to repeat our past sales of the Edwin C. Burt shoes, and we are glad to gratify them with a finer, bigger sale than those that have gone before.

2,000 Pairs of these very well-known and much-liked shoes—all new, fresh, perfect goods, intended for this season's selling go into this sale.

There are Patent Leather Shoes, Gunmental and Calf-skin Shoes and Black Vici Kid-skin Shoes—Both high and low cuts, in various heel and toe shapes; welted soles; all sizes and widths.

They are the Regular $4 and $4.50 Shoes—Sold at prices all over the country.

You have never picked from a handsomer lot of shoes than this. They are full of style and beauty, are splendidly finished and are aristocratic shoes in every sense; yet we offer these $4 and $5 Shoes and Oxfords for only $2.85

NEW ORGAN DEDICATED

coming of the kingdom and the greater glorifying of God, with equal passion of desire, we seal as our own with low but whole-hearted, 'amen.'

"All these belong to active devotion. Then comes perchance the anthem by the choir, a vocal solo, or a majestic number by that completest of all musical instruments, the organ; the one instrument made for church worship above all other instruments man has made. And then as this Englishman suggests, 'the emotions which we have just been connecting in prayer with solemn, perhaps even harrowing thoughts, the feelings which we have been laboring to express with strained and fatiguing mental effort; in short all personal activity is suspended and the spirit raised into the atmosphere of devotion, remains passive in order that it may be recruited by having that weight of feeling lifted up and its emotion expressed for it through music in harmony with the inner consciousness. It is as though a traveler grown weary in a winter's walk were suddenly lifted up and borne along upon wings without a word or action of his own, the land grown warm with sunlight, the air scented with flowers and full of angel voices. When the times of refreshing are past he finds himself again upon the earth, but all his weariness has vanished and he is now able to go on his journey with renewed life and compassed about with songs of deliverance.

"Most surely the music of God's House, choir, anthems, solos, trios, quartetts, organ voluntaries, interludes and postludes, if fittingly chosen and fittingly rendered should bring needful comfort and invigoration to the spiritual life.

"After the House of God itself what more suitable and expressive memorial than the church organ can Christian love give to strengthen and stimulate the spiritual graces of Christian kinsmen? Beautiful, symetrical, satisfying to the eye, how much more it is to be valued for its voice, its manifold voice, pleading, melting, uplifting, upbuilding the believing soul.

"Oh, holy music, sacred tongue of God, I hear thee calling to me and I come.'

"The sainted wife and mother, our sainted sister, lived out her life steadfast in this faith I have declared to you. She knew in her soul that God always speaks to his people in the majestic music of His house and graciously enables them prevailingly to plead with Him. There is eminent fitness, therefore, that such a memorial gift in affectionate remembrance of such a joyous, warm-hearted, singing, ever-faithful Christian woman, should be offered by her husband and her daughter for consecration to the glory and high praise of our God. So, my brother, at their wish and in their names I now present this noble organ to you and to your people. By its tuneful ministry in years to come may it often remind you of the Christian faith and love of the three, so truly one, of her now busied in the service of the upper sanctuary, while the other two join with you still in every good work of your church life. Always may this great instrument of praise speak to you all and prevail with you all for Him who is far lifted above all our praise."

Rev. Mr. Broek in accepting the organ said: "On behalf of the consistory and congregation of this church I accept this beautiful pipe organ from Albert L. Force and his daughter Lillian A. Force. It is becoming that we should express our hearty thanks for this magnificent gift. We appreciate what it means toward the future worship in this church and for that we prize it.

"It is given in memory of one who for twenty-five years was a devoted worker in God's field. She gave her best service to the Master and was constant in her attendance upon the various services. Her life was precious among us and she was loved by us all. But more than that she was precious in the sight of the Master whom she served and adored and it is inspiring that there should be placed to her memory this beautiful instrument. She has gone into the presence of the King and today we realize that for those who mourn her and for those who loved her there awaits a warm welcome from her into the Master's joy.

In his sermon Mr. Broek gave a scholarly epitome of the value of music as an adjunct to the worship of God, declaring that from the beginning of history music had formed a large part in the growth of religion and had been the means of preparing the spirit for the reception of the true salvation.

The musical part of the service was undoubtedly the most impressive ever held in the church; the vocal numbers being especially noteworthy for their splendid execution. Each member of the quartet seemed to have been given added inspiration by the organ, and their singing was marked by a tenderness of expression not often heard. There were few dry eyes in the church while Miss Raybert sang Joseph Roeckel's "He Giveth His Beloved Sleep." She sang with an infinite depth of feeling and brought the silent, sympathetic tear drops glistening on the half closed lids of the listeners. The rendition of Mrs. Force's favorite hymn "If Through Unruffled Seas" was effective and joined in by the congregation.

Organist Titsworth, who has played in Trinity for upward of thirty years handled the new instrument with ease and grace and brought out the Vox Humana and other solo stops with magnificent expression. The new arrangement of the pedal organ, the A. G. O. is difficult for an organist at first, but it may be said that during the few days that Mr. Titsworth had in which to accustom himself to the instrument he must have practiced with assiduity the new arrangement as his playing yesterday morning excited admiration.

Of the new organ, built by the Tallman Organ Company, of Brooklyn, nothing but praise can be said. To those who have heard all the church organs in the city the tone of the new instrument is a revelation. Trinity Reformed may well feel proud of it, as it undoubtedly surpasses many of the other pipe organs in its sweet sonorousness. The builders have produced a lasting monument to their craft. A handsomely engraved gold plate bearing this inscription:

> TO THE PRAISE OF GOD AND IN LOVING MEMORY OF > CLARA M. FORCE
> A DEVOTED WIFE AND MOTHER
> DECEMBER, 1910
> ALBERT L. FORCE LILLIAN A. FORCE

is placed over the keyboard in the center. It is the work of our fellow townsman Robert H. Radford.

The order of service was:

Organ Prelude— (a), "Antienne," Edward Batiste; (b), "Magnificat in D minor," Edmond Lemaigre; doxology, "Old Hundred," Gillaume Franc; sentence, "The Lord is in His Holy Temple," G. F. Field; Scripture; anthem, "Hark! Hark! my Soul," Harry Rowe Shelley; presentation of organ, Rev. Dr. Edward Payson Johnson; acceptance of organ, Rev. John Yonker Broek; dedicatory hymn, 781, 4 verses, "For all the saints who from their labors rest." Service of dedication adapted from the liturgy of the Reformed church.

Prayer, Rev. Dr. Edward Payson Johnson; response, "The Lord's Prayer," Chas. H. Hoyt; hymn 617, "If Through Unruffled Seas,'; offertory, "He Giveth His Beloved Sleep," (Miss Raybert) Joseph Roeckel; offertory prayer; sermon, "The Praises of Zion; anthem, "Sing Alleluia Forth," Dudley Buck; prayer; hymn 776, "The Church's One Foundation;" benediction; organ postlude, "Triumphal March in D," Dudley Buck.

proval of the efforts being made to reconsider his application. One of the ministers who was thought to be in favor of a relicense said that "The saloon is only evil and evil continually" and that he "believed that no favor should be shown the wrong doer, only mercy." The whole purpose of the discussion was to make the resolution strenuous and at the same time, courteous. There was no desire on the part of any minister to approve, in the slightest degree, the saloon evil, as is evident from the resolutions which were heartily and unanimously adopted. The discussion was in private and the conclusions of the meeting were to be presented to the public in the resolutions."

JERSEY CENTRAL WANTS A TUNNEL

Vice President Besler Says Only Obstacle is Attitude of Wm. G. McAdoo.

OFFICIAL HOLDS OUT HOPE.

Government by commission for municipalities had its first hearing in this city last night, when Richard S. Childs, secretary-treasurer of the Short Ballot Organization, of New York, and E. Spencer Miller, a lawyer, and former assistant city solicitor of Philadelphia, spoke before the Chamber of Commerce in its rooms in the Frost building. Preceding these two speakers vice-president and General Manager William G. Besler, of the Jersey Central railroad, and W. C. Hope, general passenger agent of the Central, spoke between courses at the first of the Chamber's monthly banquets at the Waldorf.

Mr. Besler explained why it was that the Central had not built or was not now building a tunnel from its Jersey City terminal to New York, in a formal reply to an inquiry made by the Chamber. He said that he sincerely hoped his company would undertake the work, but that it was practically up to the tunnel building concern whether it ever became a fact. "Barkis is Willin'," he said, "but when the Central tried to get Mr. McAdoo to talk the matter over and suggest plans the tunnel builder was away somewhere and his subordinates were either unwilling or unable to tell why the Central Railroad could not connect with the present tubes. However we hope some day to effect a settlement which will give us and you the tunnel."

Mr. Hope gave out a new thought, at least many of the men present said it was new to them, when he declared that while the Central had no actual traffic competition, there being no other line running through the towns which the Central serves, yet there is tremendous competition by localities which means that the Central must give the best possible service in order to increase its passenger traffic, especially to those seeking suburban residence. By making this service more and more perfect people are attracted to the towns along its line and business increases.

Messrs. Besler and Hope were given a rising vote of thanks on a motion by the secretary, Judge John Ulrich, and at the conclusion of the dinner both speakers listened with apparent interest to the speeches on commission government.

Mr. Childs spoke first, giving clearly the history of the movement from its inception at Galveston in 1901, and its proved success in various other cities since.

Mr. Childs said in part:

"The spread of this movement was begun entirely by accident. Galveston, Tex., after the great flood of 1900 was practically wiped out. So much progressive and constructive work was demanded of the city government that the old system of a board of aldermen and the usual string of independent elective officers broke down. A group of business men petitioned the State government to suspend the local government and replace it temporarily with a commission of five men. This was done, and the whole city was put under the control of five men, three of whom were appointees of the governor. This was where the term "commission" originated, and the name, for want of a better description has stuck to it ever since, although the board is no longer a 'commission' in the true sense of the word at all.

"This commission in Galveston was able to make decisions and get things accomplished in half the time that it took the old board of aldermen to get a resolution referred to a committee. The commission planned and built a sea wall to protect the city against further floods, raised the ground level of a large part of the town, got the city government running again at one-third less annual cost, made a number of important improvements and at the same time reduced the debt and the tax rate.

"It is no easy matter to prove conclusively and in true scientific fashion that one city is better governed than another. Nevertheless, despite the difficulty of making comparisons, there is nothing more certain than the fact that whether the commission form of government is the ideal form or not, it is better than the forms of government which preceded it in the various cities.

OIL ON THE STREETS HAS ONE OBJECTION

While the use of oil on the streets has been generally approved by our citizens, there have been some objectionable features connected with it. The latest is the black dirt stored up along many streets between the traveled portion of the roadway and the gutter. Street Commissioner Gavett thinks that this accumulation is a mixture of the oil, the worn out material from the street and the dirt which has fallen on the street and has been absorbed by the oil. On ordinary macadamized streets, the rains wash the latter materials into the brooks but the oil seems to be carted off in the spring.

Serious breaking up of the macadam has occurred on many streets this year, the immediate cause being the alternate thawing and freezing, but the main trouble is lack of stone, some macadam being only about two inches deep.

STATE OFFICERS VISIT ARCANUMITES

In honor of a visitation from State officers of the order, Greenbrook Council, No. 725, Royal Arcanum, conducted a fraternal gathering in its rooms, last night. Fully 150 men were in attendance and included delegations from Fireside Council, of Westfield; Bound Brook Council, of Bound Brook and Plainfield Council,No. 711.

The State officers present were Grand Vice Gegent Arnold, of Trenton; Supreme Deputy Doremeyer, of Orange, and F. C. Gilby, of Westfield.; chairman of the State finance committee. Regent C. W. Hall presided. Addersses were made by the officers and also the regents of Fireside and Bound Brook Councils, George W. Christian and members of the local councils. A smoker was held in conclusion during which refreshments were served.

During the business session of the evening, one candidate was initiated and four applications were received, making ten for the past month. The gathering was arranged and conducted by the entertainment committee composed of William Force, Edward Shearer and William Harper.

FORWARD MOVEMENT MISSIONARY MEETING

One of the largest missionary conventions ever planned for men is to be held on Friday, March 24, in the Marble Collegiate church, Fifth avenue and Twenty-Ninth street, New York. It is a part of the forward movement of men's work in the missionary field and will be under the auspices of the Reformed Church in America.

The plan as outlined by the executive committee of the association is to get together the leading men of the Reformed churches in the Synods of New York and New Brunswick for consideration of the missionary opportunities which are presenting themselves to their denomination in the homeland and on foreign mission fields.

There will be sessions both morning and evening and the secretary of the movement, .H A. Kinports, urges all men members of the Reformed church to attend at least one of the sessions. It costs a dollar to attend the convention and partake of a supper which is to be given at the Aldine club. The dollar includes registration fee and supper. Many members of Trinity Reformed church have signified their intentions of attending the convention.

For City Beautiful.

First steps towards a "city beautiful" are contained in a bill introduced in the House at Trenton last night by Assemblyman Thompson, of Union county. He would require any person or corporation before filing in the county clerk or register's office a map of lots, showing streets, avenues or roads, to submit the plan to the governing body of the municipality for approval. This would prevent the construction of streets that are later found to be too narrow for general use and also of those that would be unsightly because of unusual windings.

Cross-Country Walkers.

Bertram Smith, of East Fifth street, and Benjamin Nicholson, of South Second street, enjoyed a cross-country walk on Sunday to Morristown and return. The pedestrians left Plainfield at 7 o'clock and reached Morristown at 11:30. On the return trip they left Morristown at 1 o'clock and reached home at 6 o'clock. Next Sunday they will walk to Princeton and return.

'MAYOR' ANDERSON REPORTS.

A. Y. M. C. A. and a Public Library Are Planned—May Get Gas Service—Other Innovations There.

Watchung was enlivened last evening through the regular meeting of the North Plainfield Township Improvement Society and in preparation for the annual election of officers which takes place in May President Anderson said he thought it advisable that another executive should be elected to take his place, as by this procedure the views of other members could better be had.

Mr. Anderson said that application had been made for a State road officer to put a curb on ambitious automobile speeders and for another man to act as fire patrol as a preventive of forest fires. These officials to be supplied without cost to the township.

President Anderson reported that the township line question had been held up temporarily owing to the recent accident to the chairman of the Warren Towrship Committee, John Cooper. The Township Committee is ready to go into the matter and will do so as soon as Mr. Cooper recovers.

Suggestions were made that the borough authorities should use every effort to widen Somerset street and to complete Watchung avenue to Mountain avenue. Dr. Moldenke reported that the Public Service Gas Company was being consulted relative to the extension of the gas service. Reports of the fire department were received showing that the department had had four fires, three of which had been successfully coped with and the fourth got beyond control because of lack of water.

It is believed that before long a public library will be established and it is the intention also the establish a branch of the Young Men's Christian Association for the thirty young men of the district. M. H. Cleaves was elected librarian with Francis Bowden as assistant.

BIBLE CLASS CONTEST AT PARK AVENUE CHURCH.

The Volunteer Bible class of the Park Avenue Baptist church, of which Mrs. Gabriel Reid Maguire, is the teacher, met at the home of Mrs. J. S. Pray on East Sixth street, last night, when the contest for new members between the "Blues" and the "Red" was concluded. The "Blues" won out, having secured five new members. As a result the losing side is to give a supper to the winners at the church on March 21. After the supper the winning side will furnish crackers and cheese to the losing side.

There were about thirty-five members and friends of the class present last night and a social hour was enjoyed after the transaction of some business, during which arrangements were made for the supper at the church. This class was organized by Mrs. Maguire and has continued to grow in membership and interest ever since.

FELLOW COUNTRYM.... ACCUSED OF ASSAULT.

A complaint of assault was made before Judge DeMeza this morning by De Nunzio Vico, an Italian barber, an employ of Joseph Tumolo, of 314 Watchung avenue. De Nunzio was formerly employed by Enrico Porcello, of Richmond street. This morning, so De Nunzio alleged, Porcello came into Tumolo's shop and proceeded to beat his former employee and use vile language to him while Tumolo was absent.

DeNunzio said afterwards that he thought the assault was inspired by jealously and that because he had left Porcello's employ a week ago. Porcello will be given a hearing tomorrow morning.

To Improve Property.

Frank H. Smith and Charles H. Hand, who purchased the Vail property on East Second street, near Watchung avenue, have decided to tear down the old structure and erect a modern four-story building on the site, thereby greatly improving the property. The present house is a landmark, having been erected many years ago by the late William Vail.

ALLEGE GAMBLING IN THIS POOL ROOM

Isaac Byram and John Scrugg, both colored, proprietors of a poolrom at 522 West Third street, were arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the City Ciurt this morning, charged with permitting gambling to be done in the room. Scruggs, who pleaded not guilty, will be tried tomorrow morning and Byram, who pleaded guilty, will be sentenced on Thursday.

Bryam, in pleading guilty, said he did so with the proviso that he could make an explanation. The court allowed him to explain and this is what he said: "I do not know that I have been permitting gambling in our place, because all the games I have ever seen played there were purely for sociability and never have they played for money to my knowledge. I would not even allow dice to come in the place and the cad games, so far as I know, were innocent of gambling excepting in so far as soda and cigars were the stakes, which I believe is a common and not a criminal pastime."

In his plea of not guilty, Scruggs said that he spent his time at his employment in Fanwood and hardly ever spent more than an hour in the place at a time and during those hours had never sen any gambling going on. The place is managed by William Moseby, who is employed by Byram and Scruggs.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. LIZZIE MAYALL

The funeral services of Mrs. Lizzie Mayall, wife of Rev. Nelson M. Mayall, pastor of the Baptist church at Stockton, and daughter of Robert McGinnis, of 743 South Second street, will be held at the late home, tomorrow. Mrs. Mayall died on Sunday after a long illness. She was born in Scotland and came to this country when about seven years of age and came here in 1888.

Rev. and Mrs. Mayall resided here for a time after their marriage, Mr. Mayall taking a position in the Pond Machine Tool Works, temporarily, until he received a call to Stockton. Mrs. Mayall is survived by her father who lives here; also one sister, Mrs. Robina King, of Newport, R. I., and two brothers, John M. McGinnis, of Providence, R. I., and Matthew McGinnis, of Trenton.

Apgar broke 240 out of 250 targets, fifty each day, his nearest competitor being Lester German, the one-time baseball player with the Giants, who made a score of 233.

Owing to the illness of Rev. J. O. McKelvey, Rev. C. L. Goodrich was in charge of the first Lenten service at the Y. W. C. A. last night. His subject was "Christ as Master," and was heard by a good-sized gathering. The meeting next Monday night will be led by Rev. George A. Warner, whose subject will be "Christ as Teacher."

Police Board Ordinance for Licensing Pool and Billiard Rooms.

CITY JUDGE'S SUGGESTION.

DeMeza Makes Recommendations—Release by 'Phone Order—Bikes for Cops—More Patrolmen Soon.

Believing that the licensing of pool and billiard parlors of the city and placing them under police regulations will conserve the best interests of the city, the councilmanic police board at its meeting, last night, decided upon such action. Councilman Holt, a member of the board, was authorized to draft a suitable ordinance covering the matter and present the same at a meeting of the Common Council for adoption. The license fee decided upon was $50. At first it was suggested that it be made $100, but in the opinion of other members this was considered too high.

City Judge William G. DeMeza appeared before the board and suggested certain changes, also requesting that an officer be designated for duty in the court room during the session of court. This was considered favorably and the request will be carried out according to a resolution adopted.

The board favored the idea of having Sergeant Herbert L. Overbaugh on duty at headquarters during the day form 8 to 12 o'clock in the morning and from 1 to 6 o'clock in the afternoon, believing that a sergeant should be on duty there during those hours. At present the sergeant's hours are from 12 noon to 10 o'clock at night, he being outside most of the time.

The board had a lengthy discussion regarding the suggestion of both Mayor Moy and Judge DeMeza, that prisoners arrested for trivial offenses which would come under the head of violations of the city ordinances, be released on telephone or written order.

Some of the members thought that this might lead to trouble, that sometime a prisoner might be released by mistake. Mr. Moy made a strong plea for favorable action, explaining that often times there were cases of such a trivial nature, including boys, ordinary cases of intoxication, etc., where an accused person could be released on a telephone order and told to appear later. The Mayor was supported in his contention by Judge DeMeza, adding that it was often a great inconvenience, especially at night and on Sunday to be compelled to go in person to headquarters to release a prisoner, and besides, when either the Mayor or himself happened to be out of the city it would also cause inconvenience.

It was finally agreed that in case of violations of the city ordinances only, release could be secured through telephone order by the Mayor or City Judge, it being understood that the telephone is the recognized means of communication.

Councilman C. C. Randolph brought up the question of securing bids for six bicycles for use in the department, and the Mayor will consider the matter. The board believes that through the use of the bicycle the outlaying districts can be covered better and more efficiently.

The question of authorizing the officers in charge of headquarters to accept fines for the release of a prisoner, when the city judge or Mayor is not available, was discussed and the Common Council will be requested to give such authority.

Mayor Moy stated that in accordance with an order given at the last police board meeting, Chief Kiely had furnished himself and Charles C. Randolph with keys to his private office, but that Judge DeMeza had not yet received a key as instructed.

Nothing was done regarding Thomas O'Gorman, who is still doing work at headquarters, the board deciding to wait until another man is selected for his position. O'Gorman is no longer a special and has no authority. The Mayor referred to Charles Sheldon, colored, who has been appointed a special, also an Italian, who has applied for a place on the force. The Italian, it is said, did police duty in Italy and is a promising candidate. Both Sheldon and the Italian will be requested to attend the next meeting for inspection and examination.

It was Mr. Holt's opinion that there should be a re-arrangement of the posts of the city and other details changed so as to bring the department strictly up-to-date. It is possible that two or three new men will be appointed this year if a sufficient sum for the purpose can be secured from the Common Council. There was no question but that the extra men is needed to properly protect the city. President R. I. Tolles attended the meeting, it being his first appearance since his accident.

ST. MARY COLLEGE BENEFIT'S PROGRAM

So much interest has been manifested in the coming benefit for Mount St. Mary College which is to be held in the Plainfield theatre on Friday evening that the committee in charge have deemed it advisable to announce the program for that evening so as to prevent any misunderstanding as to the theatre date.

It was announced this morning by the committee that the following artists would positively appear: Maggie Cline, the Irish queen; Ross and Fenton, in a society travesty; McMahon and Chapelle, comedy sketch; Mlle. Bruguiere, in grand opera selections; Hill and Sylvanie, in their famous acrobatic stunts; Farley and Claire, dancers; the Frenzi Troupe, in musical comedy; Roberts, Hayes and Roberts, in comedy sketch, and the Sylvester Trio, in a specialty act.

DENNIS CARNEY DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Dennis Carney, one of the best known residents i. the east end, died in Muhlenberg Hospital at noon today after a long illness. He had been at the institution since last September undergoing treatment for a cancerous growth. His condition had been hopeless for several months.

Mr. Carney was a native of Ireland, but had lived in this city nearly all his life. He was originally a stone-layer, but gave up the work to enter the employ of the old Plainfield Gas Company and remained with it until the Public Service Corporation assumed control. Since then he had been a member of Commissioner Gavett's street force.

Mr. Carney was at one time a justice of the peace and because of this office he was known for years as the "Mayor of Cottage place," being a resident of that street. His advice was frequently sought on legal matters and as a rule always followed. He enjoyed the respect of his neighbors and by his genial and witty disposition made friends in every part of the city. He was about seventy years old.

Mr. Carney is survived by his wife, one son, John Carney, of East Fourth street, and a granddaughter, Miss Mary Carney.

BOUND BROOK'S ATTEMPT FAILS

Its Measure to Block Borough's Sewage Disposal Plans Dies in Senate.

BILL ADVERSELY REPORTED.

Bound Brook's citizens' committee got a severe jolt at the session of the State Senate at Trenton last night when its measure to prevent North Plainfield installing its proposed sewage disposal system at Greenbrook was reported adversely. While there is weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth at Bound Brook, there is rejoicing over glad tidings in North Plainfield for the action in "turning down" the proposed law means that the later borough will be permitted to consummate its plans for sanitation.

After the Senate clerk had announced that Senate bill, No. 41, the measure in question, was reported without recommendation, State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of Somerset county, arose to make a statement, as requested by some of his colleagues. He read a concise report of the committee's findings, the gist of which was that the committeemen unanimously looked with disfavor on the bill as an effort to stop the wheels of progress by preventing North Plainfield from making provision for the health of that community. He said that able men in that borough had given their time and money in an effort to solve the sewage disposal problem and that the very health of the inhabitants is continually threatened by the absence of any proper sanitary sewage disposal method. The borough, at a special election, had appropriated $100,000 for the installation of such a system and the committee had obtained a suitable location for the plant in the most remote section of North Plainfield township.

Every act of the North Plainfield committee, he said,had been reported by that body to the State Board of Health and had met with no objection from that source. It would not only be a hardship but an injustice to North Plainfield at this date to undo all its work by shoving through the Legislature a bill whose consequence would be so disastrous. Proper weight had been given, he added, to Bound Brook's objections, which were not only tardy but not sound.

Consent had been obtained from North Plainfield township, the senator said, and North Plainfield is now being held up. Every law on the statute books had been conformed to by North Plainfield and it should not be subjected to new tribulations.

It is reported that an effort will be made now by the Bound Brook citizens' committee to have a similar bill introduced in the Assembly. Assemblyman LaMonte, of Somerset, it is reported, takes the same firm stand that Senator Frelinghuysen does and it is considered as extremely improbable that the Assembly can be persuaded to enact the measure. Even if it does, the Senate, it is said, will not concur.

Senate bill, No. 41, prohibited any municipality from erecting or operating a sewage disposal plant without the consent of the State Board of Health.

Among those who listened to Senator Frelinghuysen's statement were William J. Buttfield, chairman of the North Plainfield sewage disposal committee and Mayor N. B. Smalley. Mr. Buttfield has notified the State Board of Health of the Senate committee's action.

WANT AUTOISTS TO BE CAREFUL WITH MATCHES.

An appeal to motorists in New Jersey to aid in the work of preventing forest fires was made yesterday by State Motor Vehicle Commissioner J. B. R. Smith. In it Mr. Smith said:

"Alfred Gaskill, the New Jersey State Forester, has called attention of the motorvehicle department to a considerable number of forest fires which have been traced to automobilists who have either thrown burning matches into the brush along the roadside, or have left unextinguished camp fires which they have started. Of course, it can hardly be conceived that any automobilist would wilfully be engaged in such practice, and whatever serious results have accrued from it have been caused by thoughtlessness.

"I would accordingly suggest that motorists when traveling through wooded country would give this matter earnest thought, especially with reference to throwing aside burning matches before they have been extinguished."

We WANT COMPETITION

of the Right Sort, Not the Following Kind!

A Mrs. S—— after selecting her outfit and learning the total cost from our plainly marked price tags, said she preferred to make comparisons elsewhere before ordering, to which we readily agreed, for it's a thing we always URGE!

On getting another store's prices (where they were marked in private signs) she found ours were far less, and SAID so. The salesman promptly dropped to our figures—AND GOT THE ORDER.

Here, where there's but ONE PLAINLY MARKED PRICE ON EVERY ITEM, such an "accommodating" and sudden price drop would be impossible—here, when you read the price tag, you KNOW it's already at lowest point, for ALL prices are made and REMAIN on the SAME UNIFORMLY SMALL PROFIT BASIS. We don't HAVE to run a "leader" here and there for an hour, or a day, to catch trade, as ALL lines are equally good values EVERY day in the year!

All we want is HONEST competition that meet OUR plainly marked prices WITH prices you can READ!

ISN'T THAT FAIR?

EASY CREDIT 6 months, 1 year, or 1½ year's time to pay—or 10 per cent off for cash.

EVERY PRICE MARKED IN PLAIN FIGURES.
